A Godstone, Surrey, England, lady has just recovered her wedding ring, which disappeared five or six years ago while she was feeding a calf.

It was thought the animal had swallowed the ring, and as it could not be found the calf became known as "the golden cow."

A few days ago the cow was purchased and killed by an Oxford butcher, who, being informed of the lost ring, made a search, and discovered the ring embedded in an internal organ. The ring has been restored to the owner.

"Ad." Was Misleading.

An advertisement published in a Manchester, England, paper aroused much indignation, it is said, among its readers. It was as follows: "A German wanted; experienced. Apply——." The manager of the firm concerned, which operates a bleaching and dyeing plant, explained that the advertisement should have read: "Agerman wanted," etc. "We certainly don't want a German," he said. "An agerman is a worker in charge of a machine which fixes colors."

Through the Looking Glass

By EVELYN NESBIT

Why does the farmer no longer dig up his fields with a spade? Why does the builder no longer make his own bricks of straw? Why don't we walk from New York to Washington?

Why? Because we have improved. Men are too clever to waste their time and energy making pins by hand or splitting rails with an ax the way Abraham Lincoln did. Labor saving machinery has been devised to release men's energies for better things. The men who used to pound out nails with a hammer, and turn out one nail in five minutes, are tending machines that produce thousands of nails in the time they could make one nail by hand.

So it is with everything in industry. That is why the modern farmer can cultivate thousands of acres of land in the time he used to spend on his tiny back yard; why the builder can construct skyscrapers instead of little houses, and why we travel from New York to Washington in speeding express trains.

That is why the women of today are learning and thinking.

Labor-saving machinery has crept into the home to make possible for every woman leisure hours in which to read and study. Any woman who does not avail herself of the new devices is as foolish as the carpenter would be to cut down trees and saw them by hand into boards before he set to work to build a cottage.

Put a fireless cooker into your kitchen. Make use of electricity the way men do in industry, and see how much more you will be able to accomplish with less effort. Get vacuum cleaners to save your backs. Get an electric washing machine to save your hands for piano playing. Stop kneading dough and get a bread mixer. Electric irons, power sewing machines, were not invented as a luxury. They are here to help women. Use them. Be as progressive as the blacksmiths and the pin makers.

Dependability.

The ability to be dependable gathers up all the flowers of virtue in the human soul and brings their essence into daily use. It turns the watchdog into a spiritual companion, and paints the most humble heart with lines of beauty.

It's the Truth That Hurts.

An item is going the rounds of the Canadian press to the effect that a New York state paper is being sued because a comp made an obituary conclude, "May he roast in peace!"—Fourth Estate.

When a shoe becomes scarred or a piece is scuffed up from walking on rough ground, apply fresh mucilage and press down firmly with finger. After polishing you can't discover the rent.

A Classic.

There Are Furs and Furs.

In considering the romance of furs one thinks always of the wild, free life of the woodland, but the common alley cat of the cities could tell a different story.

THEY ACTED in TIME

During 1917, twenty men, all hale and hearty insured their lives in the Sun Life of Canada All paid the first premium, none lived to pay the second.

They paid a total of $5078.26 and their beneficiaries received $74,212.60.

The records for 1918, owing to the ravages of the "Flu," will show the above record repeated many times, and all such acted in time.

CALL GOES FORTH FOR WOMEN TO HELP ON ONTARIO FARMS

Need is Almost as Insistent as it Was Last Year—Chance For Peterborough's Patriotic Ladies to Come to Rescue Again.

A number of patriotic young girls left their comfortable homes last summer in answer to the call for help on the farms. The Niagara fruit district was the objective of most of these although Peterborough was represented in all parts of the province and in every department of farming, house work included. From a financial standpoint this was nothing in the venture but those who left the city for the country had no thought of gain. Their action was a part of the war work in which so many Canadian women engaged.

There is still need for help on the farms and the branch of the public service is conducted by the Women's Section of the Ontario Government Employment Bureau and the co-operation of the Y W C A has again been secured. Women are wanted on fruit and vegetable farms; in girls' camps as cooks and assistants; on mixed and dairy farms; in the farmhouses, to help feed those who are raising the crops.

All workers must be over 18 years of age.

Workers are needed from April to October. Extra workers may be required for harvest time. Some will be needed the year round.

On mixed and dairy farms most of the workers will live at the farm houses, though in some cases girls are required in large enough numbers to warrant the opening of a camp, in which case the camp will be supervised as last year.

All workers housed in private houses may be required to do two hours of work in the farm house. This work should not be in addition to a nine hour day out of doors.

The minimum wages will be at least $20.00 a month and board. Last year girls on farms earned $20.00 to $40.00 a month. One girl earned $50.00 for the last two months.

Workers in the Farmhouse.

If the crops are to be put in and harvested, the workers must be fed. Volunteers are urgently called for to help in the farm kitchens, especially during the busy months of July, August, and September. Many farmers cannot hire more farm help unless they can get assistance in the house. There is no more important part than this to be played in food production.

Women with children can be placed for this work in limited numbers.

How to Get Help.

Farmers in need of this class of help should apply to the director of Women's Farm Work Ontario Government Employment Bureau, 43 King Street West, Toronto, or to the nearest Ontario Government Employment Bureau. Girls are sent out either singly or in groups of two to one hundred.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darken's Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Color and Lustre at Once

Common garden sage, brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, a large bottle at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

REVIVAL SERVICES TO BE CONTINUED THIS WEEK

Evangelist and Mrs. Torrie, by Special Request, Remain at Park Street Baptist Church Until Wednesday Evening.

The highest compliment that could be paid to the community that is secured by the Park Street Baptist Church is the say of it that it is probably the most unlikely field in the entire city for a revival campaign, little necessity for an awakening existing. Still there is always room for such effort, and Evangelist Torrie who began special services there a week ago, is meeting with a greater degree of success than was ever hoped for, a number of converts having been secured as a result of his labors.

It was announced last week that the special services would close last night, but the meetings have been so successful, the attendance steadily increasing and the results of the appeals meeting with so many responses, that it has been decided to continue them until Wednesday evening. This was decided by an unanimous vote of the large congregation that was at the church last night and to whom the question was left. Mr. Torrie begins a series of meetings in Montreal next Sunday and later this week he has an appointment in Toronto so that it would be impossible for him to remain here longer than Wednesday night.

Evangelist Torrie is a revivalist with a reputation both in Canada and the United States. He is a powerful and earnest speaker, and besides is an accomplished vocalist, leading in all the congregational singing, in which the Billy Sunday collection of campaign songs is used. He certainly does not spare himself, but throws a vast amount of energy into his work. His wife, who is a sister of Mrs. (Rev.) D. Brown, wife of the popular pastor of the church, is a worthy co-worker with her husband and takes a prominent part in the musical service, her renditions being equal to those of any church soloist in the city.

In his discourse last night Mr. Torrie contracted the lives of two main figures in Bible story, Pilate, the faulty, and Christ the faultless man. The official who passed judgment on the Saviour of the world lacked the power to say no when the occasion arose and his crime was the result of his weak compromise. In this connection Mr. Torrie spoke of the churches that cannot say no to the idea of raising money by tea meetings oyster suppers and pew renting and gave this as one reason why so many congregations are today devoid of spiritual power.

WHAT COUNCIL WILL OFFER MEN

FORTY CENTS AN HOUR TO BE WAGES OF CIVIC LABORERS.

The corporation laborers are not out on strike today for increased wages as anticipated but await action of council tonight.

It is understood, however, that the City Fathers do not take kindly to the laborers' concession of but 5c an hour, and that a resolution will be submitted to tonight's regular session that the city pay its laborers 40c the hour.

WESTERN WHEAT FOR OVERSEAS

ABOUT FIFTEEN MILLION BUSHELS WILL BE SENT TO THE ALLIES.

Winnipeg, May 5.—Western Canada's wheat crop residue from last year, amounting to about fifteen million bushels, will be ground into flour speedily and shipped to Great Britain and her allies, it is announced authoritatively. Much of this wheat will be ground in Western Mills, it was declared. The wheat will be purchased at the fixed price of $2.24½ per bushel, which will continue in effect until September 1.

CITY WORKERS AND FARMERS

ARE ADVISED TO GET CLOSER TOGETHER BY W. C. GOOD.

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 5.—W. C. Good, a leader in the United Farmers' movement, addressing the Open Forum Sunday, advocated farmers and laboring men in cities getting together and coming to an agreement on questions which vitally affect both, instead of the votes of the one class neutralizing those of the other. He said also the Church might well take up some of the social and economic questions which are creating dissatisfaction, and bring about a solution.

Discussing party politics, Mr. Good said there had been a most extraordinary breaking away from party ties in rural districts. Farmers, Grits and Tories have got together and decided on the solution of questions affecting them, with the result that party politics now has almost disappeared among the farming class. This prevented one political party from playing one half the farmers against the other half.

An all-day search of the ruins failed to bring to light any additional fatalities in connection with the fire that totally destroyed the Sydney Hotel, at Sydney, N.S. No trace of the missing manager John I. Robinson has been found.

TEACHING JOBS FOR VETERANS

MINISTER OF EDUCATION IN SASKATCHEWAN PROVIDES NEW SCHOOL REGULATION.

The Minister of Education in Saskatchewan is encouraging returned soldiers to become teachers.

In order to enable them to enter upon a fairly remunerative line of work, even though it may be only for a temporary period, he announces that the Saskatchewan soldiers who wish to engage in teaching will be permitted to do so, provided they have satisfactory academic standing.

Soldiers holding at least third class diplomas or equivalent standing will upon submitting a certificate of honorable discharge, be granted provisional certificates valid in any rural school in the Province for a year.

Furthermore, if the Inspector's report on their work in the schoolroom is satisfactory, these soldiers will be granted permanent teaching certificates without being required to attend the Provincial Normal School.

At Saskatchewan teacher, who holds a teacher's certificate of the first, second or third class, will upon submitting to the department his certificate of honorable discharge be granted a permanent certificate of the same class.

No registration fee will be charged in any case, and those who have already paid the fee will have it remitted.

Britain's Lost Tonnage.

Archibald Hurd's table of shipping losses makes possible interesting comparisons. The total sinkings reach almost 13,250,000 tons gross, of which Great Britain's share is 9,050,000. Translated into deadweight tonnage, the total loss would be roughly 21,500,000 tons, and Great Britain's share of it about 14,750,000 tons—this against a total merchant tonnage, when the war began of 73,640,000 tons for the world.

In outright sinkings, Britain has lost about a fifth of the world's tonnage, and more than eight times as much as Norway; more than 11 times as much as France or Italy; 17 times as much as the United States, and almost 40 times as much as Holland. But in computing the net deficit, due to the war, it is usual to include an estimate of about 15,000,000 deadweight tons that would have been built above all losses if the war had not occurred, and Britain's share of the world's shipbuilding varied in 1911-1913 between 58 and 68 per cent. It is easy to understand why Great Britain should be troubled, why Hurd and others should urge hurried rebuilding, and why a heavy bill to Germany should be talked of.

Many Dr. Johnsons.

A seeker after knowledge asked the young woman behind the desk in a public library for Boswell's "Life of Dr. Johnson." She catechised him as to what Dr. Johnson's first name was—and how did Boswell spell his name and what were his initials. Then she confided with a charming smile that she wanted to be sure. "There are so many Dr. Johnsons, you know," was her final comment.

A Repeater.

"You are the manager here, eh? Well two years ago I dined here, and, being unable to pay, you kicked me out."

It Couldn't Be Done.

There was a hard boiled sergeant who delighted in "picking on" the men just from civilian life. One day he was giving the command "Right dress," and one of the fellows was napping and did not do as commanded, after the sergeant had called it out several times. Then the sergeant was furious and shouted to the fellow; "Hey, you, dress right!" And somebody else hollered: "How can you dress right on $30 a month?"

Two Things Seemed Evident.

An Irishman was brought up for stealing ducks. The evidence against him was overwhelming, yet witnesses followed on each other's heels to testify to his white and blameless life and his stainless character. "Gentlemen of the Jury:" the judge summed up, "I think you will agree with me that the prisoner stole the ducks, and that he is the most popular man in the county."

Paths of Democracy.

To accustom oneself to disregard the accidents of manner and station sufficiently to see the man as he is, to have a clear sight for genuine character under any of the disguises of unfamiliarity and prejudice, to know how simple and how common are the elements that go to the making of manhood, are the paths that lead to belief in democracy.—George E. LONDON TO ORIENT.

A Probable Railroad Journey of the Future.

"Take your seats, please, for the Jerusalem express." Those who live long enough to see the Channel tunnel undoubtedly will hear this direction to travelers proclaimed by the railway guards of the future on the platform at Charing Cross or whatever may be the station that in ten years time will have taken the place of Charing Cross. And long before these things have come to pass travelers will have become familiar with the French equivalent for the direction from the lips of French railway guards in Paris, for it is hoped, even before the end of this year, to run a direct service from France to the Holy Land with connections at London, Calais and Boulogne.

The first step toward this great event will be the re-establishment this summer of the Orient Express from Paris to Constantinople. Before the war, it was recalled by H. M. Snow, agent-general for the International Sleeping Car Company, the Orient Express ran from Paris through Strasburg, Munich, Vienna, Budapest and Sofia to Constantinople.

"At Strasburg," he said, "we were in the enemy's country, and when the war broke out all our immense rolling stock as well as that of other services was seized. The notorious Balkan Jug, run by the Germans, was nothing more or less than our Orient Express. The Germans stripped the coaches of their bronze inscriptions and coast of arms and substituted the German eagle. On the declaration of the armistice with Bulgaria the Balkan Jug stopped running.

"The great difference when the service is resumed will be that this time it will not touch German territory. From Paris either the Mont Cenis or the Simplon route will be taken to Milan, thence through Venice, Trieste, Agram, Nish and Sofia to Constantinople, with a section running from Nish to Uskub, Salonica and Carissa to Athens.

"At first the trains will run comparatively slowly. Before the war it took approximately 74 hours to get from London to Constantinople. When the conditions become normal again I do not think the time by the new route will be quite so long. From Nish to Salonica and Athens, which geographically is about the same distance as that from Nish to Constantinople, the journey should be about 24 hours.

"The re-establishment of the Orient Express has been on the tapis for some time, and I hope by the time peace is signed the arrangements so far as the service to Constantinople and Athens are concerned will be practically complete. At the outset the express will run two or three times a week in each direction.

"I have no doubt we shall afterward extend the service to Bagdad and Jerusalem, and there is no reason why we should not link up with our existing Egyptian services. For the Jerusalem service the Bosphorus would have to be crossed by steamer, and the express would run from Haida Pasha station, on the Asiatic side, through Aleppo and Damascus, and eventually go on from Jerusalem to Kantara, the Sues Canal and Cairo.

"In addition to the Orient Express we had a large number of internal services, not only in Turkey, but also in Bulgaria and Roumania, and so on. They will be resumed. One section of the Orient Express which was detached from the main service at Budapest, ran to Bucharest and Constanza, where the Roumanian Government steamers were taken to Constantinople. It afforded a pleasant alternative route, and that also will be re-established.

"At the present moment," Mr. Snow added, "we are running services from Rome to Venice and Italy, and from Paris to Mayence, of course, from Paris to Brussels and to Lille."

NEW INDUSTRY FOR BREWERS

THOSE IN UNITED STATES TO BEGIN MANUFACTURE OF CANDY.

New York, May 5.—Basing their belief on an increased consumption of candy during the prohibition era on the physiological action of sugar being turned into alcohol in the human system, candy manufacturers are preparing to greatly change their output. Some brewery plants are to be turned into candy factories. The known plants for candy factory buildings and extensions are said to involve $5,000,000.

From booze to bonbons, from cocktails to candy, from champagne to chocolate, may seem a long hark and yet that is what many Brooklyn and Long Island City manufacturers of sweets are planning to provide for in preparation for the demand anticipated for their wares after July 1.

Breweries, instead of frothy beer, will turn out quantities of frothy chocolate kisses and other confections.

The Diara Chocolate Co., and the Pirika Chocolate Co., have arranged for factories running into the hundreds of thousands in cost and many candy manufacturers are planning extensions of their present factory buildings and extensions were said to involve an expenditure of more than $5,000,000.

It was learned yesterday that the Ulmer Brewery building in Brooklyn has been taken under a long lease contract by the Select Candy Co. A $2,000,000 candy factory is to be built in Long Island City, for the American Chicle Co. and Loft & Co. will build a five story factory in the same locality which will cost upward of $500,000.

THE GODS OF MARS

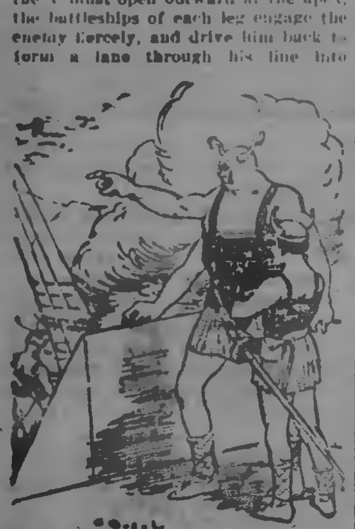
By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"The thern spies [illegible] the palace of J[illegible] for nothing," said Kantos Kan [illegible]. "Your orders, prince."

"Dispatch ten battleships to guard the entrance to Omean, with orders to let no hostile vessel enter or leave the shaft. That will bottle up the great fleet of the Black Pirates."

"Form the balance of the battleships into a great V, with the apex pointing directly south-southeast. Order the transports, surrounded by their convoys, to follow closely in the wake of the battleships until the point of the V has entered the enemy's line; then the V must open outward at the apex, the battleships of each leg engage the enemy fiercely, and drive him back to form a lane through his line into which the transports, with their convoys, must race at top speed that they may gain a position above the temples and gardens of the therns.



"A great fleet of battleships south-southeast, my prince!" he cried.

"Here let them land and teach the holy therns such a lesson in ferocious warfare as they will not forget for countless ages. It had not been my intention to be distracted from the main issue of the campaign, but we must settle this attack with the therns once and for all or there will be no peace for us while our fleet remains near Dor, and our chances of ever returning to the outer world will be greatly minimized."

Kantos Kan saluted and turned to deliver my instructions to his waiting aides. In an incredibly short space of time the formation of the battleships changed in accordance with my commands, the ten that were to guard the way to Omean were speeding toward their destination, and the troop ships and convoys were closing up in preparation for the spurt through the lane.

The order full speed ahead was given, the fleet sprang through the air like coursing greyhounds, and in another moment the ships of the enemy were in full view. They formed a ragged line as far as the eye could reach in either direction and about three ships deep.

CHAPTER XIV.

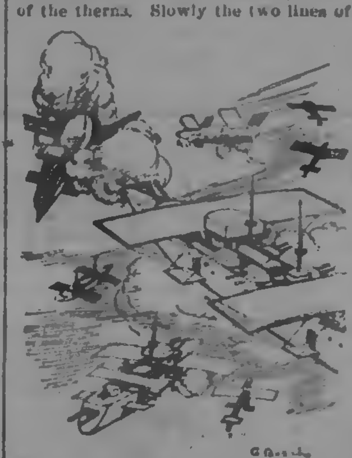
The Air Battle.

So sudden was our onslaught that they had no time to prepare for it. It was as unexpected as lightning from a clear sky.

Every phase of my plan worked splendidly. Our huge ships mowed their way entirely through the line of thern battle craft, then the V opened up and a broad lane appeared, through which the transports leaped toward the temples of the therns, which could now be seen glistening in the sunlight.

By the time the therns had rallied from the attack 100,000 green warriors were already pouring through their courts and gardens, while 150,000 others leaned from low swinging transports to direct their almost uncanny marksmanship upon the thern soldiery that manned the ramparts or attempted to defend the temples.

Now the two great fleets closed in a titanic struggle far above the fiendish din of battle in the gorgeous gardens of the therns. Slowly the two lines of Hellum's battleships joined their ends and then commenced the circling within the line of the enemy which is so marked a characteristic of Barsoomian naval warfare.



Now the Two Great Fleets Closed In a Titanic Struggle.

Round and round in each other's tracks moved the ships under Kantos Kan until at length they formed nearly a perfect circle. By this time they were moving at high speed, so that they presented a difficult target for the enemy.

Broadside after broadside they delivered as each vessel came in line with the ships of the therns. The latter attempted to rush in and break up the formation, but it was like stopping a buzzsaw with a bare hand.

From my position on the deck beside Kantos Kan I saw ship after ship of the enemy take the awful, sickening dive which proclaims its total destruction. Slowly we maneuvered our circle of death until we hung above the gardens, where our green warriors were engaged.

The order was passed down for them to embark. Then they rose slowly to a position within the center of the circle.

In the meantime the therns' fire had practically ceased. They had had enough of us and were only too glad to let us go on our way in peace.

But our escape was not to be encompassed with such ease, for scarcely had we got under way once more in the direction of the entrance to Omean than we saw, far to the north, a great black line topping the horizon. It could be nothing other than a fleet of war.

Whose or whither bound we could not even conjecture. When they had come close enough to make us out at all Kantos Kan's operator received a radio aerogram, which he immediately handed to my companion. He read the thing and handed it to me:

Kantos Kan—Surrender in the name of the jeddak of Helium, for you cannot escape.
ZAT ARRAS.

The therns must have caught and translated the message almost as soon as did we, for they immediately renewed hostilities when they realized that we were soon to be set upon by other enemies.

Before Zat Arras had approached near enough to fire a shot we were again hotly engaged with the thern fleet, and as soon as he drew near he, too, commenced to pour a terrific fusillade of heavy shot into us. Ship after ship reeled and staggered into uselessness beneath the pitiless fire that we were undergoing.

"The thing could not last much longer. I ordered the transports to descend again into the gardens of the therns.

"Wreak your vengeance to the utmost," was my message to the green allies, "for by night there will be none left to avenge your wrongs."

Presently I saw the ten battleships that had been ordered to hold the shaft of Omean. They were returning at full speed, firing their stern guns almost continuously.

There could be but one explanation. They were being pursued by another hostile fleet. Well, the situation could be no worse. The expedition already was doomed.

No man that had embarked upon it would return across that [illegible]. I wished that I [illegible] Zat [illegible] with my long sword [illegible] before I died. [illegible] caused our failure.

As I watched the oncoming ten I saw their pursuers race swiftly into sight. It was another great fleet; for a moment I could not believe my eyes, but finally I was forced to admit that the most fatal calamity had overtaken the expedition, for the fleet I saw was none other than the fleet of the [illegible] Pirates, that I should have been [illegible] locked up in Omean.

What a series of misfortunes and disasters! What awful fate hovered over me that I should have been so terribly thwarted at every angle of my search for my lost love! Could it be possible that the curse of Issus was upon me; that there was, indeed, some malign divinity in that hideous carcass?

I would not believe it, and, throwing back my shoulders, I ran to the deck below to join my men in repelling boarders from one of the thern craft that had grappled us broadside. In the wild lust of hand to hand combat my old hopefulness returned, and as thern after thern went down beneath my blade I could almost feel that we should win success in the end even from apparent failure.

My presence among the men so greatly inspirited them that they fell upon the luckless whites with such ferocity that within a few moments we had turned the tables upon them, and a second later as we swarmed their own decks I had the satisfaction of seeing their commander take the long leap from the bows of his vessel in token of surrender and defeat.

Then I joined Kantos Kan. He had been watching what had taken place on the deck below, and it seemed to have given him a new thought. Immediately he passed an order to one of his officers, and presently the colors of the Prince of Hellum broke from every point of the flagship.

A great cheer arose from the men of our own ship, a cheer that was taken up by every other vessel of our expedition as they in turn broke my colors from their upper works.

Then Kantos Kan sprang his coup. A signal legible to every sailor of all the fleets engaged in that fierce struggle was strung aloft upon the flagship.

"Men of Hellum for the Prince of Hellum against all his enemies." it read.

Presently my colors broke from one of Zat Arras' ships; then from another and another. On some we could see fierce battles waging between the Zodangan soldiery and the Hellumetic crews, but eventually the colors of the Prince of Hellum floated above every ship that had followed Zat Arras upon our trail. Only his flagship flew them not.

Zat Arras had brought 5,000 [illegible]

The sky was black with the three enormous fleets. It was Hellum against the field now, and the fight had settled to countless individual duels. There could be little or no maneuvering of fleets in that crowded, fire-split sky.

Zat Arras' flagship was close to my own. I could see the thin features of the man from where I stood.

His Zodangan crew was pouring broadside after broadside into us, and we were returning their fire with equal ferocity. Closer and closer came the two vessels until but a few yards intervened. Grapplers and boarders lined the contiguous rails of each. We were preparing for the death struggle with our hated enemy.

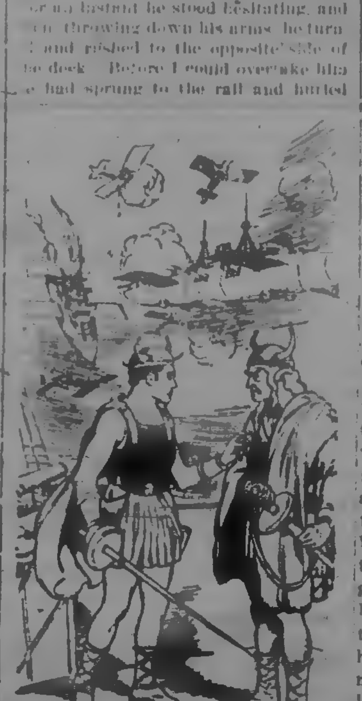
There was but a yard between the two mighty ships as the first grappling irons were hurled. I rushed to the deck to be with my men as they boarded. Just as the vessels came together with a slight shock I forced my way through the lines and was the first to spring to the deck of Zat Arras' ship.

After me poured a yelling, cheering, cursing throng of Hellum's best fighting men. Nothing could withstand them in the fever of battle lust which enthralled them.

Down went the Zodangans before that surging tide of war, and as my men cleared the lower decks I sprang to the forward deck where stood Zat Arras.

"You are my prisoner, Zat Arras," I cried. "Yield and you shall have quarter."

For a moment I could not tell whether he contemplated acceding to my demand or facing me with drawn sword. For an instant he stood hesitating, and then throwing down his arms he turned and rushed to the opposite side of the deck. Before I could overtake him he had sprung to the rail and hurled himself headforemost into the awful depths below.



"You are my prisoner, Zat Arras!" cried.

Thus went Zat Arras, jed of Zodanga, to his end.

On and on went that strange battle. The therns and blacks had not combined against us. Wherever thern ship met ship of the Black Pirates was a battle royal, and in this I thought I saw our salvation. Wherever messages could be passed between us that could not be intercepted by our enemies I passed the word that all our vessels were to withdraw from the fight as rapidly as possible, taking a position to the west and south of the combatants. I also sent an air scout to the fighting green men in the gardens below to re-embark and to the transports to join us.

My commanders were further instructed that when engaged with an enemy to draw him as rapidly as possible toward a ship of his hereditary foemen and by careful maneuvering to force the two to engage, thus leaving himself free to withdraw.

TOO FAT TO FIGHT REX BEACH'S BEST

SEE PICTURES AND ALL-STAR VAUDEVILLE AT GRAND TO-DAY, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY.

Rex Beach's best is "Too Fat To Fight," in addition to the all-star vaudeville program, at the Grand to-night, Tuesday and Wednesday.

"Too Fat To Fight," the Rex Beach picture produced for Goldwyn, comes to the Grand Theatre for tonight, Tuesday and Wednesday, with Frank McIntyre in the featured role. The combination of Rex Beach as the author of a patriotic drama and the acting of Frank McIntyre is sure to make a sensation.

Rex Beach has cast Frank McIntyre for the role of Norman Dalrmyple, a former football star, now known as "Dimples" because of his excessive fat. He is laughed at by his friends and goodnaturedly scorned by Helen Brewster, the girl he loves. Every branch of the service has turned poor "Dimples" down, and "too fat to fight" has come to mean worse than death to him. "I'd give a leg if I could be over there with the boys," he says.

Finally a man who is raising a million dollars for the Y. M. C. A. is instrumental in getting "Dimples" into that splendid work. He proves himself a hero every minute of the long days and nights. Then he remembers nothing until a French officer stoops to pin a decoration on his expansive bosom as he lies in a base hospital.

In addition to this great picture the vaudeville will be one of the best to visit Peterboro, headed by T. D. Pepple and M. Greenwald, radium of splendor. "The Revue De Vogues" There is no other act in vaudeville of like kind. This can be accounted for by the lavishness displayed by the superproducers. The scenery comprises thirteen different changes and the original Chicago Company of 12 people, as the title would indicate the costumes are actually the latest creation on sartorial art.

As an added attraction Ella La Vall, the wonder aerial artist, will close the program. Miss La Vall was two years with the great Barnum and Bailey Circus, and either one of these big acts is worth the price of admission alone. Seats reserved for the evening performance in advance.

MUTT AND JEFF IN WOOLLY WEST

FAMOUS HEROES OF COMIC PICTURES AT GRAND SATURDAY.

Announcement is made that the latest Gus Hill triumph "Mutt & Jeff In the Wooly West," will hold the boards at the Grand Saturday, matinee and evening. In this piece the famous cartoon characters which have set the whole world laughing, will figure in new adventures and escapades sure to increase tenfold their already enviable popularity. This time the mission is to outwit a pair of schemers, an unscrupulous lawyer and his lady fair who try to inveigle little Jeff into an undesirable marriage so that they may confiscate a valuable gold mine. The property which was left to Jeff by his late brothers is to come into his possession provided he marries the widow. Another woman is brought into the breach. She is an old maid. Before the nuptials become binding, however, Jeff discovers the ruse and the base plot is exposed. Prior to the denouncement, the two noted humorists engage in plenty of lively situations which increase with laugh-compelling velocity until the final curtain reaches them. There are any amount of surprises, dances, lilting songs, features original bits complications screams and the other ingredients destined to amuse the grouchiest person on earth. Those who have seen this splendid show declare it to be the best of the Mutt and Jeff series which is something to declare and remember, in view of the many successful vehicles the two have appeared in since they became real stage personages. The company contains a cast of famous entertainers, including one of the most beautiful choruses of girls ever mustered in any single production. Gorgeous costumes, a massive scenic equipment and electrical effect and other novelties are also promised. There will be no advance in the prices and the customary matinee will be held on Saturday.

The words of the silent man are never repeated in court.

"MACUSHLA" IS MODERN PLAY

IRISH DRAMA WITHOUT THE OLD STYLE COSTUMES AND VILLAINS.

At the Grand Friday evening, May 9th, Barry McCormack, the young Irish star will appear in the four-act comedy drama, "Macushla", by Rida Johnson Young, author of "Brown of Harvard," "The Boys of Company B", "The Lottery Man", "Naughty Marietta," "The Girl With the Pennant" and many other successes.

"Macushla" differs from the usual Irish drama in that it is brought up to date. The men do not appear in knee breeches, there is no "informer" to act the villain, the women wear fashionable gowns—and altogether the play is one befitting the year 1919—the year after the great war—when patrons of the drama demand the best there is—life, and jollity and romance, song and thrills—and that is "Macushla."

The hero of Miss Young's comedy is Sir Brian Fitzgerald, who wins the heart of the girl he loves and his paternal estates through the fleetness of his beloved little mare Macushla, but not until after the unfolding of a story that keeps the audience hovering between laughter and suspense. Of course there are songs too for Mr McCormack won his way as a star of the Irish drama by his sweet voice as well as his magnetism and personality. Four of these songs are new to the stage, "She's Irish," "Words From an Irishman's Tongue," "Who Knows?", and "Ireland, You're the Motherland."

The scenery of "Macushla" will bring back sweet memories to all who have been to the Emerald Isle for they are photographic reproductions of spots that are sacred in the memory of Mr McCormack who was born in County Cavan, and who has visited the Mother Country several times since he was brought to America as a baby.

Mr. McCormack, who received his first training on the stage in the support of Melburne McDowell and Fanny Davenport, and who later appeared with Nat Goodwin and Viola Allen and other stars starred for several years in the Irish dramas, "Terence" "The Shaugraun" and "An Irish Gentleman."

Quaint Packing of Eggs.

In many Korean towns one sees piles of eggs outside the shops, done up in straw rolls. This is the Korean method of packing eggs. There are, as a rule, ten eggs in a roll, and the straw casing is so cleverly twisted and so strongly woven that it can be moved without fear of the eggs falling out. A native will lift up a roll, place it across his shoulders and march away, and though the roll may sway dangerously to and fro, its contents always remain intact.

Relic of Long-Past Age.

While cutting peat in the Leithen headwater area, the shepherds unearthed a horn, which may have belonged to Bos primi-genius or Bos longifrons, the wild oxen that roamed over Britain from the glacial age to near historic times. It was found at a depth of four feet from the surface, and the shepherds also averred that there was a small patch of brown hair attached, which is quite probable, as the peat would act as a preservative. —London Mail.

In Accord.

As Smithers, Havana cigar in mouth, came out of an expensive restaurant and started to get into his automobile a creditor held him up.

"I tell you what it is, Mr. Smithers," said the creditor, "you wouldn't go riding round in a fine automobile like that if you paid your debts."

"Ha," said Smithers, "quite right! My point of view exactly! Glad to know you're in agreement with me. The golf club, Alphonse."—Exchange.

"Professors."

A "professor" may mean many things including a conjurer or a dentist. Originally, I believe, a "professor" meant a man who professed to be a converted man or a Christian and so could be called upon to have an unpleasant time for the entertainment of his neighbors. —G. K. Chesterton in Life.

Eternal Curiosity.

"So you think all public entertainments should be censored?"

"Yes, and I'd like to be one of the censors."

"What for?"

"So as to be sure of not missing anything."—Washington Star.

JULES GOUX ARRIVES IN U. S. FOR BIG AUTO RACE

Frenchman Who Served as Artillery Lieutenant Will Take Part in the 500-Mile Event at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 5.—Jules Goux, winner of the 1913 Indianapolis 500-mile race, has arrived in Indianapolis to begin active preparations for campaign to capture premier Laurels in the five-century Liberty Sweepstakes May 31. With him came Albert Prevot, his mechanician in previous 500 mile races. Prevot, however, will not ride with Goux this year, his back having been injured by a high explosive shell while driving a car in the sanitary corps on the Chemin des Dames.

Doux wears a wound stripe also, having been struck by a shell splinter in his left hand during the bombardment of Belfort in 1915, where he was stationed as an artillery lieutenant. He served as artillery lieutenant during the entire war, having fought all over the French front with a battery of 220 millimeter guns, the French heavies.

Quizzed about his views concerning the war, Goux said the struggle was beginning to wear on every Frenchman's nerve toward the end, and America's active participation in the conflict did not come a minute too soon. "It was too long," Goux stated, "considerably longer than a five-hundred-mile race."

This is the first time that Goux has visited Indianapolis since 1914 when he won fourth in the Indianapolis 500-mile race, after having been cheated out of first place by tire trouble. Since then a world war has been fought and won. His companions and his return to this country awakened many tender memories.

In former years Goux was a member of one of the most remarkable racing combinations ever assembled an all-star aggregation noted for its unity of thought between its members. It was composed of Goux, George Boillot, greatest racing driver of all time, Paul Zuccarelli, the gifted Italian who helped design the celebrated Peugeot racing engine, and Johnny Aitken, who watched over the affairs of the foreign delegation in the capacity of coach and mentor.

Zuccarelli met his death while practicing for the Grand Prix at Le Mans, in 1913, bowling squarely into a peasant's cart that appeared suddenly in the road from an opening in a hedge, the driver being deaf and dumb. Boillot's spirit, ascended in a halo of glory when its master essayed unequal combat with five boche aeroplanes in 1915. Aitken succumbed to influenza, and Goux is thus the sole surviving member of the former all-star cast.

Goux brings with him a small 150-cubic-inch Peugeot that he has assigned to Andre Biolot, brother of George Boillot, who is coming over on a later boat. This car, though small is lightning fast and in perfect condition, having never been raced. It was built for the 1914 Le Mans races that were called off due to the outbreak of the war. Goux regards the car so highly that at times he has considered driving it himself though his present purpose is to drive one of the speedway's Peugeot that were campaigned by the late Johnny Aitken.

Goux is dubious regarding the condition of the speedway care, and expects to give them both a thorough overhauling, virtually rebuilding the two car's into one. With this he expects to have an entry that will go through the entire 500-mile grind without the necessity of lifting the hood. Those who remember the care the Goux and his associates bestowed on their cars on their previous visits to Indianapolis, and recall their exquisite mechanical skill, feel certain that Goux will roll to the starting line with a finely groomed racing creation under him that will prove worthy of his best efforts and be in the forefront of the fray from the time the starting gun is fired.

Sporting Gossip

When Jess Willard won the championship title he afforded one of the few exceptions which prove the rule that giants seldom make good in the ring. Willard is a good our inches taller than the most altitudinous of previous American champions. John C. Heenan the delebration Trojan who ought Sayers and King for the world's title half a lentury ago, held the record for height and reach among American champions until Willard's victory.

John Carmel Heenan, immortalized as "the Benicia Boy," was born in Troy, N.Y., 84 years ago on May 3, 1835. At the age of 16 he hit the trail for California, and was employed as a machinist at Benicia, where he floated into the limelight by licking the town bully. In 1858 he forght John Morrissey for the American championship, and was having a soft time of it until he smashed his fist against one of the ring posts, after which Morrissey put him out. John Morrissey refused to fight again, however, and in 1860 Heenan was recognized as the American champion, and went to England to fight Tom Sayers for the championship of the world. The fight ended in a brawl, and both sides claimed the victory, although Heenan was apparently entitled to the honors. Later he was defeated by Tom King, the English champion, but the friends of the Benicia Boy insisted that he had been drugged.

Heenan was advertised as a giant being 6 feet 2 inches in height. No other American champion reached Heenan in height until Willard appeared on the scene. Paddy Ryan was 5 feet 11 inches, and his conqueror John L. Sullivan, half an inch shorter. Jim Corbett was 6 feet 1 inch; Bol Fitzsimmons lacked a quarter of an inch of being 6 feet, and Jim Jeffries is 6 feet 1½ inches, approaching the nearest to Heenan's stature. Johnson is half an inch ofer 6 feet. Tommy Burns is the shortest of modern champions, being only 5 feet 7 inches. The tallest of the American contenders for the title was Ed O'Baldwin, the Irishman who flourished half a century ago, who was 6 feet 5½ inches.

EARLIEST SUBMARINES

HISTORY OF THE UNDER-THE-WATER BOATS.

As Far Back as the Time of Alexander the Great Men Dreamed of Staying Under Water Longer Than Nature Ordinarily Permits —Some of the First Experiments Recalled.

THE idea of the submarine, like that of some other ultra-modern devices, is very old. The necessary materials and the means of realizing their ideas were not in the possession of the early inventors, but some of them did surprisingly well with those at their disposal. In the American Machinist, H. H. Manchester traces the idea of the submarine to the efforts of divers to remain under water longer than nature had furnished them the means of doing. When those efforts took the form of vessels containing air and large enough to hold the diver himself, he may be said to have evolved the germ of a submarine. With some means of propulsion added, even of the rudest form, the resemblance went a good deal further. Mr. Manchester tells us that the romances about Alexander the Great gave free vent to the imagination in describing his exploits beneath the sea, and several of the manuscripts contained pictures illustrating them. He goes on:

"In one of these miniatures, the date of which is about 1520, we see a large glass barrel [illegible] at the [illegible] of the sea and occupied by the King. Chains for lowering and raising the barrel are visible, but there is no sign of any air-tube leading to the surface. While this illustration is very quaint, the idea of a water-tight vessel was a distinct advance, and marks what might be called the first step from diving apparatus to submarine.

"A direct application of this conception was made by Robertus Valturius in 1460. The design he showed was for a boat of the form of a cylinder with a pointed prow and stern. Both the prow and stern were detachable, so that the boat could be easily transported. It was intended for crossing rivers without being seen by the enemy, and for this purpose it was made water-tight all around so that it could be sunk below the surface. Two cranks, which drove two paddle-wheels, were also used to guide the boat. It was said to be capable of holding twelve men for the period necessary to cross a river. The two other designs at the top of the same plate are for different boats, but suggest an approximation to broken screws to be used in driving these vessels or the submarine. In the next century there were several allusions to diving apparatus, including a rigid tube by Leonardo da Vinci, about 1490, and a diving-bell experimented with at Toledo, Spain, in 1538. But leaving diving operations aside, the next notice taken of submarines seems to be the one by Olaus Magnus, the Bishop of Upsula, in his 'History of the North,' published in Latin in 1555. He declares: 'Halfway to Greenland there is found a kind of pirates that use leather boats. By a method of navigation not so much above as below the water, they creep up in ambush and bore holes in the ships of merchants below the pump. I saw two of these leather boats in the year 1505 on the west wall of the cathedral, dedicated to Saint Halvard, and hung up so as to be seen. These boats Haquinas, king of the same country, was reported to have taken while passing near to the coast of Greenland with a fleet of war, when the pirates sought to have drowned his ships. The inhabitants of that country get no small profits by such treacherous acts, through boring holes secretly, as I have said, underneath the sides of ships, letting in the water, and, presently, causing them to sink.'

"Although the text seems a little obscure, this passage may possibly be considered to mark the earliest employment of submersibles.

"The next important advance toward the principles of the submarine was probably made by William Bourne, of England, in 1578, and consisted of the method he proposed for lowering and raising the vessel. His plan was to have the sides of the vessel in part double, but connected by a flexible membrane, such as oiled leather, so that they could be drawn apart or forced together by means of handscrews. There were to be holes in the outer shell of the vessel through which the water would enter when the second shell were drawn inward. This, of course, would sink the vessel. When it was desired to raise the vessel, the screw was used to force the inner shells tight against the outer one and drive out the water. This was a rather clever adaptation of the crude power available in those days for the purpose at hand, and it involved principles of displacement that have been applied ever since.

"A somewhat similar construction was proposed by Magnus Pegelius in 1605, and Lorini in 1609 describes a rigid column and a caisson for submarine work.

"The next noteworthy effort in submarine building was by Cornelius van Drebbel in 1620 and subsequent years. He built several boats for submarine use, which he made water-tight by stretching oiled leather all over the outside. Besides what was then considered the remarkable success of his vessel, Drebbel claimed credit for an even more important invention in 'the composition of a fluid that would speedily restore to the troubled air such a proportion of vital parts as would make it again, for a good while, fit for respiration.' Possibly he had some recipe for releasing oxygen from water, but he died in 1634 without disclosing this part of his secret.

"In 1634 Mersenne proposed a submarine with a metal hull which should be spindle-shaped, so as to allow progress in either direction. His plan was also to have cannon with lids at the mouth which would open at the moment of discharge, and fall back into place immediately afterward.

"A few years after this there came upon the scene a submarine builder who had all the imagination of the most enthusiatsic inventor. This was de Son, who constructed a submarine at Rotterdam in 1653. It was said that with his vessel he guaranteed to destroy a hundred ships in one day."

David Bushnell's "turtle" submarine is familiar to students of American Revolutionary history. In a letter to Thomas Jefferson, Bushnell wrote:

"An oar formed on the principle of the screw was fixed in the forepart of the vessel; its axis entered the vessel, and being turned in one direction rowed the vessel forward, but being turned in the other rowed backward. It was constructed to be turned by the hand or foot."

WILL "DYNAMITE" ORCHARDS

Strange Scheme Suggested to Restore Trees.

The utility of dynamite in restoring the orchards of France to the flourishing and fruitful state they enjoyed before the advent of the Hun has been advanced by Andre Piedallu, and is described as follows in the Scientific American:

"The process consists essentially in using dynamite for the double purpose of breaking up the earth and securing an intimate mixture of the required fertilizers with it. The author had noticed the specially vigorous development of wild plants around the edges of old shell holes and old trenches which had suffered from heavy firing. He attributed this vigor of growth partly to the fissuration of the soil and partly to its impregnation with nitrogenous subjects. This view was supported by some experiments made several years ago in the western part of the United States, in which two-year-old cherry trees planted in holes excavated by dynamite reached the height of three metres (about 10 feet), while similar specimens planted by a spade remained spindling and grew [illegible] half as tall.

"M. Piedallu applies his idea by placing a suitable amount of fertilizer in a container surrounding the explosives, in such a way that the force of the explosion would drive the former into the minute cracks produced, thus forming an ideal medium for the growth of the young tree. The formula of the explosive is not given, but it is stated that it is not affected either by concussion or dampness, is capable of being moulded, is completely free from chlorates (which might injure vegetation), is highly energetic in small volumes, and cannot be detonated except by a fulminating cap. The fertilizers employed are chosen with special reference to the character of the earth and the needs of the tree to be planted.

"The compressed fertilizer moulded around a nucleus of the explosive is placed in the bottom of a tube of celluloid, paper or cardboard. The cylinder of explosive, which contains a cavity for the fulminating charge, is then placed in the top of the tube, the hole being closed by a stopper pierced by a hole through which passes (fitting tightly) a piece of Bickford cord connected with the cap. Both the explosive charge and the mass of fertilizer adjoining it are covered with paraffin. The application of the charge is very simple and is said to save both time and labor. A hole like one used for placing a mine is bored with a pointed stick or iron rod, somewhat larger in diameter than the cartridge. This hole should be 60 centimetres deep (about two feet).

"The explosion produces a spheroidal cavity some 80 centimetres in depth (about 30 inches). The earth absorbs the vapors liberated and the young tree is then placed in the hole and its roots covered with the earth."

Sift Soil of Battlefields.

Much of the metal shells and debris will be removed from the European battlefields as a necessary preliminary to the resumption of peaceful pursuits. The quantity of metal is so great that it would be a source of annoyance, and even of danger, to the tiller of the soil. A systematic sweeping, so to speak, of all the bombarded regions will be necessary.

A French engineering journal describes an apparatus which, though created for this special purpose, can be applied to other uses, for it will indicate the presence of steel and iron not too deeply buried in the soil. This, however, is a slow way to proceed where long continued bombardment has literally filled the soil with metallic fragments. Methods of salvaging are contemplated that involve passing the soil through plants for recovering the metal, and returning the soil to its place leveled and ready for tillage.

It is also pointed out that the concentration of fixed nitrogen in these battlefield soils, resulting from the enormous quantities of explosives used, will make these areas exceptionally fertile.

A Remarkable Flight.

Information regarding a remarkable flight of a German Zeppelin has recently been reported by a British correspondent who learned the facts since the coming of peace. A German airship, it is said, left Bulgaria carrying a crew of twenty-two men, tons of munitions, and medical supplies, bound for German East Africa, which is approximately 3,000 miles from Bulgaria. According to the account, while the ship was flying over Khartoum, it received a wireless message ordering it to return, the Germans having learned that the majority of their troops in their African territory had surrendered.—Popular Mechanics.

Lots of men try to imagine they have poor health when the only thing the matter with them is laziness.

Grand Forks, B. C., May 5.—That the directors of the Christian Community of Doukhobors, in conference with B. F. Patterson, Government representative at Brilliant, B. HUNS OBJECT TO COLONY CLAUSE

WANT OLD ONES BACK OR THE RIGHT TO PURCHASE OTHERS

London, May 5.—Reuter's Limited learns from reliable sources that among the terms of the treaty to which the Germans will offer the most objection is that relating to the surrender of her colonies. They will urge that German East Africa, Togoland and Kamerun be left to her and, upon refusal, will ask to be assigned some part in the future administration of the former German colonies, and that, in any case, Germany shall not be debarred from purchasing some Portuguese colonies at a future date, should Portugal be willing to sell.

Want Saar to Revert

The German delegates will also ask that the Saar area shall revert to Germany after a term of years. They will oppose any proposal to deprive them of sovereignty over the Kiel Canal, while agreeing that it shall be free to the world's commerce. They will oppose any so-called Polish corridor, while guaranteeing to Poland the right of free transit both by rail and by the Vistula to Dantzig, and while opposing any plan to deprive them of sovereignty over the city itself, will agree that portions of Dantzig shall be reserved solely for Polish commerce.

Will Not Appoint A New Alderman

AT TONIGHT'S SESSION OF COUNCIL—ANOTHER DEPUTATION TO OTAWA.

The City Council meets in regular session tonight, but there is not likely to be an appointment made to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Ald. Murray. What it is planned to do is to accept the resignation, prepare a bylaw providing for the appointment, and then defer the matter to a subsequent meeting.

Mayor Duncan and Ald. Phelan, chairman of the Board of Works, will leave for Ottawa tonight to endeavor to secure from the Government a promise of a contribution of $50,000 for the Hunter street bridge regardless of the cost of the structure. When that sum was voted there was an administrative condition that a bridge costing $300,000 be erected.

CITY COUNCIL WILL NOT PAY LABORERS 45 CENTS AN HOUR

Motion That Laborers Get 40c and Carpenters 60c For a Nine Hour Day Passed by the City Fathers—Division Was 5 to 4 Without Including the Mayor—Ald. McIntyre Lines Up With Organized Labor.

The City Fathers last night rejected the laborers' demands for 45c an hour and an eight hour day, by a majority of 5 to 4, his Worship not voting, although he spoke in opposition to the stand taken by the laborers

Council divided on the following resolution by Ald. J. J. Turner and James Hamilton:

That the city pay its laborers 40c an hour for outside work, this scale to remain effective for 12 months commencing May 6th, the wages of elderly employes who cannot compete with younger men to be equitably adjusted, and that the city pay carpenters 60c an hour. Also that a 9 hour day, from 7 to 12 and 1 to 5 be adopted.

Council's division on the above was as follows:

Affirmative — Ald. J. J. Turner, Hamilton, Taylor, Edgar, Phelan.

Negative—Ald. Morrison, Garside, Gainey and McIntyre.

Sparks Fly

Ald. Turner struck the first sparks when he said that labor conditions today are not very bright either for workmen or manufacturers. [illegible] one thing the government is dumping on the market much war material such as varnish, paint, rubber goods, linen, tents, thread, etc., manufactured in readiness for the call of military operations. These are offered at prices which put the manufacturers out of competition unless they sell at cut prices. In many instances goods ordered last year are being cancelled. Ald Turner declared that this is no time to talk increased wages. On the contrary, they should be reduced, if any action is taken, or at least retained at existing scales.

Ald Turner here went on to say that Council cannot recognize any sect or society, but must legislate for the mass of the people. There should be no discrimination in favor of Jew of Gentile, Forester, Oddfellow or any other society or organization.

An Amendment

Ald. Garside here moved in amendment that outside laborers be paid 45c an hour and carpenters 50c. (He subsequently changed the latter proposition to 65c.)

Ald. Garside secured no seconder to his amendment, his labor colleagues differing from him on his suggested carpenters' scale

Ald. Turner admitted that carpenters are entitled to considerably more pay than laborers. They have to furnish their own tools and serve an apprenticeship, which conditions do not apply to laborers.

Get Best out of Men

Ald A. A. McIntyre was strong for the eight hour day, in which employers get the best out of a man —he does not get fagged out, works harder, is more contented and shows increased interest in his duties. The Alderman was strongly in favor of 45 cents an hour for city laborers. "It takes as much," he said, "for a laborer to live as for a $1500 a year salaried man. As things are today a working man is merely existing. The eight hour day is coming soon enough! and you might as well let the men have it now as adopt it later."

His Worship Differs

The Mayor— "My men have an eight hour day and I find them just as anxious to quit as when working nine hours. They have no hesitancy in reaching their job 10 or fifteen minutes later. I pay union wages but I cannot say that I am satisfied with the results." His Worship ad-

TENANTS MUST NOT FIGHT EACH OTHER

TWO WOMEN QUARREL OVER MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE OF FLAT IRONS.

Two women, who live in a house in the Green block, market square—one upstairs, the other down—aired their differences in the Police Court this morning.

The trouble arose over an innocent set of flat irons which mysteriously disappeared, and one word led to another, eventually culminating in a bloody nose, received, according to the evidence, in an equally mysterious manner.

The woman who suffered damage to her nasal organ promptly laid a charge of assault against her downstairs neighbor.

Complainant said defendant struck her on the nose with her fist and brought a female witness in evidence that her nose had shed blood profusely. But witness could not say how the injury had been received.

Defendant swore that on going upstairs to the lavatory on the day in question, complainant stopped her at the foot of the stairs, denied her lavatory privileges, and she (defendant) pushed her with her open hand. She then started to ascend the stairs when complainant caught her by the foot, and in her struggle for freedom the injured nose might have came in contact with her foot. She could not say, but swore positively that she did not strike her opponent in the face.

On reaching the lavatory, defendant found the door tied with a rope and anchored to a stove.

It appears that the lavatory in upstairs in complainant's quarters, and a letter from the landlord was produced in evidence that he had reduced complainant's rent 50c that defendant might have the privilege of using it.

Complainant in the box showed considerable belligerency toward Magistrate Dumble, and denied defendant's story. His Worship replied that he had as much right to give credence to defendant as to complainant, and dismissed the case with the advice that both "be on their good behaviour and live like sensible Christian women."

When the press left the court complainant's tongue was still wagging notwithstanding that court had been adjourned.

AIRSHIPS INFLATED WITH THIS DISCOVERY LIKELY TO BE COMMON.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, May —Prof McClennan, of Toronto University, who was invited by the British Admiralty in 1915, to investigate the possibility of a large scale of production of helium, found large quantities available in natural gas in Ontario and Western Canada, procurable at a cost of a shilling per cubic foot. Thus the possibility of securing large supplies of helium was assured simultaneously with the practical details of production. Airships inflated with helium have been developed by the British navy and progress made warrants the opinion that in another year large quantities of helium will be produced in Canada at a low price and helium filled airships will be in service.

RAISING ONIONS ON HUNTER ST.

RIGHT IN CENTRE OF SIDEWALK, LATEST IN PRODUCTION CAMPAIGN.

Some time ago the city undertook to repair the sidewalk on Hunter street directly in front of the "Hall of Wisdom," where political lore is rampant, where governments are made and unmade, the City Council skinned alive upon occasion, and the affairs of the antion generally shaped and directed. But the repair work was delayed. The small section of the sidewalk that was removed was not replaced, but a young hole was left, exposing the soil. Then some orignal genius among the "Hall of Wisdom" habitues decided to aid the production campaign by utilising the space. Accordingly onions were planted and a placard put up to warn the public to keep off. The place is now one of the curios of the city and will be preserved in local archives, Mr. F. L. Roy having made a photograph of it this morning.

Is Charged With Accepting Bribe

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Brantford, May 6.—Ald. J. H. Harvey Clement, member of the exemption tribunal under the M. S. A., is charged with accepting a bribe of $500 in March, 1918, and $20 per month since, from George Tomlin, to escape being called up. The magistrate will investigate the case Thursday

QUESTION OF CITY'S BANKING ACCOUNT

ALD. PHELAN FATHERS RESOLUTION THAT CITY'S ACCOUNT BE TRANSFERRED.

Ald. Pheland introduced to the city Council last night a resolution that the city's bank account be transferred from the Bank of Toronto to the Bank of Montreal. Ald. Edgar seconded the motion.

Ald. Phelan gave the followin reason for his action:

"Several years ago when the bulk of our street paving was in contemplation by Council to create employment at a period of some little depression the Bank of Toronto, with whom the city was then dealing, refused to grant the accommodation necessary to prosecute the work. The Bank of Montreal, however, came to the city's aid and with the proffer of as much funds as needed at the current rate of interest. (This was a time when money was pretty tight.) The city's account was consequently transferred to the Bank of Montreal which carried it from Sept. 1914 to February 28, 1917. In 1916, an effort made made in Council to secure a transfer again to the Bank of Toronto, which was unsuccessful. But in 1917 this transference was accomplished, which act, Ald Phelan declared to be an act of injustice which in the city's honor should be righted. Hence his resolution. The Utilities Commission, City Trust, Shool Board and Public Library refused to follow the example of the council and still carry their accounts in the Bank of Montreal, concluded the Alderman.

"Ald. Edgar, in seconding the resolution sair he had been very much opposed to the change effected in 1917. The Bank of Montreal came to the City's assistance when no other bank would, and had it not been for that assistance the pavements would not have been laid now.

Ald. McIntyre contended that the transfer in question was not as black as Ald. Phelan made it appear. Tenders for the account were called, and that of the Bank of Toronto was the best proposition. The Bank of Montreal was charging the city a higher rate than the county was paying. "As to helping us out... he said, "There is nothing to it, the bank received a good rate of interest for its loans. There had been no need for excitement and a rushing to Montreal to get the Bank of Montreal's general managements onsent to advance the money needed. The Bank of Toronto would have come to the city's assistance just as well as the Bank of Montreal."

Ald Edgar—"The Bank of Toronto refused the loan wanted and it was not until after the Bank of Montreal had agreed to carry the city's proposed swollen account that the former intimated that they would advance the loan needed."

His Worship "Why was not this question raised earlier in the season before the year's banking requirements had been arranged for? The Bank of Toronto's tender in 1917 was the lowest and it was not until the terms had been made known that the Bank of Montreal came along and consented to meet conditions. That is why I voted against the Bank of Montreal."

Ald. Hamilton and Turner suggested that as the new aldermen knew nothing about the incident the matter go to a Committee of the whole Council. They moved an amendment in this direction which carried and the motion was withdrawn.

CITY EMPLOYEES QUIT WORK TODAY

TWO STREET CLEANERS, HOWEVER, ON THE JOB THIS AFTERNOON.

The city's laborers are out on strike today for 45c an hour and an eight-hour day.

Twenty-three men on the Romaine street sewer are affected, and four street cleaners.

The men are demanding 45c an hour with no gradation for inferior or easier labor.

The five or six men on the Simcoe street surface drainage work are still at their posts; this work will probably be finished today or tomorrow.

Did Not Like Example

Murphy, a city employee, called the men out at 10 o'clock this morning, the city engineer in face of Council's resolution last evening, refusing the Union's demands. Two street cleaners were on their job this afternoon, having refused to strike while the man (Murphy) who called them out stuck to his work of driving a single horse rig for the city.

Wages Paid.

The men were getting $3.50 a day of nine hours. They want $3.60 for eight hours. The five or six street cleaners were graded from $2.47 up, the wages paid a couple of aged men on the policy it was better to employ them than keep them in charity.

These Carpenters Work.

Ex-Mayor Bradburn said this afternoon that the carpenters working for him had expressed their satisfaction at a 60c wage and other conditions. They are working. He also contends that with a reasonable wage in keeping with that paid elsewhere, so that manufacturers could enter into competition, there would, with the bridge, sewage disposal plant and other street improvements, passed by Council, soon be plenty of employment in Peterborough.

Conditions remain unchanged in other striking theatres.

STILL TINKERING WITH THE TREATY

CHARGES LIKELY TO BE MADE UP TO LAST MOMENT.

(From Saturday's Daily)

Paris, May 6.—It developed this afternoon that changes were still being made in the peace treaty and that the changing process probably would be continued up to the last possible moment. It is understood that alterations are largely those of phraseology. Plans for making the treaty public textually are still vague, seemingly the only plan perfected with regard to publicity being a decision to give out a ten-thousand-word digest of the treaty for publication Thursday morning.

SIR ROBT. BORDEN TO HAVE SEAT AT PEACE CONFERENCE

MUNICH HOLDS GAY HOLIDAY

CROWDS JOIN IN CELEBRATING OVERTHROW OF SOVIET GOVERNMENT.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Munich, May 6.—All Munich celebrated the victory over the Soviet government yesterday. The streets were crowded with people who cheered the passing troops or gave them refreshments. Captured Sparticides were hooted as they were escorted through the streets. Bands played national airs outside the palace, and crowds sang patriotic anthems. The Bavarian war ministry will be transferred from Bamberg to Munich, and a resolution dissolving the Bavarian army will be adopted by the cabinet because of the poor work done by the Bavarian troops during the troubles in the city.

Bolsheviki Fall Back Everywhere

ARE BEATEN AT ALL POINTS IN THE VOLGA VALLEY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 6.—Admiral Kolchak's Siberian army continues its movement westward toward the Volga and it is expected that the cities of Viatka and Samara will fall into their hands soon. The Bolshevik forces there are apparently incapable of checking the orderly, well-organized advance from the east with Kolchak threatening the valley of the Volga and Udenitch menacing Petrograd with Kiev in the hands of anti-bolshevik troops, and with Kolchak's northern army moving rapidly toward the line of communication between Moscow and Archangel. The bolshevik military situation seems extremely precarious.

REGRETS RECORD MADE BY QUEBEC

FORTY PER CENT OF THOSE CALLED TO SERVICE DEFAULTED.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, May 6. Reports tabled in the House of Commons by Lieut.-Col. Machin, director of the military service branch, indicate that 112,461 bona fide soldiers were furnished by the M. S. A. out of the 179,933 made available by the Act. Some of the remainder were not called up, and others were excused by the tribunals, while 19,000 reported voluntarily before their classes were called upon. More than 27,000 disobeyed the registrar's orders to report. The number out of every hundred so disobeying was as follows, by provinces: Quebec, 40; Nova Scotia, 17; British Columbia, 10; Saskatchewan, 10; New Brunswick, 9; Ontario, 9; Alberta, 5; Manitoba, 4; P. E. I., 1. Col. Machin, who himself is a French Canadian, refers to Quebec's record as "a most regrettable state of affairs."

THREW CHILDREN INTO FIRE NETS

SEVEN PERSONS IN APARTMENT HOUSE TRAGEDY IN COLUMBUS, OHIO.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Columbus, O., May 6. Seven persons are known to have perished and a dozen were injured, several probably fatally, in a fire which destroyed a six story apartment house in the down town section shortly after midnight this morning. Men, women and children jumped from windows and several children were thrown from the upper floors into fire nets. The damage is estimated at $500,000.

IRISH MEETING IS BROKEN UP

TROOPS CHARGE WITH BAYONETS UPON GATHERING — NUMBER ARE INJURED.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, May 6.—British troops broke up a forbidden meeting a Athlone, Ireland, last night by charging upon the crowd with bayonets. A number of persons were wounded, and armored cars have taken possession of the place. Laurence Ginnell, member of Parliament for West Meath, attempted to address the meeting

Gunboats Active Against Allies

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, May 6 — Advices from Archangel say that activities of the Bolshevik gunboats are increasing, evidently with the object of making strong attacks on the allied positions before the ice clears to permit of assistance to the allies from the British and American gunboats. All assaults so far have been defeated by the allies.

When German Delegates Are Admitted to Hear Ultimatum of Allied Nations.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 6. The complete economic isolation of Germany is being considered by a council of foreign ministers of the Peace Conference as a measure to be adopted in the event of Germany refusing to sign the peace treaty.

Sir Robert Borden There.

Versailles, May 6.—When the German delegates entered the dining-room of the Hotel Trianon on Wednesday afternoon to receive the text of the treaty of peace they will find representatives of the powers arrayed against Germany awaiting them at one of the great tables which have been placed in the room. Premiers Clemenceau and Lloyd George and President Wilson will stand at the head of the table. The Germans will not join the Allied delegates at this time, but will be conducted to a smaller table standing by itself at the open end of the great horseshoe formed by green covered tables arranged for the meeting. There they will listen to M. Clemenceau's opening address and receive the judgment of the allied and associated nations, as formulated in the volume of conditions drawn up during the four months of deliberation by the inter-allied conference. Sir Robert Borden, Premier of Canada, will have a seat at the conference.

JOS. CROWE TRADES AND LABORS' CHOICE TO SUCCEED ALD. MURRAY

Nomination Also Endorsed by Independent Labor Party—Jimmy Gates After His Old Job as Dog Executioner—Mayor Off to Ottawa Re Grant Toward Bridge.

Street Commissioner Harry Evans wrote the city council last evening, asking an increase in salary. He has, he said, been 16 years in the City's employ. Referred to the Board of Works

The Utilities Commission wrote, asking that a pole line be reserved them on the reserve along the water front west. This went to the Legal Committee

The Utilities Commission also asked to be advised if it is the city's intention to pave Water street, from Charlotte street, to King street, as they have some work to do on that roadway.— Referred to the Board of Works.

Kitney's Menagerie

Mr G. N Gordon wrote that as Walter Kitney is establishing a menagerie, at Nichols Oval, in which is included at present a black bear, he thought Council might donate $10 toward building a den and cage for Bruin. The Kitney Menagerie, is of considerable interest to little ones.—Finance Committee.

Sanitary Move

The Board of Health forwarded Council a resolution that all doors of bakers' wagons open at the rear of the vehicle—This went to the Property Committee.

Resignation Accepted

Ald. Alex. Murray's resignation was to hand and was on motion of Aldermen McIntyre and Gainey accepted. Ex-Ald. Murray accompanied his resignation with appreciation of courtesies extended him during his tenure of office and hoped that in future the same fairness and courtesy will be shown all labor aldermen.

Joseph Crowe for Alderman

A resolution from the Trades and Labor Council, endorsing Joseph Crowe as their nominee to fill the aldermanic vacancy created by ex-Ald. Murray's resignation was received.

The Independent Labor Party also wrote endorsing the Trade and Labor's nominee for this vacancy.—This also was received.

The City Solicitor advised Council that they cannot appoint a successor to Ald Murray until the meeting following his resignation and Council's acceptance of the same.

Lavatories at Exhibition

Mr. Fred J Hull, for the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, stated by letter that it is the intention to build lavatories in the exhibition grounds and asked the privilege of connecting with the city's sewer on Lansdowne street.—This was referred to the Board of Works.

The Trades and Labor Council wrote asking the city to adopt an 8 hour day for its workmen, to distribute labor more geerally and thus alleviate to some extent distress caused by lack of employment. This was received and action taken later on as recorded elsewhere.

Extension of Water Main

A. E. Prest, presented a petition from ratepayers for an extension of the water main on Lansdowne street, between Aylmer and Park. As this is a matter etirely in the hands of the Utilities Commission, the petition was referred to that civic body.

Dogs Had Better Beware

Jimmy Gates interviewed Council in regard to resuming his duties as official dog catcher. His Worship informed Gates that as the by-law had not been rescinded he could again take up the work, but the latter wanted rather more liberal consideration than in 1918. He asked $1.25 for each dog caught, or $15 a week. This went to the Property Committee.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

TUESDAY, MAY 6, 1919

ANOTHER SUBURBAN PARK.

THERE ARE CITIZENS who seem disposed to back up the ambition of the members of the School Board to acquire sixteen acres of land in connection with the proposed new school out Sherbrooke street and to dispose of what was not required for a playground to the city as a public park. The estimated cost of the land out there is about $1,500 an acre, so that the ten-acre park would mean another debenture debt of $15,000.

Building a new school is mandatory upon the Board. Acquiring a new park or securing a subdivision to be sold as sites for desirable residences is a matter of choice. The time is certainly not auspicious for any such speculation. There are too many men out of employment now to incur another municipal liability. What the masses of the people need now most of all is employment rather than a playground for the payment of which their cottage homes would be taxed. There are a number of parks in the city now, both central and suburban. The fact that all of these, save the one at the King Edward School, were donated to the city, does not alter the fact that none are patronized extensively and that on holidays they are practically deserted. Anyway, if the city cares to purchase another park, the City Council could act directly instead of using a subsidiary elective body as a middleman. But the Council that was economical to the point of stinginess in making a grant for a bathing beach is not likely to accumulate another debt in order to add to the municipality's park holdings. There are parks now, but no bathing beaches, and the one is rather more to be desired as a health measure than is the other.

These public parks in the suburbs are, after all, considerable of a civic problem. It does not suffice to say that they are all accessible by street car, for on Sunday, the very day when they could be utilized, the street cars are by law forbidden to run. The rich man's automobile and horse vehicle, however, are permitted to operate as usual, but the rich man does not look for his recreation in the city parks, the playgrounds—theoretically so—of the poor. But the workingman and his family, through the long, hot Sundays of the good old summer time, can swelter on the shady side of their dwelling for the simple reason that the civic breathing places are too far away to be reached on foot and because the street cars, the poor man's carriages, are out of commission for the day. If Peterborough were a city of over 50,000 inhabitants, a vote on the question of Sunday cars would be permissible, and as it is the smaller municipalities are regarded as incapable of self-government, but their affairs must be directed by the Legislature at Toronto acting in conjunction with a mixed organization of clergy and laymen. However, if it is possible to railroad through that Legislature a measure allowing a municipality to expropriate land beyond the civic boundaries, it should be just as easy to secure any other right or concession upon which an ambitious city sets its heart.

HOW A DEADLOCK WAS AVERTED.

IF THE ALDERMEN really intend to fill the vacancy on the Council by the appointment of a Labor man to succeed ex-Ald. Murray, as requested by the Trades and Labor Council and by the Independent Labor party, then it would have been a matter of common courtesy to Labor to defer the consideration of wages and working hours for the carpenters and laborers in the employ of the city until the vacancy has been filled. The City Council has now precipitated a dispute with the unions interested, and those unions have already picked up the gauntlet.

As it was, passing on this issue last night with one seat in the Council vacant averted the deadlock which would most certainly have resulted if Labor had had its full quota on the Board. Mayor Duncan was thus spared the responsibility of giving the casting vote. The three Labor aldermen and Ald. McIntyre, who has identified himself with the new element in civic legislation, as was to be expected, voted against the resolution of Ald. Turner setting the civic scale of wages. They were swamped by the votes of the other five members, so that Mayor Duncan escaped all participation in the issue. If the membership had been complete with a Labor man in ex Ald. Murray's place, there would most surely have been a tie and the decision would have been left to the presiding officer. And such ties are inevitable when Joseph Crowe is appointed. On all such questions Mayor Duncan will be the controlling spirit.

FIRE PROTECTION AND POLICE.

IT IS NOT ALONE the inadequacy of the fire fighting equipment of Peterborough that has induced the Underwriters' Association to raise the insurance rates in this city, although, of course, that is the main reason. The underwriters never fail to consider the police force in connection with any municipality's fire protection problem. Every time an inspector from the association makes an official visit to Peterborough he sets out to ascertain just how many men are on the police force and how many of them are kept patrolling the streets when the rest of the citizens are supposed to be slumbering in security.

For six or seven hours every night the police on duty are the only residents who are awake. One of their chief duties is to keep a lookout for incipient fires. The men in the fire station are slumbering, and the only means they have of knowing when their services are required is the alarm which is sent in by the constables on duty.

There are eleven members on the police force now besides the Chief. It is necessary to divide these for day and night tours of duty, and not more than six men are available at any time to walk the beats after dark. There is really little protection to the outlying districts in the way of fire patrol. Some but not all of the factories in the city maintain their own night watchman. Few stores in the business centre and no private residences or stores in the outlying sections go to that expense. It is impossible for five or six policemen to patrol all the streets of a city the size of Peterborough every night. The residents must run the risk of having their homes destroyed by fire and themselves and their families burned to death.

There has always been an unfortunate conflict between the police commissioners and the aldermen in this city, due perhaps to the fact that the former are practically independent of the other. Every year the contention is made by members of the Council that there are too many men already on the force and that expenses in this department should be reduced. The police commissioners have a duty to perform just as have the aldermen, and their responsibility to the city is no less heavy. One of their duties is to maintain such a force as the law calls for and as the Underwriters' Association requires. That this has not always been done is apparent from the recent report of the Underwriters' Association. If there has been failure, it has been due to the same niggardly aldermanic spirit which has brought the fire fighting apparatus of the city to be rated below standard.

OF UNIVERSAL BENEFIT.

THE CANADIAN TARIFF is not a sectional one, but a national one. As "Industrial Canada" says, not only the manufacturers need protection, but also

The seven hundred thousand men and women who work in Canadian factories;

The wholesalers and retailers and their employes who distribute the products of the Canadian factories;

The farmers who sell eighty per cent. of everything they produce in Canada;

The railway and steamship companies and their employes who carry Canadian goods;

The bankers, brokers, and commission agents and their employes, who finance Canadian industry;

The innumerable investors who hold stock in Canadian manufacturing concerns, but who are in no sense manufacturers;

All others—doctors, lawyers, insurance men, publishers, etc.—who make their living, directly or indirectly, from industrial concerns and the industrial population.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

IN UNION there is strength, and just as surely the chance of a conflict with the City Council.

FIUME ALDERMAN HAS EXPLANATION

DR. ANTONI COMES TO CANADA AND U. S. WITH MESSAGE.

Dr. Gino Antoni, Alderman of the Municipality of Fiume and delegate of the National Council of the free city and free port of Fiume, came to North America several weeks ago with a definite charge given him by his fellow citizens of Fiume to explain both to the American and Canadian people that before the Austrian tyranny was cut to pieces by the Italian army last October, the people of that city held a plebiscite and voted to unite their city to Italy, adopting the Italian flag as their civic emblem.

Dr. Antoni before leaving issued the following statement for communication to the press:

"I am a delegate of the National Council of Fiume. It was born in Fiume and I am one of the Aldermen of the municipality. For the last twenty years, with my fellow citizens, I have been fighting for the cause of the redemption of Fiume. During the war Austria put me on trial because of my ideas, but I scaped. I have come to North America to make the true voice of my city heard and to demonstrate officially that Fiume wishes to be united to Italy. Fiume is Italian by blood, language and sentiment.

"Fiume has always fought against foreign oppression. She was a part of Hungary, but as a "separate body." Hungary was composed of three states—Hungary proper, Croatia and Fiume. The victory of the Italian army has destroyed this union and Fiume has regained its independence. As an independent state Fiume on the 30th of October, 1918, unanimously declared its union with Italy, thus repeating what had been done on former occasions, especially in 1779, 1868, when it obtained recognition of its peculiar position as a free and independent city, united to Hungary in a temporary way, but a state in itself.

"In so far as its self-destination is concerned Fiume has put itself under the protection of America. In Fiume all the mayors, all the deputies, the members of the Municipal Council, the Chamber of Commerce and the courts have always been Italians. Fiume can, therefore dispose of its own fate and nobody can deny it the right of joining its mother country.

"We can hear the people say that if Fiume is united to Italy the population of the interior will not have an outlet to the sea. This is false. Jugoslavia has excellent natural harbors betwen Buccari and Carlopago, and so Hungary will be freely admitted to the harbor of Fiume, as will Croatia. Realizing this fact the population of Fiume has declared its willingness to have the city a free port to which the peoples of the interior will be admitted without paying duties and without any obstacles of any kind. It is not at all necessary to sacrifice the purely Italian character of Fiume in order to give an outlet to the interior. However, the commerce of Croatia at Fiume was only seven per cent. of the total commercial output, the rest of the traffic belonging to Hungary. Fiume as a free port represents for al peoples of the interior free access to the seas and free commerce.

"Fiume has a population of 35,000 native Italians. This population is mistress of its own city, and the will of the citizens of Fiume must be respected. We want to be Italians and Italy wants us. We are like brothers who are at last reunited after centuries of suffering and struggle."

The Canadian people are requested by the committee for the defence of redeemed Italy, Montreal, to give careful attention to Dr. Antoni's statement, which is a further proof that the problem of Fiume is above all a matter of pure and simple self-determination, and that to oppose the will of that Italian city means to disregard President Wilson's fourteen points.

Made in Canada By Canadians For Canadians

WHY WAIT FOR PRE-WAR LEVEL

(New York Commercial.)

Governor Edge's speech before the United States Chamber of Commerce in St. Louis is a clarion call to business to awaken from its slumbers—to get into action—to go over the top. It rings true and its truths should be read and re-read by every American business man.

"Buyers and builders wait for the pre-war level of prices which will never return. Capital holds back, hoping for the wage to drop, not realizing that wages cannot decrease so long as prices remain high, and not appreciating apparently that to reduce the purchasing power of labor is merely to invite business disaster and ruin," said the Governor.

It is the watchful and especially the waiting policy of the American business man which is causing the present stagnation. Every one is waiting for some one else to start; no one is starting, and so every one stands still or marks time. As Governor Edge said, pre-war prices will not come again for a long time, probably not for years—so why wait? Wages cannot come down without a proportionate reduction in the cost of living; otherwise there would be a social revolution—so why wait?

It is this waiting policy also on the part of the Federal Government which the Governor criticises. The Governor, offering constructive criticism, proposed:

"The Government should set the ness is bound to follow."

Governor Edge's contention that the example by digging canals, building Federal Government should become a partner rather than a competitor of roads, increasing railway facilities, developin water power. . . . Private business is well taken. We have had altogether too much irrelevant interference in business. We need the active co-operation of the Government; helpful aid—not irritating supervision and political investigations.

And while Governor Edge was advising business men he also gave some especially sound advice to the Federal Government—to wit:

"Let the Government put the business of government on a sound business basis and it will be helpfing and stimulating every private business in the land."

That is what Governor Edge did during the three years he was executive of his native state, New Jersey. What New Jersey can do, the United States can do.

Let the business men of the country set a good example to the Federal Government. Let action take the place of somnolence. Let us pull unitedly for a resumption of business activity, with its attendant partner, national prosperity.

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING

By Dr. W. A. BRADY

The average substantial citizen can scarcely afford to employ a graduate nurse for several weeks in time of sickness. The nurse's wage, added to the doctor's fee and perhaps the loss of income if the patient happens to be a bread winner, is prohibitive.

On the other hand, the average so-called "practical nurse" is scarcely a safe attendant in sickness. Although a minority of these untrained or uneducated practical nurses are intelligent, cleanly and thoroughly dependable in most illness, it is a deplorable fact that the greater number of such nurses are not competent, though honest and willing and kind as women can be.

The first and last test of a good nurse, no matter whether trained or untrained is her ability to keep the patient clean and comfortable. This may not sound like a particularly difficult matter and unless you have had personal experience as a patient seriously ill in bed you can scarcely realize what it means to be kept clean and comfortable when sick abed. A few practical nurses, and a precious few for whom we thank heaven, do pass this test; four out of five of them make a miserable failure. For example, Mrs. Gamp seldom dares to change the sheets or the patient's nighty if the weather isn't just right; and she is just as timid about fresh air; and she looks upon daily bathing as an unwarranted risk. But put yourself in the invalid's place for a few weeks, quite at the mercy of the nurse. If you have a sneaking suspicion that Sairey may be half right about it.

What we need is a fairly intelligent young woman with a short course of training as a housekeper-nurse; a young woman who can step in and take the housewife's place, keeping the housework up and at the same time nursing the housewife. This, of course, the graduate nurse will not and should not do; but there are ten cases requiring a housekeper-nurse to one case requiring a graduate nurse. The housekeeper-nurse would command a respectable wage and a great demand. Her training should be completed in six months. She would be worth $20 a week.

Our hospital training schools ought to consider the needs of the great middle class, the best class of people in the country. Graduate nurses with three years' hospital training and their necessarily high wage are beyond the reach of the ordinary family. Why should not the hospitals endeavor to provide reasonably good nursing care for the middle class? Are the pauper and the rich alone to receive the benefits of modern nursing skill?

Yeast and Acne.

"Will you kindly publish in your column directions for the use of yeast for acne. MISS V. M. E."

A compressed yeast cake should be taken after each meal, mixed to fluid with fruit juice or water or milk or any beverage. Continue for about six weeks more or less. The yeast is suggested for pimples, not for all skin diseases. It is often helpful for pimples or for boils.

To Soften and Whitten Hands.

"Can you suggest something to soften and whitten the hands, which are red and rough, from housework. I suppose MRS. G. F."

Two or three times a day, after washing the hands and before they are quite dry, apply this lotion:

Boric acid, a tablespoonful.
Glycerin, two tablespoonfuls.
Tagacanth, small teaspoonful.
Water, one pint.

Boil, stirring constantly till all dissolved.

TO-DAY'S STORY

He was not a man of wealth, but of comfortable means; all the same, he resented the exorbitant charges which the hotel manager imposed.

"Why look here!" he complained, thrusting the bill into the manager's face. "I see you have charged me up 50 cents a day for attendance, and I couldn't get any. I'm sure I tugged at the bell rope in my room dozens of times, but got no answer."

"In that case you had better give me the bill and I will have it altered," was the reply.

When, however, the bill was again presented the total was found to be the same, and upon the visitor's pointing it out the manager explained:

"Yes, sir; I have substituted 'physical exercise' in the place of the 'attendance items.'"

"Physical exercise!" repeated the bewildered visitor.

"Quite right sir," was the answer. "According to your own statement you have been exercising on the dumb bells for a week."

STEAM MANGLE EXPLODES

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and Bladder weakness result fro muric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailment to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a table-spoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

WEEPING ECZEMA SOON RELIEVED

A Perfect Treatment For This Distressing Complaint

WASING, ONT.

"I had an attack of Weeping Eczema; so bad that my clothes would be wet through at times.

For four months, I suffered terribly. I could get no relief until I tried 'Fruit-a-tives' and 'Sootha Salva'. The first treatment gave me relief.

Altogether, I have used three boxes of 'Sootha Salva' and two of 'Fruit-a-tives', and am entirely well"

G. W. HALL.

Both these sterling remedies are sold by dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

"Fruit-a-tives" is also put up in a trial size which sells for 25c.

CITY COUNCIL

vansed that 40c an hour for laborers was enough under existing conditions and declared that if Council strikes the rate too high the bridge and other work will be held up.

He then concluded that manufacturers cannot hope to compete with manufacturers in other cities who are not paying the wages Peterboro men are demanding. Then with even a 35 per cent duty American manufacturers can dump their goods on Canadian markets and undersell us.

Ald. McIntyre— "Brantford pays 45c. It is not too much for Peterborough men. Let employers do with less profit."

His Worship —"That is to say that Peterborough employers have been getting too big a profit?"

Ald. Hamilton—"The manufacturers are not working on a profit today. It they get through the year by breaking even they'll do well."

Gainey for Men

Ald. Gainey here offered to support Ald. Garside's amendment if he would include the carpenters at 67½ but Garside would only raise 5c, making 65c for carpenters.

Ald. Garside — "It is too big a jump from 60c to 67½c an hour, and I'm not in favor of it. Such a wage would lock up the bridge. We interviewed the carpenters on this question, but I have not heard of them coming down at all from their demand for 67½c.

Ald. Turner—"They can ask for what they like. But I suggest that the city pays 40c and 60c for laborers and carpenters respectively, and they can please themselves whether they work on those scales or not."

Ald. Morrison "The Trades and Labor Council is representative of all organizations. That body is supporting the men's demands and by Council's paying the 45c an hour asked, Ald. Turner's contention that Council should legislate for the masses, irrespective of Foresters, Oddfellows, Masons, and such like societies would be met. Forty-five cents an hour is little enough. If the city can get the men to agree to a 40c scale, all right. I understand the Mayor is paying union wages then why not give laborers 45c an hour? The work is much harder than painting. As to His Worship's complaint of his men, it is a foreman's duty to see that they work faithfully and efficiently."

Ald. Turner's motion here carried.

Ald. Gainey—"Now there will be trouble."

SHIPPED TO TORONTO

License Inspector Stewart Dispenes of Whiskey Recently Seized.

License Inspector Stewart yesterday shipped to the Government's liquor warehouse, Toronto, the consignment of "hard stuff" which he and High Constable Moore seized as it was on transit by wagon from Norwood to Peterborough. There were 180 bottles in all, G. & W. goods, and the stock bore the Govrnment seal of 1913. The shipment weighed over 700 pounds and the express company valued it at $550. At the current sale for boot-leg whiskey the men from whom it was taken would have sold it at $6 a bottle or $1,040 in all.

NO ALARM OVER MORMONS

The little fellow wrinkled his brow as he wrestled with the problem, and finally replied, "I don't know for sure, but I think it must be a proper goose's brother."

"My sister's takin' music lessons," said Hazel to a neighboring playmate, aged four.

"My sister's takin' sumfin' on ze piano," replied the other, "but I can't tell whezzer it's moosic or typewriter."

Small Edward accompanied his father to church one cold Sunday morning, and upon their return his mother asked if he could repeat the minister's text. "Course I can," replied Edward. "He got up and rubbed his hands together and said, 'Many are cold, but few are frozen.'"

No edge without stropping

Before stropping (magnified)
After stropping (magnified)

Provide a barber with a number of the highest-priced razors obtainable and stipulate that he must use a new razor on every individual customer and he would refuse if he valued his trade.

Stropping, you see, is needful because it removes the roughness of the new blade and re-aligns the saw-like edge that shaving produces; because it keeps the blade free from rust; and because it is the only means that will provide you each morning with a keen edge for shaving.

You don't take the blade out to sharpen it; nor do you take the AutoStrop Razor apart to clean it. From first to last—stropping, shaving and cleaning—you never need to remove the blade from the razor.

You can get an AutoStrop Razor anywhere—razor, strop and 12 blades, complete, in attractive case, for $5.00.

New Industry For Peterborough City

BY-LAW GRANTING FIXED ASSESSMENT TO THE STICKNEY MOTORS LTD. PASSES COUNCIL.

The City Fathers last night passed a bylaw to authorize entering into an agreement with the Stickney Motors Limited (St. Paul, Minn.). The company agrees to take over the old cardage works, recently vacated by the Renfrew Manufacturing Co., and manufacture therein farm tractors, motor trucks, motors and gasoline engines, employing for 9 months each year for a period of ten years a minimum number of 50 employees. The city proposes to grant this new concern, which will be incorporated in Canada, fixed exemption at $10,000 for ten years, not including school taxes. Should market conditions or tariff changes enforce the cessation of manufacture for a period up to one year, the company is to have the privilege of making good its failure to employ 50 hands for the 9 months of the year closed.

A bylaw to authorize the taking of the peoples' votes on this question was passed. Voting day will be Thursday, June 5th.

MINISTER WORKED SUNDAY!

He Was Minister of Public Works—Clerical Ministers Peeved.

REV. DUNN FEELS IT HIS DUTY TO SPEAK

WANTS OTHERS TO BENEFIT BY HIS EXPERIENCE—GAINS FIFTEEN POUNDS BY TAKING TANLAC.

Rev. J. H. Dunn, pastor of the Church of Christ at 2110 East Second Ave., Spokane, Wash., and residing at 724 West Sharp street, is still another in this high calling whose deep sense of gratitude and desire to help others will not permit him to remain silent regarding the wonderful benefits he has derived from the use of Tanlac.

"Tanlac has not only relieved me of my ten years suffering," said Rev. Dunn recently, "but it has built me up wonderfully, as I have gained fifteen pounds in a month's time by taking it. My stomach was in such a disordered condition that I could not eat without suffering great pain. My food felt like lead in my stomach and I would expel sour gas with almost every breath. Those who diagnosed my case told me I had cancer of the stomach, and my worry and physical suffering combined were extreme. My head ached constantly and I continually lost in weight strength and energy. I spent around three hundred dollars for medicines of various kinds, but got no benefit and my condition was indeed distressing.

"I finally bought Tanlac on the strength of high endorsements and my first-bottle made a marked change in my feelings. So I bought another and then another, and now I am just like a new man. Before I took Tanlac I could-not eat apples on account of the suffering the acid caused me but now I can eat any number of them. In fact, I can eat just anything now without the least discomfort afterwards. A medicine that will help anyone out of such a long term of suffering and set them right is certainly well worth recommending to the public. It gives me pleasure to do what I can for my fellow man, and as Tanlac has been of such great benefit to me, and not only to me but also a number of my friends I can conscientiously recommend it to everybody."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. R. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

SCHOOL BOARD RESCINDS ACTION TAKEN LAST WEEK

Will Not Purchase More Than Sufficient Land For Playground For Proposed New School

The members of the Board of Education made a new departure last night when they held a special session, not in their comfortable Board room, but in the open air on the site that they intend to purchase for the new school across the Monaghan road out Sherbrooke street. The Board has abandoned the ambitious idea of embarking in the real estate business and will purchase only the land necessary for a school playground. The Chamberlain estate has made them what is generally regarded as a satisfactory offer to sell about five acres, and it is altogether likely that when the members meet in regular session tonight this offer will be accepted.

At last night's open air session the action taken at a recent special session was rescinded. At that time a resolution was adopted, unanimously save for Trustee Gordon, asking the City Council to authorize the issue of debentures for the raising of $25,000, the sum required to purchase sixteen acres of land from the Chamberlain estate. This request has been recalled and no such sum will be asked for.

Some objection has been offered to the proposition to build a new school under present conditions, when the cost of labor and material are so far above the normal. The Board have no alternative in the matter. The building of a new school is mandatory. If proper accommodation for the school population is not provided the city will forfeit the legislative grant, and it is not hard to imagine what would be the popular verdict if the Board of Education permitted anything of the kind to happen by neglecting their duties. The fact is that more school accommodation was required some time ago, but the department was inclined to be lenient on account of the war.

It is only natural that the proposed new school will cost at least twice as much as it required to put up such buildings as the King George and Queen Mary. In Brantford a few years ago a modern school building was erected at a cost of $55,000 exclusive of the site. A new building on exactly the same plans, just now at the point of completion, has cost Brantford $123,900, or considerably more than twice that of the other.

The local Board, however, will save at least $15,000 on the outlay proposed and published recently by confining their purchase of land to the amount actually required for a playground.

COUNCIL IS SHOWN HOW TO SAVE $30,000 TO $40,000 ON BRIDGE

Russell-Townsend Co. Write Demanding Return of Deposit Cheque—Also Proffer Suggestions Worth While Considering—Another Firm Declines to Tender Again.

Peterborough is evidently losing credit with Canadian contracts, one of whom writes that he will not again tender owing to Council's peculiar methods. He also passed other sarcastic references.

Council last night received the following letter from the Russell-Townsend people:

"Gentlemen, I was somewhat surprised upon getting the report of Mr. Townsend and Mr. Navin to learn that your works committee had rescinded their motion awarding us the contract fon the Hunter street bridge, and by the passing of their latest motion had placed the bridge question back to the same unsettled condition it was in several weeks ago. It is needless for me to point out to you that the latest recommendation of your works committee is sustained in Council it will mean very considerable delay in the commencing of operations, as by the time you have your conference with the contractors, award the contract, prepare the agreement and report back to Council for ratification, considerable precious time will have elapsed, and a week now will be worth a month in the late fall.

"Despite the action taken by your committee in turning down the original award I believe in our tender you have the fairest, most practical and economical method of building the bridge, and any fears you may have of becoming liable under the injunction proceedings are to my mind absolutely groundless. There are many ways the expenditure could be curtailed in the event of the unlooked for possibility of the cost exceeding the appropriation. To enumerate a few avenues of retrenchment, the following amounts could be saved:—By narrowing the bridge, $20,000; by omitting the present haul rail and substituting temporary rail, $15,000. The rubbing and finishing of the exterior concrete, which is worth $5,000 or $6,000, could be left until the last without in any way affecting the essential functions of the completed structure. I am not mentioning the above saving possibilities because I have any doubt in my own mind as to the ultimate cost of the structure, but only to impress upon you the needlessness of the threatened injunction proceedings, causing you any anxiety, even if Mr. Hall, on behalf of his client, could take personal action against you which is doubtful.

"If your council should award us this contract I conscientiously believe that by working in conjunction with your engineer and committee we can carry on the work economically, harmoniously and with the very minimum of friction or annoyance to the Council, and by the time the bridge is completed the Council will be well pleased with their action as we are egotistical enough to believe that with our organization in Toronto, and with the personal supervision and experience of Mr. Townsend at the work, we will be able to give you dollar for dollar value and leave you a structure which from a utilitarian and ornamental standpoint will not only be a credit to ourselves but also a credit to the Council and a satisfaction to your citizens.

"In the event of the Council sustaining the latest motion of the Board of Works, I would request that you be good enough to have deposit cheque returned with as little delay as possible.

"Trusting that you may be able to arrive at any early and satisfactory solution of your problem, I am

"Respectfully yours,
"JNO. E. RUSSELL."

The deposit cheque will be returned.

Peculiar Methods.

The Sherwood Construction Company wrote asking for a return of their deposit cheque with tender for new bridge, and also their alternate plans—Granted.

The G. H. Tromanhouser Co., Toronto, wrote that owing to the peculiar methods adopted by Council in calling for and considering tenders they had declined Mr. Barber's invitation to again tender for the work.—Received.

16c TO ALL

THE GODS OF MARS

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

This stratagem [illegible] and just before [illegible] went down I had the satisfaction of seeing all that was left of my once mighty fleet gathered nearly twenty miles southwest of the still terrific battle between the blacks and whites.

Our plan now was to attempt to make a combined assault upon Issus at dawn of the following day.

Tars Tarkas, with his green warriors, and Hor Vastus, with the red men, guided by Xodar, were to land within the gardens of Issus or the surrounding plains, while Carthoris, Kantos Kan and I were to lead our smaller force from the sea of Omean through the pits beneath the temple which Carthoris knew so well.

I now learned for the first time the cause of my ten ships' retreat from the mouth of the shaft. It seemed that when they had come upon the shaft the navy of the Black Pirates were already issuing from its mouth.

Fully twenty vessels had emerged and, though they gave battle immediately in an effort to stem the tide that rolled from the black pit, the odds against them were too great, and they were forced to flee.

With great caution we approached the shaft under cover of darkness. At a distance of several miles I caused the fleet to be halted, and from there Carthoris went ahead alone upon a one man flier to reconnoiter.

In perhaps half an hour he returned to report that there was no sign of a patrol boat or of the enemy in any form, and so we moved swiftly and noiselessly forward once more toward Omean.

At the mouth of the shaft leading to Omean we stopped again for a moment for all the vessels to reach their previously appointed stations; then with the flagship I dropped quickly into the black depths, while one by one the other vessels followed me in quick succession.

We had decided to stake all on the chance that we would be able to reach the temple of Issus by the subterranean way, and so we left no guard of vessels at the shaft's mouth. Nor would it have profited us any to have done so, for we did not have sufficient force all told to have withstood the vast navy of the Black Pirates had they returned to engage us.

CHAPTER XV.

Between Flood and Flames.

FOR the safety of our entrance upon Omean we depended largely upon the very boldness of it, believing that it would be some little time before the Black Pirates on guard there would realize that it was an enemy and not their own returning fleet that was entering the vault of the buried sea.

And such proved to be the case. In fact, 400 of my fleet of 500 rested safely upon the bosom of Omean before a shot was fired.

The battle was short and hot, but there could have been but one outcome, for the Black Pirates in the carelessness of fancied security had left but a handful of ancient and obsolete hulks to guard their mighty harbor.

It was at Carthoris' suggestion that we landed our prisoners under guard upon a couple of the larger islands and then towed the ships of the Black Pirates to the shaft, where we managed to wedge a number of them securely in the interior of the great well.

Then we turned on the buoyancy rays in the balance of them and let them rise by themselves further to block the passage to Omean as they came in contact with the vessels already lodged there.

We now felt that it would be some time at least before the returning Black Pirates could reach the surface of Omean and that we would have ample opportunity to make for the subterranean passages which led to Issus.

As Carthoris alone knew the hidden ways of the tunnels we could not divide the party and attack the temple at several points at once, as would have been most desirable, and so it was decided that he lead us all as quickly as he could to a point as near the temple's center as possible.

As we were about to leave the pool and enter the corridors an officer called my attention to the waters upon which the submarine floated. At first they seemed to be merely agitated as from the movement of some great body beneath the surface, and I at once conjectured that another submarine was rising to the surface in pursuit of us. But presently it became apparent that the level of the waters was rising not with extreme rapidity, but very surely, and that soon they would overflow the sides of the pool and submerge the floor of the chamber.

For a moment I did not fully grasp the terrible import of the slowly rising waters. It was Carthoris who realized the full meaning of the thing—its cause and the reason for it.

"Haste!" he cried. "If we delay we all are lost. The pumps of Omean have been stopped. They would drown us like rats in a trap. We must reach the upper levels of the pits in advance of the flood or we shall never reach them. Come."

"Lead the way, Carthoris," I cried. "We shall follow."

At my command the youth leaped into one of the corridors, and in columns of twos, and in good order, the soldiers followed him, each company entering the corridor only at the command of its dwar, or captain.

I was the last to leave the chamber of the submarine, and as I followed the rear of the column toward the corridor I moved through water to my knees.

The corridor, too, was flooded to the same depth, for its floor was on a level with the floor of the chamber from which it led, nor was there any perceptible rise for many yards.

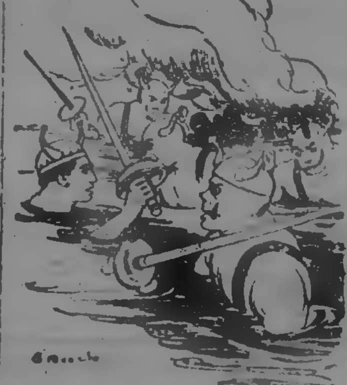
The march of the troops through the corridor was as rapid as was consistent with the number of men that moved through so narrow a passage, but it was not ample to permit us to gain appreciably on the pursuing tide.

Long ere the last of the column could hope to reach the upper pits which lay above the danger point, I was convinced that the waters would surge after us in overwhelming volume and that fully half the expedition would be snuffed out.

As I cast about for some means of saving as many as possible of the doomed men I saw a diverging corridor which seemed to rise at a steep angle at my right.

Raising my voice to its utmost, I shouted my commands to the dwars ahead of me.

"Call back the last twenty-five utans," I shouted. "Here seems a way of escape. Turn back and follow me."



"Help, John Carter! We are suffocating!"

My orders were obeyed by nearer thirty utans, so that some 3,000 men came about and hastened into the teeth of the flood to reach the corridor up which I directed them.

As the first dwar passed in with his utan I cautioned him to listen closely for my commands and under no circumstances to venture into the open or leave the pits for the temple proper until I should have come up with him "or you know that I died before I could reach you."

The officer saluted and left me. The men filed rapidly past me and entered the diverging corridor which I hoped would lead to safety.

The water rose breast high. Men stumbled, floundered and went down. Many I grasped and set upon their feet again, but alone the work was greater than I could cope with. Soldiers were being swept beneath the boiling torrent never to rise.

At length the dwar of the tenth utan took a stand beside me. He was a valorous soldier, Gur Tus by name, and together we kept the now thoroughly frightened troops in the semblance of order and rescued many that would have drowned otherwise.

Djor Kantos, son of Kantos Kan and a padwar of the fifth utan, joined us when his utan reached the opening through which the men were fleeing. Thereafter not a man was lost of all the hundreds that remained to pass from the main corridor to the branch.

As the last utan was filing past us the waters had risen until they surged about our necks, but we clasped hands and stood our ground until the last man had passed to the comparative safety of the new passageway. Here we found an immediate and steep ascent, so that within a hundred yards we had reached a point above the waters.

For a few minutes we continued rapidly up the steep grade which I hoped would soon bring us quickly to the upper pits that led into the temple of Issus. But I was to meet with a cruel disappointment.

Suddenly I heard a cry of "Fire!" far ahead, followed almost at once by cries of terror and the loud commands of dwars and padwars, who were evidently attempting to direct their men away from some grave danger. At last the report came back to us:

"They have fired the pits ahead!"

"We are hemmed in by flames in front and flood behind!"

"Help, John Carter! We are suffocating!"

Back upon us at the rear swept a wave of dense smoke that sent us stumbling and blinded into a choking retreat.

There was naught to do other than seek a new avenue of escape. The fire and smoke were to be feared a thousand times over the water, and so I seized upon the first gallery which led out of and up from the suffocating smoke that was engulfing us.

Again I stood to one side while the soldiers hastened through on the new way. Some 2,000 must have passed at a rapid run when the stream ceased, but I was not sure that all had been rescued who had not passed the point of origin of the flames, and so to assure myself that no poor devil was left behind to die a horrible death unsuccored I ran quickly up the gallery in the direction of the flames, which I could now see burning with a dull glow far ahead.

It was hot and stifling work, but at last I reached a point where the fire lit up the corridor sufficiently for me to see that no soldier of Helium lay between me and the conflagration. What was in it or upon the far side I could not know, nor could any man have passed through that seething hell of chemicals and lived to learn.

Having satisfied my sense of duty, I turned and ran rapidly back to the corridor through which my men had passed. To my horror, however, I found that my retreat in this direction had been blocked. Across the mouth of the corridor stood a massive steel grating that had evidently been lowered from its resting place above for the purpose of effectually cutting off my escape.

A thousand times I berated myself for being drawn into such a trap as I might have known these pits easily could be. Now I saw that it would have been much better to have kept our force intact and made a concerted attack upon the temple from the valley side, trusting to chance and our great fighting ability to have overwhelmed the Black Pirates and compelled the safe delivery of Dejah Thoris to me.

The smoke from the fire was forcing me farther and farther back down the corridor toward the waters which I could hear surging through the darkness.

With my men had gone the last torch. Nor was this corridor lighted by the radiance of phosphorescent rock as were those of the lower levels. It was this fact that assured me that I was not far from the upper pits which lie directly beneath the temple.

Finally I felt the lapping waters about my feet. The smoke was thick behind me. My suffering was intense.

There seemed but one thing to do and that to choose the easier death which confronted me, and so I moved on down the corridor until the cold waters of Omean closed about me and I swam on through utter blackness toward—what?

The instinct of self preservation is strong even when one, unafraid and in the possession of his highest reasoning faculties, knows that death—positive and unalterable—lies just ahead.

So I swam slowly on, waiting for my head to touch the top of the corridor, which would mean that I had reached the limit of my flight and the point where I must sink forever to an unmarked grave.

To my surprise I ran against a blank wall before I reached a point where the waters came to the roof of the corridor. Could I be mistaken? I felt round. No; I had come to the main corridor, and still there was a breathing space between the surface of the water and the rocky ceiling above.

Then I turned up the main corridor in the direction that Carthoris and the head of the column had passed a half hour before. On and on I swam, my heart growing lighter at every stroke, for I knew that I was approaching the point where there would be no chance that the waters ahead could be deeper than they were about me.

BUD FISHER'S BIG MUSICAL COMEDY
MUTT AND JEFF
IN THE WOOLLY WEST
ALL NEW
Slacker—"What do you think of Mutt & Jeff ? I guess I'll join Uncle Sam myself."

"MUTT & JEFF IN THE WOOLY WEST," at the Grand Saturday, matinee and evening.

AT THE GRAND

The management of the Grand is to be congratulated upon the splendid bill shown in the local house the first half of this week. It comprises two high class vaudeville acts, a feature picture, a comedy and the Screen Magazine. To judge from the almost capacity houses which are to be seen at every performance the policy of vaudeville three days in each week is apparently meeting with the approval of the theatre-going public of Peterborough.

Miss Ella De Vail is a trapeze artist of no mean ability and some of the stunts she performs are original and thrilling. For several years with Barnum and Bailey's circus she forsook the saw-dust and went into vaudeville and is making a splendid success with her act.

The Revue de Vogue is a musical melange of merit and was much appreciated by the large audience last night. The singing of the company and the costumes shown by the ladies of the act were very pleasing. Their bill included solos, choruses, violin solos, piano solos, dancing and a burlesque marriage ceremony supposed to be in Salt Lake City.

Rex Beach's "Too Fat To Fight," which first saw light of day as a story in the Cosmopolitan Magazine, was shown on the screen last night with big Frank McIntyre in the leading role. A synopsis of the story of this great picture appeared in yesterday's Review. But all who have read the story will want to see the picture and it is a safe bet that none will be disappointed in it.

A comedy film and the Screen Magazine complete a very interesting bill which will be repeated today and tomorrow.

MUTT AND JEFF IN NEW FIELD

WILL BE AT GRAND SATURDAY CLAD IN CHAPS AND STETSONS.

Simon-pure comedy of the kind that insinuates itself into our very marrow and makes life one long, blissful song, is promised in the latest Mutt and Jeff series which is underlined as the next attraction at the Grand, Saturday, with a matinee Saturday. Those who have had the good fortune to already have witnessed this piece of genuine tomfoolery and fun, pronounce it as the final word in up-to-date stage entertainment and modern producing. It is in three rollicking acts and is entitled, "Mutt and Jeff in the Wooly West." The plot naturally permits those two wonderful humorous cartoon personages ample opportunity to display their talents for arousing mirth, which has been their quota ever since their gifted creator, "Bud" Fisher, first brought them into the light of fame and happiness.

As on previous occasions little Jeff becomes the buffer for a number of side-splitting pranks at the hands of that champion practical joker and troublemaker, A. Mutt, though in the end Jeff sufficiently outwits his chum and tormentro by becoming the proud possessor of a valuable gold mine, which has been willed to him by his deceased brother. Their adventures carry them through many periods of stress and high jinks, but throughout all there is an irresistable tumult of hearty laughter and infectious mirth. As on former occasions, Manager Gus Hill, who again pilots the destinies of the inseperable twain of gloom dispellers, has mustered a capable cast which includes twenty dashing, fascinating and captivatingly pretty girls who will assist in dispensing and disporting themselves in a galoxy of tuneful songs and dances; unque features, inimitable surprises, novelties and a gorgeous display of gowns and scenic investiture are also promised.

"THE BEAUTIFUL CITY BY THE SEA"

Two lines of the Grand Trunk Railway System between Montreal and Portland, Maine, penetrate the heart of the White Mountains, and serve many districts. Portland, that "beautiful city by the sea," as Longfellow called it is the gateway to innunmerable natural beauties and cod retreats. Seldom has a city such surroundings of sea and shore. Portland and Casco Bay form the Utopia of those with moderate means; nowhere will a dollar procure more of sea-side pleasures. Hotels in city and on the islands in the bay are numerous, and there are large numbers of boarding-houses. Old Orchard, Kennebunkpor and other resorts are reached through Portland. An attractive publication which gives full information regarding the mountain and sea coast territory of Maine and New Hampshire, including hotels, rates, etc., may be had for the asking by applying to Grand Trunk Agent or C. E. Horning, D.P.A., Toronto, Ont.

BARRY MacCORMACK in "MACUSHLA," at the Grand Friday evening.

DIPLOMACY AND NOT DYNAMITE

NEW METHOD OF DEALING WITH IRISH QUESTION—NEW DRAMA.

Rida Johnson Young, author of "Macushla," the comedy drama, in which Barry McCormick will star at the Grand Friday evening, has won an enviable name among American playwrights. A list of her contributions to the stage includes "Lord Byron," "Brown of Harvard," "Glorious Betsy," "The Boys of Company B," "The Lottery Man," "Next," "Barry of Ballymore," "Naughty Marietta," "The Yellow Streak," "The Isle of Dreams," "Look Who's Here," and "The Girl with the Pennant."

"For many years," says Barry McCormack, the star of "Macushla," in which he will appear at the Grand Opera House next Friday evening, "The villain of the typical Irish play was an informer or a 'Michael Feeny,' as we call him. That day has gone. The 'informers' have been driven from Ireland and from Irish drama. The Irish question is being handled nowadays by diplomacy, not dynamite, and the Irish play has changed accordingly. The world has gone ahead and the Irish have not 'been backward in going forward,' as the saying is. There's still plenty of material for Irish drama— just as much as Shakespeare had several hundred years ago—jealousy, love, romance, envy, misunderstanding, sacrifice, all the emotions that have served the world since Adam's time and there no longer any excuse for the old fashioned Irish villain who wasn't Irish at all but only served to put the stigma on the Irish."

"ROMANTIC MARY" AT THE LYCEUM

SUCCESSFUL ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN BY LITERARY SOCIETY OF SACRED HEART.

The Literary Society of Sacred Heart Church gave a successful entertainment last night in St. Alphonsus Lyceum, and in their presentation of the play "Romantic Mary" the different members showed dramatic talent equal to that of any amateur organization in the city. The following took part:

Mrs. Winn, an inconsolable relict—Florence Leahy.

Eleanor Winn, her daughter—Margaret Willard.

Mary Eager, her niece—Agnes Murray.

Jennie, a maid —Ella Lynch.

Henery Hastings, always ready to talk it over—Vincent Killoran.

Dr. Millman, one who doesn't know what it is to be a widow—Earl Judge.

Oliver Orde, a family ghost by force of circumstances—Robert Lenord.

Andrew, his man— George Lenord.

The musical numbers included a piano duet by Misses Mary and Lucille Nolan and song specialties by Mr. F. Bartley, and T. Collins. Mr. A. Weatherhead acted as accompanist.

Fifty-eight persons were killed by autos on New York streets in April.

A pipe organ in memory of five members of the congregation fallen in war was dedicated at Chapleau Methodist Church.

Students at Bethany College, W. Va., refused to accept compulsory military training, and most of them returned home.

WORLD'S FAMOUS GOLFERS ALL BEGAN THEIR CAREER EARLY

Harold H. Hilton Began at Age of Six, While Taylor, Braid and Vardon All Starred as Youngsters and Developed Rapidly.

Should the boy play golf? The answer is in the affirmative as they say in "another place" if the game is to become a national pastime. For it is in one's early days, when most things are done by instinct, that one can best acquire the smooth, true swing which counts so much. If you once get the knack of hitting the ball in free and easy style you never lose it. It is like shorthand; you never forget it, and only a little practice is necessary to make one as proficient as ever.

There is scarcely a golfing father who has not thought over this question long and anxiously. He would like his son to play golf well, but not just yet. There are first the moral lessons of the cricket field and the rugby scrim to be learnt. Character is made on the rubgy field, and at cricket one is inspired by the idea of playing for the side. And golf is a selfish game. That notion clings even though it may not be true.

But no game bestows more benefits than golf by serving an early apprenticeship to it. Examine the records of all the great players and you will find out that they began to swing a club to bang a ball about for the sheer joy of hitting, in their early teens. There is, of course, the exception. C. A. Palmer, the Midland amateur, never went onto a links until he was over 40, until he imagined that he had grown too old to participate in other pastimes. Yet a few years after we find him contesting the final of the championship and a few years later still, beating the American champion, Jerome Travers. His is truly a wonderful record, but one wonders whether he has any regrets that he did not go to the links earlier in life, and whether he believes he would not have won still more honors if he had done so. Then there is the Canadian champion, Geo. S. Lyon, who also took up the game in his early 40's, and has a son, Seymour, who is regarded in some circles as the equal of his father.

The schoolboy's days are crowded with many contending interests and we find that many of the leading amateurs could only find time to play golf during the holidays. But the experience they gained in this rather haphazard way served its purpose. Take the case of Capt. C. K. Hutchinson, who was taken prisoner early in thew ar, but was has now returned to play as well as ever. and his final with Robert Maxwell in 1903 produced one of the finest matches in the history of the event. At Eton Capt. Hutchinson was much too interested in football, fives, and athletics to bother about golf. He only had a round at long intervals on the primitive course down by the river, but each year when he went home for his summer holidays he played the day long on his favorite links at North Berwick. Curiously enough, Maxwell was one of his contemporaries at Eton, but he, too, did not reveal his liking for golf whilst at school.

H. H. Hilton the son of a golfing father, has told how he began to play at the age of six. At eight he took part in a boys' competition at Hoylake, at 10 he won his first medal, and at 18 he was a competitor in the amateur championship. Just as early in life did Robert Harris begin his golfing career. His father was also an enthusiast, and on his summer holidays he used to Carnoustie where the boy would spend his time knocking a ball about on the spare ground of the links, picking up wrinkles from the caddies and trying to emulate their performances.

So far as the professionals are concerned they began to play almost without exception as soon as they were old enough to carry clubs as caddies. In their case, however, one curiosity is to be noted; they became professionals against the parental wish. Harry Vardon was the son of a gardener at Grouville, in sunny Jersey, and it was intended that he, too, should be a gardener. But when a course was laid out near the village, he, like the other boys, fell to the fascination of the game.

With clubs which they made from blackthorn sticks and with any old balls which they could pick up they staked out their own holes and at once became great golfers, in the making. But Harry Vardon might still have been a gardener in Jersey if se had not been fired by the success of his brother Tom, who, by the way, is now in America. Tom came to England and won some small prize. Harry believed that he was a better player than Tom, and —well, if Tom could do so well, he could do better. That was the reason Harry Vardon entered the golf world.

J. H. Taylor was trained to golf as a caddie but though it was the ambition of his boyhood days to enter the game as a professional he saw no opportunity—clubs were not so numerous in those days—and, like Vardon, he became a gardener's boy But he never ceased to take an interest in the game, and until he received his first appointment at Burnham, in Somerset, he was one of the most successful members of a working men's club at Westward Ho!

James Braid was the boy champion at Earlsberry on the Fifeshire coast, but he had practically to runaway from home to became a professional. His parents had no objection to his acting as a caddie, but as soon as he left school he was apprenticed to a joiner in a neighboring village. They sternly refused to allow him to earn his livelihood in the game. But you cannot kill the golfing spirit and a few years later James came to London to make clubs at the Army and Navy Stores.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

SHAVER—COLEMAN.

The marriage took place on Wednesday, April 30th, at 5 p.m. in St. Stephen's Church, Westmount, of Miss Anna Margaret Coleman, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Coleman, of Olivier avenue, Westmount, to Mr. Morley Edward Shaver, only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Shaver, Peterborough, Ont.

The chancel of the church was prettily decorated with pink rambler roses and daisies and the ceremony was performed by Very Rev. Dean Evans, assisted by Rev. Frank Charters.

The bride was given away by her father, and wore a gown of white satin veiled in georgette trimmed with pearls, her tulle veil being arranged under a Dutch cap of real lace caught with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and sweet peas. She was attended by her sister, Miss Alice Coleman, as maid of honor, and wore a gown of pink and white brocaded silk with black picture hat, carrying a bouquet of ophelia roses. Little Miss Martha Coleman, niece of the bride, and Miss Audrey Tod, both wearing white accordian pleated crepe de chine with poke bonnets of white tulle, and carrying baskets of sweetheart roses, were the flower girls.

The groom was assisted by Lieut. Edwin Sheahan, C.A.D.C., and Mr. Milton Coleman, brother of the bride, and Mr Edward Pelton officiated as ushers.

The bride's mother was gowned in black satin with Spanish lace coatee and wore a black picture hat with ostrich tips and corsage bouquet of purple sweet peas.

Mrs. J. W. Shaver, Peterborough, mother of the groom, wore a gown of grey satin and black hat trimmed with ostrich tips and corsage bouquet of pink sweet peas.

During the signing of the register Mr. Walter Hyman rendered "Because" and "Perfect Love."

After the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents, Olivier avenue, where Easter lilies and rambler roses decorated the drawing-room, the bride's table and dining-room being decorated with white sweet peas and maiden hair ferns.

Going away the bride wore a navy blue tricotine suit with small black hat and taupe fox furs. Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Mary Strode, aunt of the bride, of Norwich, Ont.; Capt. Chas. A. Mahoney, Kingston; Miss Anna Nash, Cornwall, and Miss Frances Preston, St. Alban's, Vt.

TWO MORE NIGHTS AT PARK STREET

EVANGELIST TORRIE'S MEETING LAST EVENING WAS BEST YET HELD

Evangelist Torrie had the inspiration of speaking to the largest week night service in Park Street Baptist Church last night. It was evidently proven no mistake was made in the decision to continue the services three more nights.

The Evangelist preached on the subject "Can a man know positively he is saved?" The service was one of the best. In the after meeting there was no trouble to get the people to take part. A great number of people participated and frequently three and four people were on their feet at once. Mrs. Torrie's solo "Choose Now," climaxed the Evangelist's sermon and made a profound impression. The choir sang two selections from the Billy Sunday book with willing effort.

There are only two nights left. A full church is expected tonight and a packed church Wednesday night. Plan and come to the last two services.

$2,500 AN ACRE ASKED FOR SIX ACRES CHAMBERLAIN PROPERTY

This is Estate's Proposition For Site For School Purposes—Board of Education's Building Committee Instructed by Board to Negotiate—$10,000 For Five Acres the Suggestion.

The Board of Education last night again took up the question of a site for the new 18 or 20 room school to relieve the congestion in South Central city. The site now in view is five acres of the Chamberlain estate at the southwest corner of Monaghan road and Sherbrooke street—531 feet on Sherbrooke street and 410 feet on the Monaghan Road—characterized by Trustee J. M. Green as an ideal location and valued by him at $2,000 the acre. According to the act govering schools, said Mr. Greene and their grounds, a school of the size intended by the Board would call for 4½ acres of land. These five acres are really the choice of the 16 acres composing the estate.

Mr. Greene moved that a committee composed of Chairman Denne, E. G. Patterson and G. N. Gordon interview the executive of the Chamberlain estate and offer $10,000 for these five acres. Should it not be possible to reach an amicable agreement coupled with an acceptable proposition from the estate in writing, then the Board to institute arbitration proceedings.

Trustee Gordon, while endorsing the resolution in general, did not approve of passing it, an action which would savor of a want of confidence in the Building Committee. And on motion of Trustees Worth and Gordon the matter was left in the Building Committee's hands to report.

Would Restrain.

A letter from Peck, Kerr and McElderry expressed surprise at the Board's action in regard to the chamberlain estate, as published in the press, and pointed out that were the 16 acres sold to the school Board, it would inflict a hardship on certain tenants who had been residents on the property for many years—they would have to vacate their premises. However, the letter went on to say there are six acres of the estate adjoining the Monaghan Road and Sherbrooke street which the Board could have at $2,500 an acre. The solicitors questioned the Board's power to expropriated and threatened to restrain by injunction should such a course be pursued.

Gone Into Question Thoroughly.

Chairman Denne pointed out that the report had gone abroad that the Board was reaching a conclusion in regard to a school site before going thoroughly into the matter. That is not correct, he said. Ever since I have been on the Board of Education the Board has been working on a proposition to relieve school conjection on the South Central School by erecting a new building. We considered the possibility of extending the present South Central site to take in the whole block. But that would only give a small area the assessed value of the property to be expropriated—16 houses—is $33,520 and the play ground would be on the street. Then we considered a block of property confined by Patterson street on the south, Adeline street on the west and Sherbrooke street on the north. But we should have but two acres of land and the 38 houses thereon are assessed at $53,680. As for the Chamberlain property now under consideration the Committee has failed time and again to secure from Executor Winch a valuation; he would make no proposition for sale whatever, and in hope of getting action from Mr. Winch, we decided to suggest expropriation proceedings. Some think sixteen acres are none too much, while others advise confining ourselves to five acres. Trustee Gordon, while admitting the Building Committee's activities, still opined that the Board as a Board had not gone thoroughly into the ques-

TREATY SHACKLES GERMANY

Paris, May 7.—The treaty of peace between twenty-seven allied and associated powers on the one hand and Germany on the other was handed to the German plenipotentiaries at Versailles today. It is the longest treaty ever drawn. It looks about eighty thousands words divided into fifteen main sections and represents the combined product of over one thousand experts working continually through a series of commissions since Jan. 16. The treaty is printed in parallel pages of English and French. It does not deal with questions affecting Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey, except in so far as binding Germany to accept any agreement reached with those former Allies.

Covenant First Clause.

Following the preamble and the deposition of the powers comes the covenant of the League of Nations as the first section of the treaty. The following sections deal with the frontiers of Germany in Europe, European political classes, naval, military and air terms, prisoners of war and military graves, responsibilities, reparations, financial terms, economic terms, aeronautic section, ports, waterways and railways, labor covenant, section on guarantees and the final clauses.

Drastic Terms For Germany.

Germany by the terms of the treaty restores Alsace Lorraine, accepts the internationalism of the Saare basin temporarily and Danzig permanently, agrees to territorial changes towards Belgium and Denmark, and in East Prussia cedes most of Upper Silesia to Poland and renounces all territorial and political rights outside Europe as to her own or her Allies' territories and especially to Morocco, Egypt, Siam, Liberia and Shangtung. The total independence of German-Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, and Poland, is also recognized. The German army reduced to one hundred thousand conscription in German territories is abolished. Forts fifty kilometers east of Rhine and raised. All importation, exportation and nearly all production of war materials are stopped, until reparation is made.

The Allied occupation of parts of Germany will be continued but the reduction will be made at the end of a three year period, if Germany fulfills her obligations. Any violation of the conditions as to the zone fifty kilometers ast of the Rhine will be regarded as active war.

Must Deliver Up Ex-Kaiser.

The German navy is reduced to six battleships, six light cruisers, twelve torpedo boats without submarines. The personnel must not be over fifteen thousand men. Germany accepts full responsibility for all the damages caused the Allied and associated governments and agreeds specially to reimburse all civilian damages beginning with the initial payment of twenty billion marks. Germany is to pay shipping damages on a ton for ton basis by the cession of a large of her merchant coasting and river fleets. She must devote economic resources to the rebuilding of the devastated regions, must demolish Heligoland, open the Kiel Canal to all nations and surrender fourteen submarine cables. She agrees to return to 1914 the most favored nation tariffs without discrimination. She will allow the Allied nations freedom to transit through her territories and agrees to accept a highly detailed provisions as to pre-war debts, unfair constitution, internationalization of roads and rivers and other economic and financial clause. She also agrees to the trial of the ex-Kaiser by an international high court. Holland to be asked to extradite Wilhelm, Germany being responsible for delivering him.

The League of Nations is accepted by the Allies as operative and by Germany in principle, but without membership. Similarly an international labor body is brought into being with permanent offices and an annual convention.

Among those to carry out peace treaty are repatriations, military, naval, air, financial and economic commissions, an international high court and military tribunals to fix responsibilities and a series of bodies for control of international river. The details of the disposition of the German fleet and cables and former German colonies, are left for solution between th Allied and associated powers. Other problems such as the laws of air and opium, arms and liquor traffic, are either agreed to in detail or set for early international action.

Parties To Treaty.

The preamble names as parties of one part the United States, the British Empire, France, Italy and Japan, described as the five Allied and Associated Powers, and Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, China, Cuba, Ecuador, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, The Hedjaz, Honduras, Liberia, Nicaragua, Panama, Portugal, Roumania, Serbia, Siam, Czecho-Slovakia, and Urugua, who, with the five above, are described as the Allied and Associated Powers, and on the other part, Germany.

State of War Ceases.

From coming into force of the present treaty the state of war will terminate. From the moment and subject to the provisions of this treaty official relations with Germany and with each of the German states will be resumed by the Allies.

The covenant of the League of Nations constitutes section one of the treaty which places upon the League many specific, in addition to its general, duties. It may question Germany at any time for violation of the neutralized zone east of the Rhine. It will work out a mandatory system to be applied to the former German colonies and decide certain of the financial and economic problems.

An international conference on labor is to be held in October under its direction and another on international control of ports, waterways and railways is foreshadowed.

Under the heading "Boundaries of Germany," the treaty states that Germany must cede to France Alsace-Lorraine, 5,600 square miles and to Belgium two small districts between Luxembourg and Holland, totalling 989 square miles.

She also cedes to Poland the south-eastern tip of Silesia beyond and including Oppeln, most of Posen and West Prussia, 27,686 square milues. She loses the sovereignity over the north-easternmost tip of East Prussia and internationalized areas about Danzig, 729 square miles, and the basin of the Saar, 738 square miles, between the western border of Rheinish Palatinate of Bavaria and southwest corner of Luxemburg, the southeastern third of East Prussia and the area between East Prussia and the Vistula is to have its nationality determined by popular vote as is to be the case in part of Schleswig.

Members of the League will be the signatories of the Covenant and other states are invited to accede who must lodge a declaration of accession without reservation with two months.

Section two deals with the constitution of the League of Nations and the validity of treaties concluded after the institution of the League. The assembly may from time to time advise members to reconsider treaties which have become inapplicable or involve danger.

PETERBORO'S SCHOOL TEACHERS ASK FOR INCREASED SALARIES

Maximum of $2,200 For Gentlemen Principals, $1,700 for Vice-Principals—Maximum Salary of $1,200 For Lady Teachers.

The city school teachers last evening submitted to the Board of Education a schedule of wages they respectfully asked consideration of and which they hoped would come in force next school term.

The schedule for principals (male) asked is from $1,700 to $2,200 a year graded upward from the minimum wage during a period covering six years. Of course, this does not prohibit a principal enjoying at a salary in excess of the minimum rate. For vice-principals a minimum salary of $1,200 and a maximum of $1,700 was asked, also graded over a period of six years.

The lady teachers are asking a minimum of $600 and a maximum of $1,200, the scheduled increase per year to be $100. The ladies in their communication submitted the following salaries paid elsewhere, which, together with bonuses and war grants are not considered high:

Toronto, $1,400 maximum, the increase each year $100; Hamilton, $1,200; Windsor, $1,200; Port Arthur, $1,100; Fort William, $1,100; North Bay Bay, $1,100; Brockville, $1,100; Ottawa, $1,000; St. Thomas, $1,000; Kingston, $1,000.

The ladies also contended that Peterborough ranks with Guelph and Belleville as paying the lowest teachers' salaries from Quebec to the Pacific coast. They likewise thanked the Board for its bonus of last January.

The Board will pronounce on these demands later.

War Savings Prize.

Mr. Jones for the National War Savings Committee, wrote that a gentleman whose name is to be kept unknown, has donated several pictures of a panaramic view of the British, French and American fleets at Quebec for competition in a war savings or thrift stamps competition, and one of these handsome pictures is to go to a school in Peterborough. The public is to vote for which school is to have the prize by the purchase of stamps from school children, the children's personal purchases also to count. At least that is the idea conveyed in the communication. This navel campaign will extend from May 24 to May 29. The matter was referred to the Finance Committee for action.

Free From Infection.

The school nurse's monthly report declared the schools to be practically free from infectious diseases.

Inspector's Report.

High School Inspector Roger's report was on the whole complimentary to the Collegiate Institute, its staff and students. He was impressed with the uniform excellence of the scholar's work! it is a good school, well managed. The inspector, however, suggested a new wing to accommodate gymnasium exercises, household science and manual training. This went to the Supervision Committee.

Miscellaneous.

Mrs. W. H. Denham wrote thanking the Board for its expressions of sympathy in the death of Mr. W. H. Denham.

Capt. J. E. R. Munro, in reply to an invitation by the Board to resume duties on the teaching staff, said he would be pleased to accept the offer. He expected to be discharged from military service in September.

Portrait of Hero.

Principal H. R. H. Kenner wrote that Mr. L. LeBar has presented the Collegiate Institute with a picture of his son, Louis, a pupil of the school, who lost his life in the war. This portrait will be hanged in the school's honor gallery. The gift will be acknowledged with expressions of sympathy.

Must Attend School.

Truant Officer Miller reported a couple of children who would not attend school, and whose mothers paid no heed to his instruction that they must do so. Their fathers are soldiers overseas, and he did not like to prosecute.

On motion of Trustees Worth and Gordon the officer will be instructed to take action to enforce attendance.

School Supplies.

On motion of Trustees Neal and Cameron, the Supervision Committee were authorized to advertise for tenders for school supplies and text books and Collegiate Institute supplies, the lowest tender for approved goods to be accepted.

Members Present.

Chairman Roland Denne, Trustees G. O. Cameron, J. W. Greene, E. G. Patterson, J. W. Worth, G. N. Gordon, J. A. McKone, A. A. Fowler, T. B. McGrath and Dr. Neal.

ALL HAVE MONEY AND ARE HAPPY

S QUOTATION BY BELLEVILLE PAPER OF PETERBOROUGH CONDITIONS.

Mr. W. D. Ketcheson, formerly of Belleville, now of this city, has returned from a recent visit to his former home. The Daily Ontario, of Belleville, in referring to Mr. Ketcheson's visit, has this to say: "He is greatly enthused with conditions in Peterborough, which he describes as the most progressive city in Canada at the present time. The tax roll for the year 1918 is ready for returning and will be returned in a few days. Everybody seems to have money and to be happy, but much of this favorable condition Mr. Ketcheson ascribes to sensible, forehanded management of Peterborough's financial affairs."

FORD CAR AND TRUCK COLLIDE

ALLEGED THE DRIVER OF UTILITIES TRUCK DID NOT GIVE RIGHT-OF-WAY.

At 4.20 yesterday afternoon a Utilities truck, driven by A. C. Parks, and a Ford car in charge of its owner, J. W. Hughes, collided at the corner of George and Charlotte streets. The truck sustained no damage, but the Ford had to be towed into the Duffus Garage for repairs. The police contend that Parks was in fault by not keeping to the right hand curb when turning west on Simcoe street, thus causing the collision with Hughes, who was driving south on George street. The latter did all in his power to prevent his vehicle from running into the truck, but without success—then Parks should have, the traffic bylaw, given the right of way to the Ford car. It is affirmed that there is nothing to show that Parks made any effort to stop and consequently he drove across the right of way of Hughes, whose car ran into the side of the truck. The front of the Ford was considerably damaged.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 7.—Vittorio Orlando, the Italian Premier, and Baron Sonnino arrived in Paris from Rome this morning. The premier resumed his seat in the Council of Four. At a basis of resuming participation in the peace negotiations, Orlando accepted the proposal that Italy administer Fiume as a mandatory of the League of Nations until 1923, after which Fiume will revert to Italian sovereignty.

SAYS PRESIDENT BACKS UP IRELAND

UNIONISTS RESENT INTERFERENCE OF AMERICANS IN PURELY DOMESTIC PROBLEMS.

London, May 7.—The visit of representatives of American-Irish societies to Ireland is creating great interest in Sinn Fein circles there, and equal indignation in Unionist quarters in Ireland and England. It is believed the mission has the sanction of President Wilson and was granted passports from Paris to Ireland at his request. There were also reports that Premier Lloyd George promised toreceive the delegates of the Irish-American societies and advised them to visit Belfast.

There is considerable mystery about the whole affair, and it is unknown whether Premier Lloyd George has been in communication with the visitors at all. There is one report that he promised to receive them, but he cancelled his engagement for the interview. A question was addressed to the government in the House of Commons on Monday with a view to establishing whether the envors are accredited by the United States Government, and also to establish their exact status. It was also asked if the Premier had

ANOTHER MOVE FOR STATE OWNERSHIP

GOVERNMENT MAY BE ASKED TO TAKE OVER PACKING INDUSTRY.

Toronto, May 7.—Today may witness a battle to induce the government to take over the packing industries in Toronto. This was not given out in just these words, but Lou Braithwaite, business manager for the Meat Cutters' Union, stated last night that the executive committee of the union would meet Hon. Senator Gideon Robertson in an effort to bring about either a recognition of trades unionism by the packers or the the transfer of the packing industries from private ownership to that of government control. "This is a straight fight for the priciples of trade unionism," said Mr. Braithwaite, "and if the packers accept this principle we shall be willing to consider a board of arbitration, open session. Failing this action on the part of the packing houses, we shall directly request the government to take over the packing industries in Toronto, as we believe this will be in the interests of the public at large. However, let it be thoroughly understood that immediately the packers recognize our association, which represents trade unionism, we shall at once take up the discussion of our agreement clause by clause. We have no desire to interfere with production and always desired [illegible] settlement of our grievances with the least possible trouble."

Another member of the union stated that the executive would also demand not only the recognition of the Meat Cutters' Union as such, but also the principle of the 44 hour week.

The officials of the union are emphatic in their statement that the strike is of a purely economic nature. It is realized at the same time that if the government is induced to take over the packing industries of Toronto this will have been accomplished through the most constitutional means, and will have been brought about not by any political ambitions of the strikers, but through the obstinate refusal of the employers to recognize trade unionism.

Strike Breakers Met

Yesterday between 600 and 1000 employes of the Swift Canadian Company who are out on strike were congregated in the fields and roadways surrounding the plant at the corner of Weston road and West St. Clair avenue.

The strikers were gathered to prevent the entrance of any strike-breakers.

The strikers have more than 400 pickets on duty at various points throughout the city, and reports sent in from several of these are said to indicate the general trend of events. A constable in the vicinity of the Matthews-Blackwell Co. was reported to have escorted three strike

RAILWAY BILL HAS PASSED COMMONS

ALL ROADS EXCEPT C.P.R. TO BE UNDER STATE CONTROL

Ottawa, May 7.—The Canadian National Railways is now an accomplished fact. The principle of public ownership was acclaimed in the house of commons by Sir Thomas White, and loyally supported by the Unionist members of parliament. The bill to place all the government railways under one corporation, the directors of which will be named by the government, was passed by a majority of 54. The acting premier more than intimated that it was only a matter of time till all railways passed under state control, and Mr. F. S. Scott, Unionist members for South Waterloo, advocated the immediate nationalization of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.

The final vote came after a long debate, in the course of which several amendments were offered by the opposition and voted down. The first amendment was moved by Hon. W. S. Fielding, and provided that all the receipts of the railway company should pass into the consolidated revenue fund and that all expenditures should first be authorized by parliament. His contended that this was the parliamentary system and that any departure from it would be fraught with danger to the country. He declared that the amendment was not a want of confidence motion, and called for support from the Unionist benches.

Government Determined.

Sir Thomas White, speaking for the government, stated that the amendment could not be accepted. He said that the government had determined to place the control of the government railways under a corporation, and the affairs of that corporation should be managed in the same way as were the affairs of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. The directors would all be men of high stand-

FRANCE'S SAFETY IS NOW ASSURED

BIG THREE POWERS WILL ENTER INTO SPECIAL COMPACT TODAY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 7.—The Echo de Paris says it has learned that Great Britain, France and the United States have concluded an agreement giving supplementary guarantees for France and security for the peace treaty. It adds that the heads of the countries involved will draft this additional pact today. It will not be secret.

German delegates to the Peace Congress declare they will sign the treaty, but that Germany will not pay any indemnity. In the discussion of the peace terms German officials have always drawn a distinction between reparation and indemnity, construing the latter in effect as punitive damages.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

WEDNESDAY, MAY 7, 1919

AS THE STAR SEES IT.

(Toronto Star.)

An eight-hour day is a long enough day for any man who is engaged in real work.

Industries which are not on the eight-hour working day ought to consult with those which are.

It seems strange in this year of the twentieth century that there should be anybody found who denies any sort of labor the right to organize, form a union, and a collective bargaining as to wages and hours and conditons of work.

COMPETITION WITH THE UNITED STATES.

CANADIAN MANUFACTURERS complain that the workingmen of this country have raised the rate of wages so high that the employers are no longer able to compete with rival concerns in the United States, the manufacturers there flooding this country with their products.

There certainly must be something wrong with the manufacturing methods of this country if a tariff of thirty-five per cent. or thereabouts is not sufficient to give the employers a chance to hold their own market. Wages are higher in the United States than they are in Canada, and in all the large industries the hours of labor are shorter. Any government report will bear out this contention. That being the case, a line of argument heard at the meeting of the City Council Monday night falls through.

The truth of the matter is that the American manufacturers seem to have been quicker in the matter of adapting themselves to after-the-war conditions. They realized that the enormous profits that were made in certain lines during the war could not be maintained and they governed themselves accordingly. With characteristic enterprise they set out to secure wherever possible the markets of the world, and it is a well-known fact that plenty of manufacturers in the United States ran their business at a loss for months after the signing of the armistice in order to keep their staffs at work and to make places for the returning soldiers.

If Canadian Labor was paid abnormal wages in some cases during the war, it must be recalled tht the profits in some lines of industry were also excessive. If there is to be a reduction, then the reduction must be general and not limited to a cut in wages. The manufacturers must accept a lower rate of profit if wages are to be reduced, and the present prices of foodstuffs and other necessities must also be lowered.

THE ISSUE OF THE HOUR.

NONE BUT A CONSUMMATE egotist would assume to offer advice on the present nation-wide—yes, world-wide—issue between Capital and Labor. When a conflict is at a white heat of intensity the time is not opportune for the volunteering of counsel, whether that counsel be delivered from a soap box, a barrel in a grocery store or in the columns of a newspaper. The journals in the larger centres, Toronto especially, with characteristic sang froid, essay an explanation, but in Toronto the trouble is rather more acute than elsewhere. Little attention is paid to the boastings or the pedantry of a doctor all of whose patients persevere in the habit of dying. No man can speak with authority on the question of household hygiene so long as the most of his family are down with typhoid fever.

The present situation is unparalleled in the history of the world. There seems no method available for checking the new force that has arisen, and the probability is that it must be allowed to run its course and to exhaust itself by its own energy. But is it not just possible that considerable of the fault can be laid at the door of Capital itself?

The return of peace has found the nations of the earth more than ever disposed to recognize the rights of the workingmen. The League of Nations has incorporated in its covenant an agrement to which all the signatories to that covenant are parties. There is to be a united effort to place the workingmen upon a higher and a common plane. The governmens of the world have at last awakened to a sense of their responsibilities and duties so long neglected are now to be performed.

Lloyd George has placed Great Britain in a new attitude with regard to the workingmen, and the premiers of all other countries in the League are following his example. Premier Borden on behalf of Canada helped to form the new labor legislation, and the results of those international negotiations are now being noted in this country.

A non-partisan commission has been formed to bring Labor and Capital closer together, to make a more equitable division of the wealth which Labor produces. Perhaps this is a step in advance of the times, but it is at least a move in the right direction and indicates the tendency of the times. The very groundwork of this commission's task is to not only acknowledge the right of workingmen to organize but to encourage them to do so. That is simply following out the idea that has been promulgated by the League of Nations. The capitalists have their union for self protection. There can be no satisfactory negotiations carried on between an organised body and a mob.

It is a noticeable feature of nearly all the present day strikes that the primary insistence of the men is for a recognition of their union. That is the first claim advanced, the demand for increased wages and shorter hours being in the majority of cases of secondary consideration. Any industry, any municipality that challenges the right of men to organise is really defeating the very altruistic purpose of the League of Nations and the Government of Canada as well. The Labor question will never be solved by the wrangle of wage-earners with their employers. Government action is necessary, and municipalities and private concerns alike should consider well before throwing obstacles in the way of a movement that has been inaugurated by the leading statesmen of the civilised world.

THE BURDEN OF THE AGED.

SOME YEARS AGO a celebrated physician was quoted as saying that when a man had reached the age of forty-five—that being the figure, if memory serves us—he had lost his value to the world as a wealth producer and that in the general interests he should be put out of the way by the ether route. If this statement was ever made—which the doctor denies—it was at least a more merciful measure than that proposed by some of the economists of the present age, who, if they employed an old man at all, would cut his wages to the lowest point possible and give him the alternative of taking the offer or leaving it. The basic blunder in this policy is the assumption that a man, after reaching a certain age is of little use as a workman, which is by no means true in all cases. At all events, there is more mercy in drugging a man into eternal slumber than in pauperising him in his old age.

Of course, the man who pays no heed when Opportunity offers or who hides his single talent in a napkin, has only himself to blame. But Opportunity does not knock at every portal, not every man is entrusted with even a single talent. Humanity is as Providence created it, some designed to hew the wood and draw the water all their days, otherwise the labor of the world would never be performed. Is there not really some of the spirit of true Christianity in the attitude of Labor? If several hundred men of all ages are employed in a certain plant, an attempt is made to equalize the compensation, to give the incompetent a chance to live, he efficient worker being supposed to make up for what the others lack. Men in dull seasons have consented to reduced hours with proportionately less pay in order to give every one a chance to work. That is one of the outstanding principles of unionism. There is a fraternity among organized workmen that is unknown in other walks of life.

Any student of social or political economy knows that after all the question of high or low wages is really of little importance. The price of commodities, the cost of living, follows upward or downward, the pay schedule. The workingmen who are in receipt of good pay do not corner the money of the country. The wages which he receives soon return to the ordinary channels of trade. The merchant who employs a large force of clerks will find customers among his own staff in proportion to the compensation that he allows them. If wages are increased, that increase is paid, not by the employer, but by those who produce the latters' goods. The question is as broad as it is long. The main point is to have wages uniform. In the case of concerns engaged in the same line of industry in a community there can be no stability in the conditions unless the same rate of wages is paid in all alike, and the same is true the country over. And this uniformity, so desirable, can best be effected by organization, both by the employers and the employed.

MEANINGLESS TITLES.

(Wobdstock Sentinel-Review.)

So many people are wearing titles without any legitimate claim to them, and so many, who have earned recognition, are without it, that in the eyes of a discerning public the title has ceased to have any meaning.

Canada's Open Door Policy

In the measure that healthy feeding is important to the human body in that measure is healthy immigration important to a country such as ours. This has been wisely sensed by the attention now being paid to immigration in the House at Ottawa. Hon. J. A. Calder centralized the wishes and the opinions of the people of Canada when he said that the time had come when Canada should consider whether the policy of the open door was to continue, and that, at all costs the citizens of Canada should be protected.

The war has opened our eyes as to who are desirable and who are undesirable citizens. We have been able to sift those who consider Canada first and their country of origin second from those who put their fatherland first and the country of their adoption second. There has been much opportunity for arriving at the accuracy of the process, the finding has been made note of in the national account boook, and should serve as a guide and a warning in regard to our future policies of immigration.

The statement made by Mr. Calder that the policy of immigration should be to encourage the immigration of farmers with necessary capital to enable them to establish themselves was wise in itself but not all sufficient. The statement, however, was made a reassuring one as it affected this class of immigration, by what may be regarded as a corollary, that the Government believed the time had come when for a time the entry of certain classes of people into the west should be limited.

It was a grave indictment, and, in the circumstances, a true and justifiable one which the Minister made when, in reply to his own question, he said that Canada had done nothing for the emigrants she had invited. He did not too strongly emphasize this statement when he added, "Our policy in that respect has been simply tragic. We have done nothing to familiarise them with our laws. We have had no policy to Canadianize them." In this respect there is hope for the future, in the Minister's words, that the policy must be that if people were invited they should be given every possible assistance to enable them to became good Canadian citizens. To confess to shortcomings makes the future avoidance of them easier. But in the process of Canadianizing let us make it our business to make the task not too difficult by eliminating those who would be neither amenable to absorb, nor willing to imbibe our traditions and our teachings.

OF SLOW GROWTH

Eye troubles—lessening powers of vision—are generally of very slow growth. Correct these defects in the early stages with properly fitted glasses and you save yourself much time, much money, much worry and often serious trouble.

If you neglect the slight eye trouble to-day, it may become a serious eye trouble tomorrow.

Mr. Business Man!

Are you interested in Peterborough?

You have a stake in this city because your interests are centered here.

Your personal prosperity and that of your children depends mainly upon the prosperity of Peterborough.

If you make good in your field of work, it's because you improve and cultivate your field—which in this case is the city.

The larger the city the greater your business opportunities: the better the city the greater will be your enjoyment of and pride in it.

The upbuilding of Peterborough is attainable not by what has been heretofore proposed and discussed, but by what is to be actually done by you and all of us together as a Board of Trade.

In order to convert our plans and ambitions, as citizens and business men, into concrete realities, we must have team-work —one for all and all for one — in a steady get-there push to make Peterborough bigger and better.

Back up the work-together spirit of Peterborough. Pay something to be a worker. Send your application for membership in the Board to President J. J. Turner, at the new rooms over the Dominion Bank. Help to make a "showing of hands" at the general meeting of the Board on Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

CHICAGO WOMEN CHARGED WITH ELECTION FRAUDS

Three of Them Who Acted as Inspectors at Recent Voting Are Indicted by Grand Jury.

Chicago May 7—In a sensational report the March grand jury returned indictments against seven men and three women in connection with alleged vote frauds All the ten except one man, are election officials A politician who holds a high position in the office of the county treasurer originally was hit by the grand jurors, but the inquisitorial body finally reconsidered its action and voted a "no bill." The political leader lives on the south side.

Democrats of both the "regular" and the "antis" appear to be included in the indictments. The report of the grand juryscathingly denounces the election machinery of Cook county and thus adds new fuel to the election fraud investigation feud raging between State's Attorney Hoyne and Judge Scully of the County court. The indictment of two woman judges of election and one woman clerk caused a stir in political circles.

The March grand jury should not be confused with the special grand jury that is investigating election frauds. The report deals with the mayoral primary contest in which Thomas Carey was a candidate for the democratic nomination for mayor. The "regulars" in the democracy have charged that the foreman of the grand jury is a friend of Carey.

Ten Who Are Indictd.

Those against whom indictments were returned are:

George Van Lent, said to have voted illegally in the 18th ward The evidence against him was obtained by the Citizens' Association.

James J. Ryan Peter Hennessy, clerks of election in the 4th precinct of the 5th ward; Mary Kennefick and John Dart, judges of election in the same precinct.

Mary O'Brien and Ellsworth Parker and William C Krumbine judges of election in the 7th precinct of the 5th ward.

James B. Downey and Lillian Voss, clerks in the same precinct.

Wife of Policeman.

Mrs Kenefick is the wife of a policeman employed by the sanitary district In both the 4th and 7th precincts of the 5th ward it is charged that votes were taken from one republican candidate for the mayoralty nomination and added to another. In the 4th precinct it is said that 220 votes were counted, while only 200 were actually cast.

Hoyne's Aids End Indictment.

Assistant State's Attorneys John Own and John Prystalski went before the grand jury and caused the reconsideration of the indictment against the political leader. That this was done was not a surprise to men who know the man in question, since he is credited with playing a careful game of politics and the state's attorney's office said the evidence was weak in the case against him.

Incidentally the grand jurors declare they have been "astonished at the prevalence and apparent increase in crime in the city."

Jumping into the vote fraud scandal that has been stirring the citizenship for weeks, the grand jurors subscribe to this indictment of election machinery:

"We find in Chicago in our investigations of vote fraud the most flagrant violations of the law and the most notorious disregard for the rights of our citizens.

Haley Fiske, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., New York, has directed that all employes in the head office must have their teeth examined and cleaned twice a year.

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and Fresh Every Day

Drink a glass of real hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestoone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, billious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have salow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

tion. He was sure that 40 minutes had not been sufficient time for the Board to become thoroughly conversant with the situation; if so, why this right-about face from 16 acres to five Mr. Gordon considered Mr Greene's choice as a good one, but the only question is are we too precipitate Then he questioned if an 18 or 20 room school is needed and suggested a smaller building later on, and an annex to the King Edward school to answer existing conditions, as well worth considering. He considered $10.000 a moderate valuation of the site advocated by Mr Greene Strikes, he concluded, and increased wages and cost of material are developing in a pretentious scale and he did not consider this period of inflated valuations the time to issue debentures for a 20 room school He leaned toward the idea of an annex to the King Edward School and a 12 or 14 room new building later on In any event, this whole question has not been dealt with in a thorough manner justifying my forming any definite conclusion. There has not been sufficient facts and data submitted to the Board.

Diligent Service.

Trustee Patterson differed from Mr Gordon and concurred in the chairman's statement The public, he said, had been deligently served. Personally, I have endeavored to get a satisfactory reply from Mr. Winch as to the Chamberlain estate, but always failed.

Trustee Worth favored the five acre site proposition.

Dr Neal could hardly see where the Board or Committee had gone into this question hurriedly. Instead of having been precipitate we have not been fast enough in this vital educational problem. He seconded Mr Green's resolution.

Inflated Prices.

Talking under this head Trustee Patterson did not consider present prices for labor or material "inflated" in the real meaning of the word. "Canada will never go back to pre-war conditions."

Trustee Greene's resolution was lost and the matter left in the Building Committee's hands to report further

On motion of Dr. Neal the Supervision Committee was empowered to arrange for an educational exhibit at the Industrial Fair.

These are a few among many strike incidents reported.

A unique feature of the strike is the organization of a large number of Chinese at the offices of the union, 163 Church street. This is understood to be the first time Chinese have been organized by any local of the American Federation of Labor east of Winnipeg.

WOMEN TEACHERS' GUILD EXTEND SCOPE OF UNION

Plan is to Secure the Minimum Salary Rat Throughout Ontario—Local Teachers Ar Pleased With Prospect Under New Edu cational Regime.

The April meeting of the Women Teacher's Guild was held on Tuesday evening last in the Central School. The principal item of business was the report of the delegate to the conference of the Federation of Women Teachers' Association of Ontario, held in connection with O. E. A. during Easter week.

The local Guild is one of the foremost in the Federation, and one of the two representatives elected for the eastern district is Miss Ross of the Peterborough Public School Staff.

Of the twelve thousand public school teachers in Ontario over eleven thousand are women, and the Federation recently organized has already an enrolment of nearly half that number.

The aim of the Federation is the promotion of the professional and financial status of the Women Teachers of Ontario. A committee is now working on a scheme to fix a minimum salary throughout the province The Government has allotted a large sum of money to help the poorer rural districts raise their standard, and the Minister of Education has assured the teachers of his hearty co-operation.

Teachers and inspectors every where are welcoming the new movement with enthusiasm. Widesprea recognition of valuable service an higher salaries will greatly minimiz the evil of constant changing o teachers. There will also be draw into the profession the best an ablest of our young women.

Teachers throughout the provinc may receive any advice or informa tion desired from the Executive o the Federation before seeking ne positions in order to eliminate th possibility of one teacher under bid ding another.

The members of the Guild feel tha the united effort being made by thi organization is a considerable ste towards a solution of the very grav problem caused by the spirit of un rest in the teaching profession o today.

After this report had been receiv ed a program of an interesting char acter followed. It consisted of pa pers given by several members of th Guild, dealing with the writings o some of the most prominent Canad ian authors. Vocal solos were als rendered by two of the teachers

FIRE ESCAPE WANTED FOR THE KING EDWARD SCHOOL

Three Storey Building —Wooden Stairs— No Escape From Top Floor in Case of Fire.

The Board of Education decided last night to go into the question of fire escapes for the King Edward School.

Trustee Fowler covered this question in his report of the Property Committee, which read:

Your Property Committee beg to report and recommend as follows:

1st That your committee be authorized to have fire escapes placed on the King Edward School as soon as satisfactory arrangements can be made

2nd That your committee be authorized to advertise for tenders for the fuel required for the ensuing year, with power to award the contract.

Trustee Fowler moved the adoption of the report.

The committee was authorized to advertise for tenders for coal.

What is the Use

As to fire escapes, Trustee Patterson asked what is the use of erecting one at the King Edward School? They are only in use in warm weather, he said, for in this city the winters are so severe with so much snow and ice, that escapes are useless unless enclosed. It would be positively dangerous for children alarmed by fire to use, in winter iron escapes open to the elements. The steps are at such times, covered with a mass of ice."

Trustee Greene, in seconding Fowler's motion said fire escapes are very necessary The question of having them enclosed could be considered by the Board. He would suggest that they be enclosed with an iron screen in protection from the elements. At King Edward School, a three storey building with wooden stairs, some provision for the escape of the children from the top floor should be made. If we never have a fire, so much the better; but we will have provided for such a possibility, and it is our duty to do so. As Mr. Gordon remarked, 300 children lost their lives in a school fire in Quebec recently and 120 suffered the same fate in a New York School."

European Methods

Trustee Worth: "Why confine ourselves to the idea of iron fire escapes, open or closed. Why not adopt similar ones to those used in Europe. I saw one in Hamburg, Germany, made of rubber sheeting. It could be rolled up and kept near a window and if wanted unrolled and suspended from the window. It then formed a line down which the little ones could slide in safety.

The motion was changed to read that the Property Committee bring in a detailed report on a fire escape for King Edward School.

PLAN TO USE WING OF ARMOURIES FOR COL. INSTITUTE GYMNASIUM

This is Suggestion of Trustee Patterson —May Interview Minister of Militia.

The Y.M.C.A. are asking the Board of Education for increased rental for use of their gymnasium by P. C. I. boys.

Trustee Patterson pointed out to the Board last night that it had been suggested to him that the Minister of Militia might be approached for the free use of the north wing of the armories, now that militarism is ended The city, he understood, had paid $30,000 toward the site on which the armories stand and he was led to conclude that no objection would be made to the use of the wing in question by the P.C.I. for gymnasium, household science and manual training purposes. This would save adding a wing to the Institute as suggested by Inspector Rogers, and he would propose that a deputation go to Ottawa and interview the Minister of Militia on this subject. "It seems to me," he concluded, "that you'll get this concession for the asking at a nominal rental of $1 a year."

Trustee Worth: "I don't like the idea of a Board like this humiliating itself by depending upon some other department for the free use of its accommodation for school purposes."

On motion of Trustee Gordon this matter went to the Supervision Committee for consultation with Principal Kenner and the Inspector of High Schools with power to interview the Minister of Militia should such a cause seem advisable.

To Montreal And Return By Auto

Mr. C. R. Banks returned last night from a 1,300-mile motor trip to Montreal and return. The journey was made in a Willys-Knight Overland car and without mishap or inconvenience in any shape whatever. The actual travelling time consumed was about five days. Mr. Banks reports the conditons of the roads as follows: To Belleville, good; from Belleville to Brockville, bad; from Morristown to Montreal, paved all the way. One can travel from Canada's metropolis to Cape Vincent, N. Y., without leaving road pavement.

Stop dandruff and double beauty of your hair for few cents.

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a small bottle of "Danderine" at any drug store for a few cents, pour a little in your hand and rub it into the scalp. After several applications the hair stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff. Your hair appears soft, glossy and twice as thick and abundant. Try it!

The Gods of Mars

By

EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

A few more strokes brought me to a point where my feet touched the floor, and soon thereafter I was above the water level entirely and racing like mad along the corridor, searching for the first doorway that would lead me to Issus.

If I could not have Dejah Thoris again I was at least determined to avenge her death, nor would any life satisfy me other than that of the fiend incarnate who was the cause of such immeasurable suffering upon Barsoom.

Sooner than I had expected I came to what appeared to me to be a sudden exit into the temple above. It was at the right side of the corridor, which ran on probably to other entrances to the pile above.

Without waiting to be again discovered and thwarted, I ran quickly up the short, steep incline and pushed open the doorway at its end.

The portal swung slowly in, and before it could be slammed against me I sprang into the chamber beyond.

Though not yet dawn, the room was brilliantly lighted. Its sole occupant lay prone upon a low couch at the farther side, apparently in sleep.

Cautiously I approached the recumbent figure on noiseless feet. Closer and closer I came to it, but I had crossed but little more than half the chamber when the figure stirred and, as I sprang, rose and faced me.

At first an expression of terror overspread the features of the woman who confronted me, then startled incredulity, hope, thanksgiving.

My heart pounded within my breast as I advanced toward her. Tears came to my eyes.

The words that would have poured forth in a perfect torrent choked in my throat as I opened my arms and took into them once more the woman I loved—Dejah Thoris, princess of Helium.

CHAPTER XVI.

Victory and Defeat.

"JOHN CARTER! John Carter!" she sobbed, with her dear head upon my shoulder. "Even now I can scarce believe the witness of my own eyes. When the girl, Thuvia, told me that you had returned to Barsoom I listened, but I could not understand, for it seemed that such happiness would be impossible for one who had suffered so in silent loneliness for all these long years! At last, when I realized that it was truth and then came to know the awful place in which I was held prisoner, I learned to doubt that even you could reach me here.

"As the days passed and moon after moon went by without bringing even the faintest rumor of you, I resigned myself to my fate. And now that you have come scarce can I believe it.

"For an hour I have heard the sounds of conflict within the palace. I knew not what they meant, but I have hoped against hope that it might be the men of Helium, headed by my prince.

"And tell me—what of Carthoris, our son?"

"He was with me less than an hour since, Dejah Thoris," I replied. "It must have been he whose men you have heard battling within the precincts of the temple.

"Where is Issus?" I asked suddenly.

Dejah Thoris shrugged her shoulders.

"She sent me under guard to this room just before the fighting began within the temple walls. She said that she would send for me later. She seemed very angry and somewhat fearful. Never have I seen her act in so uncertain and almost terrified a manner.

"Now I know that it must have been because she had learned that John Carter, prince of Helium, was approaching to demand an accounting of her for the imprisonment of his princess."

The sounds of conflict, the clash of arms, the shouting and the hurrying of many feet came to us from various parts of the temple. I knew that I was needed there, but I dared not leave Dejah Thoris, nor dared I take her with me into the turmoil and danger of battle.

At last I bethought me of the pits from which I had just emerged. Why not secrete her there until I could return and fetch her away in safety and forever from this awful place? I explained my plan to her.

For a moment she clung to me.

"I cannot bear to be parted from you now even for a moment, John Carter," she said. "I shudder at the thought of being alone again where that terrible creature might discover me. You do not know her.

"None can imagine her ferocious cruelty who has not witnessed her daily acts for over half a year. It has taken me nearly all this time to realize even the things that I have seen with my own eyes."

"I shall not leave you, then, my princess," I replied.

She was silent for a moment; then she drew my face to hers and kissed me.

"Go, John Carter," she said. "Our son is there and the soldiers of Helium, fighting for the Princess of Helium. Where they [illegible]

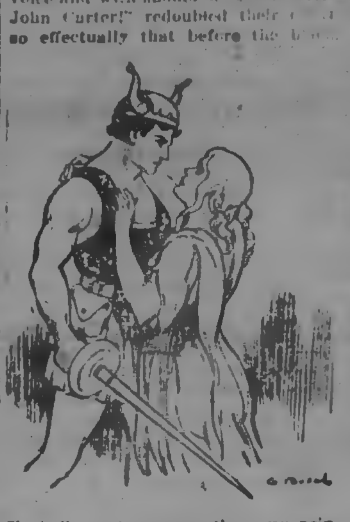
"I must not [illegible] but of them and of my [illegible] I may not stand in the [illegible] Hide me in the pits and [illegible]

I led her to the [illegible] I had entered the [illegible] low. There I pressed [illegible] me, and then, though it [illegible] to do it and filled me [illegible] blackest shadows [illegible] ing, I guided her [illegible] kissed her once again [illegible] door upon her [illegible]

Without hesitation [illegible] from the chamber [illegible] the greatest tumult [illegible] dozen chambers had I [illegible] I came upon the [illegible] struggle.

The blacks were massed at [illegible] trance to a great chamber [illegible] were attempting to [illegible] progress of a body of [illegible] the inner sacred precincts of the temple.

As I struck the first blow I [illegible] aloud, "For Helium!" And [illegible] rained cut after cut upon the [illegible]prised warriors, while the [illegible] out took heart at the sound [illegible] voice and with shouts of "[illegible] John Carter!" redoubled their [illegible] so effectually that before the b[illegible] could recover from their temporary demoralization their ranks were broken and the red men had burst into the chamber.



"I shall not leave you, then, my princess," I replied.

Five hundred men fought there that day, the black man against the red. No man asked quarter or gave it. As though by common consent they fought as though to determine once and for all their right to live in accordance with the law of the survival of the fittest.

I think we all knew that upon the outcome of this battle would hinge forever the relative positions of these two races upon Barsoom. It was a battle between the old and the new, but not for once did I question the outcome of it.

With Carthoris at my side I fought for the red men of Barsoom and for their total emancipation from the throttling bondage of a hideous superstition. Suddenly a sight met my gaze which sent a wave of exultation over me.

"Look!" I cried. "Men of the Black Pirates, look!"

For an instant the fighting ceased, and with one accord every eye turned in the direction I had indicated, and the sight they saw was one no man of the Black Pirates had ever imagined could be.

Across the gardens, from side to side stood a wavering line of black warriors, while beyond them and forcing them ever back was a great horde of green warriors astride their mighty thoats. And as we watched one fiercer and more grimly terrible than his fellows rode forward from the rear, and as he came he shouted some fierce command to his terrible legion.

It was Tars Tarkas, jeddak of Thark, and as he couched his great forty foot metal shod lance we saw his warriors do likewise. Then it was that we interpreted his command.

WILLARD MUST SCORE K. O. TO BE A REAL CHAMPION

Looks Like Reno For Bout and if Dempsey Should Stay Twenty-Five Rounds the Titles Holder Will Have No Standing in Fans' Eye-

New York, May 6.— Now that the ways have been greased, it's almost a copper-riveted cinch that Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey will meet at Reno, Nev., on July 4.

That's only a few months away and time flies fast.

So close does the fighting time appear that already in boxing circles they are discussing the chances of the two.

The boxing law in Nevada limits all fights to twenty-five rounds, so that the Willard Dempsey affair will not go beyond that distance, even though both men should be able and willing to go farther than that.

The predictions on the fight therefore are based on a bout of that distance.

With the place and conditions always agreed on, most of the "wise men" of the fight world are predicting a walk-over for big Jess. But the wise men are not always correct in their prognostications.

The wise men picked Ryan to beat Sullivan but the Boston boy won hands down.

The wise men picked Sullivan to beat Corbet at New Orleans but the Californian won about as he pleased.

The wise men picked Jeffries to beat Johnson but the colored gentleman had no difficulty in bringing home the bacon.

The wise men picked Johnson to whip Willard, but big Jess whipped Jack badly.

The wise men pick Willard to beat Dempsey, and that's where we stand today.

I have already picked Dempsey to win.

That is to say, I do not believe that Willard will be able to put the challenger away in twenty five rounds.

If he fails to do this, Willard will stand disgraced. A tie will do him no good. He must whip Dempsey so decisively that the latter will have no loop or hingle to hang excuse on. Failing to do this Willard's prestige and standing as the champion will have vanished in a night.

In brief, Dempsey has everything to gain and nothing to lose in this battle.

All Over Ten Rounds

It should be no difficulty for him to last the twenty-five scheduled rounds, and to last that long is to him as good as a victory.

I say it should be no trouble for Dempsey to last the twenty-five rounds for the reason that in every single one of the great championship fights fought under the Marquis of Queensberry rules the challenger has lasted more than ten rounds.

Sullivan, the first champion to lose under the new rules, lasted twenty-one rounds against Corbet.

When Corbet lost to Fitzsimmons it took the challenger fourteen rounds to win and Fitzsimmons won then by a lucky punch.

It took Jeffries just eleven rounds to win the championship from Fitzsimmons.

Jeffries in turn lost to Jack Johnson at Reno, but it took Jack fifteen rounds to turn the trick.

Johnson fell before Willard, but for twenty rounds the negro gave the other fellow as good as was sent.

So in every one of the deciding fights for the world's championship that have taken place since the Marquis of Queensberry rules went into effect, it has taken the challenger over ten rounds to win.

HOW JESS WILLARD IMPRESSED FIGHT FANS AROUND CHICAGO

Heavyweight Champion Mingled With Chicago Cubs and Expressed Confidence in Ability to Stop-Up Jack Dempsey in Title Bout.

Jess Willard heavyweight champion boxer of the world arrived in Chicago recently, coming from Kansas City on the same train with the Chicago Cubs. On his arrival in the city, one of the first things he did was to deny the story that he had again engaged Jack Curley and Tom Jones to handle his business. He added he had paid them off for what it would cost in attorney fees and that he was through with them for all time. The champion is to remain in Chicago for two weeks, taking part in a moving picture in which he is to do some wild west acts. After he has put in his time here he will go to California to finish the picture after which he will prepare for his fight with Jack Dempsey which the champion asserts is sure to come off somewhere in the United States July 4.

"I had hopes of seeing a fight bill passed in New York state," said Willard "and figured on fighting Dempsey there, but I understand the bill did not pass. Missouri recently adopted a boxing measure permitting fifteen round contests. With New York City out of the way I do not know of anywhere I would rather box than in Kansas City and I am sure the fight will draw as well there as anywhere in the county.

"Willard has not been idling away his time since he agreed to fight Dempsey. He is in training and has been for some weeks. He looks the part When seen in Chicago a month or so ago be was fat and flabby looking around the jowls, but that appearance has left him entirely. He is beginning to show the effects of his work and there undoubtedly is determination in him to get in the best shape possible for Dempsey.

"You see, it would not be wise for me to jump into vigorous training after being out of the game for two or three years," continued Willard. "It would be too hard on me. I am going to take all the time I can to get ready. I fought Johnson weighing 249, but I do not expect to drop that low for Dempsey. My weight was 259 in the Moran contest. That is what I will probably scale when I meet Dempsey and it is possible I will drop down to 255. It is going to be harder for me to take off my weight because of the rest I have had. You know, I do not believe in road work for a man of my size. It is too weakening. I get just as good results boxing and working in the gymnasium. Road work never did appeal to me. I am a boxer and when I go into a bout I like to feel that I am fast not only with the gloves, but on my feet, and the gymnasium is the best place to get that."

The heavyweight champion was a conspicuous figure on the train.

Among the Cubs it was the first time the National League champions had ever come in close contact with him and how tall and big he is was brought out when he shook hands with Phil Douglas, the tallest pitcher. On President Mitchell's staff Douglas stands 6 feet 5 inches and the champion seemed to tower over him by several inches.

Considerable joking was done about how Willard would get into a lower berth to sleep. The champion is a good natured sort of chap and took the kidding gracefully. He said he had no trouble in stretching out in a berth, although his feet and head touched both ends, he declared he found it comfortable and would just as soon ride on a train as sleep in a hotel.

Coast league batting records for the first two weeks of the season show Emmet Mulvey of Salt Lake City the premier hitter, with 15 hits in 29 times at bat. Koerner of San Francisco hit safely 13 times in 29 times at bat. Jack Fournier in 48 times at bat got 22 hits. There had been a lot of hitting all around, except on the part of the Vernon team, due, said Bill Essick, to cold wather in Salt Lake—and hot weather in Los Angles.

DELIGHTFUL AND CHARMINGLY VARIED CONCERT HUGE SUCCESS

Murray Street Baptist Church Choir of 50 Voices is Heard to Splendid Advantage

The concert in Murray street Baptist Church, last evening, by the choir, is characterized by those lovers of first class vocal and instrumental music present as the biggest success of its kind this season. The sacred edifice was crowded to the doors by an enthusiastic audience who spent an exceedingly delightful evening with Peterborough's leading musical talent. Manifested and unstinted appreciation coupled with demands for encores were the order of the evening. The voluntary collection taken up was gratifyingly generous.

The choirs' work (50 voices) was simply magnificent; appreciable volume was in evidence, but harmony was in no way sacrificed to it. Abide with me, by this organization and chimes was, perhaps, the most popular number of the program. The piece was unaccompanied and wonderful organ effect in voice alone was conveyed to hearers in a charming manner "The National Anthem" was rendered with arresting effect, and the big audience stayed till the last note, which is somewhat unusual. But of course the piece was sung, and with a beauty of expression, which is, unfortunately the exception rather than the rule.

Miss Ida G. Sanderson, in an organ solo won generous and well deserved admiration. She was heard to splendid advantage as an organist, either in solo or accompaniment, of no mean order of merit.

Mr. Asa Huycke, Peterborough's popular baritone soloist, really excelled himself last night. His number "(a) Could I; (b) The Temple Bells" found favor with an audience who fully appreciated his masterful technique and expression fitting to the theme of his offering. Mr. Huycke generally gives something exceptionally good and a little better than before.

The Male quartette, composed of Messrs Humpage and Graham (tenors) and Messrs Ward and Huycke (baritones), to be in future known as "The Electric City Quartette," simply electrified the audience with their beautiful and expressive rendition of "The Holy City." They were heard in unison at this concert for the first time since organization as a quartette and their voices blend delightfully. All are well konwn as vocalists, but their efforts last evening were of so acceptable a nature that unquestionably their future career as a quartette will win marked distinction.

Mr. Frank Whitehouse in violin solo won prolonged applause His knowledge of this stringed instrument together with an enviable measure of talent in its manipulation always renders his selections popular. His number on this occasion was "Variations on Hymn by Haydn," and was brilliantly executed. For an encore he gave an imitation of the bagpipes, all but, if not quite, indistinguishable from the real thing.

Misses Archer, Gillespie and Sanderson in piano trio, "Polonaise Militaire" presented an instrumental unit of considerable merit, and their work elicited prolonged applaudits.

"The Bells of St. Michael's Tower and The Violet and the Bee," by the talented choir, with Misses Sanderson and Gillespie as accompanists, came in for their share of appreciative recognition. The imitations of the bells were sweetly reminiscent while the buzzing of the bee was marvelously realistic.

"God of our Fathers," by Tom Ward (baritone) carried away the audience

Space will not permit of the exhaustive reference this event merits; suffice it to say it proved exactly as foreshadowed, "the event of the season," and an occasion of art merit in musical circles worthy of a measure of praise heaped up and over flowing.

intended to receive them. The question was met evasively by the Home Secretary, who promised to make enquiries, and said that this would occupy a week.

While, according to some despatches from Ireland, the Sinn Feiners are greatly encouraged and believe the creation of an Irish republic is within sight, the Unionist press here is calling for an explanation from Premier Lloyd George and criticizing President Wilson's alleged interference in British domestic affairs.

"If it is true that Mr. Wilson is behind this intrigue against the union of the United Kingdom—and after the President's behavior toward Italy anything is credible—the American ambassador," says the Post "ought to be told that the United Kingdom does not tolerate interference in its domestic affairs. They are our business and the business of nobody else."

The Graphic says: "If any of the states of America were again to demand the right to secede from the Union, it is certain the American people would be bitterly indignant if such a demand received any kind of official encouragement from Great Britain. We apply the same standard of judgment to American interference in our affairs."

MISSION SERVICES TO CLOSE TONIGHT

EVANGELIST TORRIE THIS EVENING CONCLUDES HIS SUCCESSFUL REVIVAL MEETINGS.

Tonight will close Evangelist Torrie's mission in Park Street Baptist Church.

Last night he spoke to another good congregation in Park Street Church last night on the subject "Conviction vs. Conversion." He cited many instances of people much aroused to a sense of duty and yet failing to "pay the price," and consequently losing the blessing. Lot's wife, Felix, Agrippa, and the young man who came running to Jesus, and saying "Good Master, what good thing must I do to inherit eternal life." were examples of this. Many examples from our own every day experience were also given. Why is this? Because men and women have never been taught to see the doom to which they are hastening and have never seen the supreme excellence and beauty of Jesus.

Mr. Torrie's last sermon tonight is to be on the subject: "The Tragedy of Calvary," and Mrs. Torrie will sing again by request "Alone" and "Don't Forget Jesus." The choir which has given such good service throughout the mission will also sing. Come early to this last service if you want a seat.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

UNION LABOR TO PARADE TO NEXT MEETING OF COUNCIL

Formal Protest Will Be Made to Aldermanic Action in Cutting Down Wages of City Laborers and Carpenters—Other Matter Disposed of Organized Labor in Peterborough will parade in force on the evening of the first Monday in June and, headed by a band, will march to the City Building when the aldermen are in their next regular session. Members of the G. W. V. A. will also be in evidence. As many of the paraders as possible will go into the Council chamber while the others wait outside, and will make a formal request that the action of the other night by which the city laborers wages were set at 40 cents and those of the carpenters at 60 cents be rescinded and the union scales recognized. There will be banners carried in the procession, but these will be of the regulation hue. There are no Reds in Peterborough.

This action was decided upon at a regular meeting of the Trades Council last night, after Ald. Turner, the mover of the cut-rate resolution, and the four other city fathers who supported it had been unmercifully grilled by the delegates. As a reprisal the unfair list was suggested, and there was a sentiment in favor of asking Ald. Turner to resign his civic position. It was finally decided that either course would avail little, and in the end a formal protest, following the parade, was unanimously agreed upon. The point was raised that Ald. Turner represents only a small percentage of the people, that he is really the advocate and champion of the Manufacturers' Association.

The Board of Trade.

Several delegates declared that no Labor man should belong to the Board of Trade, which, they asserted, had for its main mission the destruction of unionism. This charge was vigorously combatted by President Bolwell and Delegate J. J. Hartley, both of whom belong to the Board. Mr. Hartley declared that such a charge was without foundation, that the Board of Trade was anxious to help the workingmen by creating employment through the securing of new industries

Buying Outside Canada.

It was reported that the Hydro Commission is buying two street cars for the Peterborough service, built in Cincinnati, while Canadian workmen are idle. A protest sent in by the Carpenters' Union was concurred in and will be furnished to Sir Adam Beck.

It was decided to join in the nation-wide movement for a universal eight-hour day. Capt. Burnham will be asked to support legislation placing the co-operative system upon the same basis as that in Britain.

Government contractors in the Government service were reported as attempting to break up the Carpen-

AUSTRIA TO HELP PAY INDEMNITY

FINANCIAL BURDEN NOT TO BE BORNE BY GERMANY ALONE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 8.—The Council of Four, with Premier Orlando of Italy present, began today to arrange the program for the presentation of the peace terms as to the Austrian-Hungarian and Bulgarian delegates.

The Austrian treaty has begun to take form. Portions of it already have been drafted. It appears that instead of Germany being required to pay the entire indemnity demanded by the Allies a considerable sum will be demanded of Austria, the estimate of this sum at present being five billion crows "about one billion dollars". This indemnity provision and the delimitation of the frontiers of the new state will be the main features of the treaty now in the making. Provision is to be made for the dividing of the Austria-Hungary's pre-war debt among the new states formed from the territory formerly belonging to hat Empire, the frontiers between German-Austria and Italy and probably the Adriatic settlement will also figure in the Austrian treaty

AIRPLANES START ON OCEAN FLIGHT

THREE LEAVE ROCKAWAY BEACH TODAY AND HEAD FOR HALIFAX

(Canadian Press Despatch

New York, May 8.—The first trans Atlantic flight was begun when three N-C "Navy Curtiss" hydro airplanes left the Government's air station at Rockaway Beach at 10 a.m. today on the first leg of their journey—Rockaway to Halifax—a distance of 540 miles.

The N-C 3 with Commander John H. Towers, chief of the expedition, was the first plane to take the air. The N-C 1, with Lieut Commander P. N. L. Bellinger and the N-C 4, with Lieut Commander A. C Reid as commanding officers, were close behind

The planes were escorted to tthe sea by a squadron of navy scout planes, proceeding in a general direction north-easterly. Trio of hydro aeroplanes should reach Halifax before nightfall, barring mishaps, thence the route runs 460 miles to Trepasey, 1350 miles to the Azores another 900 miles to Portugal and on to Plymouth, England.

GERMANS DESERVE NO EASIER TERMS

AMERICANS BELIEVE THAT HUNS RECEIVED JUST WHAT THEY MERIT.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, May 8. The consensus of official gossip, public opinion and press comment in the United States is that although the terms of peace proposed to Germany are drastic and humiliating, they are not more so than the situation demands. It seems to be conceded on all sides that President Wilson has won one of his great arguments, by having the League of Nations' agreement included in the treaty. Various opinions are expressed as to whether Germans will sign the treaty or stick out for big modifications, but it is generally supposed that there is nothing to do but sign.

Progress of Flight.

Chatham, Mass., May 8. The three naval hydroairplanes passed the Chatham naval station on their flight to Halifax, N. S., at 12:30 p.m., taking their bearings from Chatham. They appeared to be pointing northeastward on the Cape Sable course.

RIGHT OF COUNCIL TO F L PRESENT VACANCY IN BOARD

Special Act, by Virtue of Which Council Exists, Gives Aldermen Authority to Appoint Whom They Will to Fill Any Vacancy That Occurs

There semes to be some doubt among the aldermen as to their authority to appoint a member of the City Council to succeed ex-Ald. Murray. There was hesitancy apparent at the meeting Monday night when this matter was brought up, a hesitancy that is easily accounted for, and no doubt some of the aldermen were relieved when the evil day was set back for one month.

The law in the case is clear. Peterborough City Council exists by virtue of a special Act passed in 110 when the general vote system was first adopted here. That Act states specifically that in the event of a vacancy the same shall be filled by the aldermen, but there is nothing said about the necessity of postponing the appointment one month, or until the next meeting following the one in which the vacancy arises.

Later Peterborough reverted to the ward system only to abandon it again in 1918 when an amendment was made to the special Act, but this amendment does not affect the appointing power of the Board, that clause being left as originally adopted. The Municipal Act provides that in the case of a vacancy the defeated aldermen next highest on the list shall automatically become a member of the Council, but in this case the special Act holds precedence. The right of the aldermen in the matter is beyond dispute Appointing a Labor man to succeed ex-Ald Murray is, however, an entirely different proposition. The aldermen are not legally bound to accede to the request of the Trades Council to appoint ex-Ald. Crowe to the position. If there is any obligation in the matter it is entirely moral. There are considerations, too, which are certain to influence the aldermen other than those who are the direct representatives of the workingmen. There is the fear of creating a perpetual deadlock in the Council which would invest Mayor Duncan with all the prerogatives of a municipal autocrat who could decide according to his own ideas all important issues.

The aldermen have been beset, too, by the curbstone politicians, who have their little personal likes and dislikes. One faction is opposed to the appointment of Mr. Crowe while admitting the right of Labor to the position. They have other workingmen in view, but if the aldermen are influenced by these street corner lobbyists and appoint a labor man other than Mr. Crowe, their action would be so much time and energy wasted. No Labor man would accept the office if it came to him in that way. By so doing he would be putting himself in the position of a strikebreaker and would probably be expelled from any union to which he belonged.

HUN DELEGATES ARE ARROGANT

But in Spite of Impudent Demeanor their Day of Humiliation Has Arrived and the Iron Has Entered Their Souls.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, May 8. After the conference at Versailles yesterday, Wm. M. Hughes, Premier of Australia, said according to a Reuter despatch: "The attitude of Count Von Brockdorff-Rantzau was an intolerable insult to the conference, for while Premier Clemenceau spoke standing, the German spokesman did not rise while making his address. In spite of their intolerable arrogance this has been a day of humiliation for the Germans, which we could see had entered into their souls." Wm. F. Masey, Premier of New Zealand, said: "The Germans were more impudent and aggressive than anything I have ever met."

Afrter the conference the despatch says, the fact that members of the Council of Four did not appear made the crowd anxious, but it transpired they were holding a meeting and shortly after 4:30 o'clock they departed M. Clemenceau's appearance was the signal for the first great wave of cheering of the day. Premier Orlando also received an ovation, but Premier Lloyd George, the last to leave, was given a more generous reception from the throng. President Wilson smilingly saluted the crowd as he went to his automobile.

During the meeting Marshal Foch sat as though not heeding the proceedings, fursing his chin in his hand. He never looked toward the German delegates, his gaze apparently travelling through the great windows to the beautiful country beyond.

$1,000 Bail For Liquor Suspect

Inspector Stewart and Constable Archie Moore arrested a Peterborough citizen last evening on the charge of having been connected with the Kendry station liquor episode, and with havig liquor on premises other than a private residence. The accused is out on a $1,000 cash bail and says he can establish an alibi.

German Courier Leaves For Berlin

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 8—A copy of the treaty is well on its way to Berlin. Gourier left at 9 o'clock last night bearing it with Count Von Brockdorff Rantzau's first report on the negotiations.

Germans Confer With Home Powers

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 8—Intimations reaching the Peace Conference from Versailles lead to the belief that two or three members of the German peace delegation will probably return to Germany to consult their Government, the others remaining at Versailles. Germany has not yet submitted any communication with regard to the peace treaty. All exchanges between delegation at Versailles and home Government are being kept secret.

While a New York band was playing at a Victory Loan rally, a Russian pulled an American flag from his pocket and stamped on it. He received a beating from the crowd and was sentenced to 30 days by a magistrate.

JEWS WIRE PROTEST TO OTTAWA

The following is the text of a telegram sent to Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., by the Local Hebrews, containing a protest against the proposed Immigration Bill:

"We would ask you to consider or support the following objections to the immigration act amendments:

1st. The welfare of Canada depends on wholesome, healthy immigration, to develop our country's natural resources and promote industries. The Literacy test is not the most efficient method of selecting immigrants. Energy, ambition and industry make the best citizens, education follows opportunity.

2nd. An immigrant's attitude towards the autocratic land of his birth is no criterion of desirability for citizenship in a free enlightened country. The cruel conditions under which Jews live in Eastern Europe make a strict application of the amendment Six O. A grave injustice. Excepting a few extremists, the great mass of Jewry have always been a powerful element behind moderate policies.

3rd. The Jewish people number fourteen million, of which three quarters live in Allied countries and have contributed their proportion in sacrifice to the Allied cause. They are recognized by England and Allies as a distinct people. Special consideration should be made in the amendment, section 3, subsection6, for Jews.

4th. Canadian welfare opposes the adoption of section 13, permitting the exclusion of a whole nationality, race, religious, sect, specified class or occupation. Parliament may, if necessary, legislate and prevent the danger of international complications.

5th.—The loss of domicile after five years absence is considered undesirable

6th.—Section 3 sub-section 6K, should be followed by a schedule defining conditions and diseases intended

7th. Paragraph 2 is repugnant to the spirit of British fair play, and would encourage espionage, bribery, and clothe petty officials with powers subject to abuse.

HUNGARY REJECTS FOE'S OFFER FOR AN ARMISTICE

And Has Decided to Continue to the Utmost the War With Roumania—What Latter Proposed as Conditions.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Copenhagen, May 8. The Hungarian Communist government has refused the armistice terms offered by Roumania and has decided to fight to the utmost, a despatch from Budapest says.

In reply to the Hungarian request for an armistice the Roumanian government demanded the disarmament of forces fighting against Roumania and her allies in the present operations. The surrender of war material and the return of prisoners and hostages without reciprocity. It was added that until the terms are fulfilled Roumania would occupy the right bank of the Liss River to a depth of twelve miles.

MORE LABORERS AT WORK FOR THE CITY

STAFF OF STREET CLEANERS BUSY TODAY — 14 WORKING ON SURFACE DRAINAGE

City Engineer Parsons is quite satisfied with the laborers' strike situation and is confident of holding out longer than the men, so long as the Council back him up.

Today he has fourteen men at work on the King street surface drainage, but the Romaine street sewer construction is tied up still. Regarding the latter work the engineer says there is no particular hurry.

Monday night the Council passed a big list of street improvement work recommended by the board of works and asked for by citizens, but no start on this will be attempted under the present unsettled labor conditions

As for street cleaning, six men are at work today, and the pavements present a respectable appearance. None of these men are members of the union, the strikers being still out.

THREE BOATHOUSES ARE TOTAL LOSS

AND TWELVE BOATS OWNED BY DIFFERENT PARTIES BURNED.

Thre boat houses, two owned by Mr. T. B Maniece, and another by Mr. Godfrey, situated on the shore of Little Lake by the Ashburnham wharf were destroyed by fire yesterday at 5.15 p.m. In spite of the efforts of the firemen who use 800 feet of hose, the boat houses were totally destroyed together with the 10 boats which were in Mr. Maniece's boat houses, the five in the other being saved. Neither of the boat houses were insured. The loss was estimated at $300 for the houses and $270.00 for the boats. The cause of the fire is unknown

The following is a list of the owners of canoes burned: Kenneth Baker, Gordon Maniece, Earl Maniece, Hugh McWha, Mr. Staunton, Ernie Leonard, Claude Moore, Jack Lerrow. The owners of the two skiffs were Messrs Fred Holland and Arthur Knott

The owners of the boats that were saved were: Dan Leonard, Willie Nash, Mr. Goofrey, and Eric Lundgren

CONFERS DEGREE ON LLOYD GEORGE

NOTED PREMIER IS HONORED BY McMASTER UNIVERSITY, TORONTO.

McMaster University last night conferred the degree L.L.D on the Hon David Lloyd George, the Premier of Great Britain. In his communication to the University the Primier said that he would be glad to accept this honor at the hands of his fellow baptists in Canada through their University. It is certain that the honor is reciprocal and that a great welcome awaits David Lloyd George when he shall find time to visit his University on Canadian soil and the thousands of admiring Canadians with whom his name is now a household word.

LONDON PAPERS FAIL TO AGREE ON PEACE TREATY

Opinions Differ Mainly on Question of Amount of Damage Germany Must Pay—Huns Will Accept Only Under Duress.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, May 8. The peace terms, while receiving considerable approval from almost the entire London press, do not escape from sharp criticism on certain points. The objections centre mainly on the question of financial compensation from Germany. Some newspapers are dissatisfied because they consider the terms are too severe. Others think they are not severe enough.

The Morning Post finds it difficult to say whether the treaty is good or bad. It says Germany certainly will not accept it except under duress. The Post thinks that the indemnity conditions are unsatisfactory and do not fulfil the election promises of the British Government

The Daily Mail fears that Great Britain will find the terms very far short of the pledges made by Premier Lloyd George.

FRANK M'CULLOUGH IS CAUGHT IN CELLAR BY TORONTO POLICE

Murderer Had Been Hidden There Ever Since His Escape From Jail—Gave Name of Knight—Was Fed by Vera Lavelle Uutil Her Arrest

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, May 8.—Frank McCullough, the condemned murderer, who escaped from Toronto jail some weeks ago, was captured this morning in a cellar of a house in the lower section of the city. In the meantime the date for the exeution of the sentence had been extended till June 13th. McCullough was captured on Bathurst street, just around the corner from the livery stable where he killed Acting Detective Williams.

His Alias Was Knight

McCullough made attempt to escape this morning when police knocked at the door of his room. He jumped out of the window to a shed and from there to the lane but there he gazed into the muzzles of several police revolvers and surrendered without further fight.

The landlady says the room was rented for two weeks by Vera Lavelle who represented herself as McCullough's wife and gave the name of Knight. She provided him with food till her arrest. She is now on trial for aiding his escape from jail.

After that she gave him his meals. After that the landlady gave him his meals, but says she had no idea of his identity. He was preparing to make his getaway on a bicycle when taken today.

Experts say there is no doubt of the legality of his reprieve which fixes June 15th as the new date of execution. Before his escape the date of the sentence was May 2nd.

Lavelle Goes on Trial

Vera Lavelle not only saw Frank McCullough, the slayer of Acting-Detective Frank Williams, after his escape from the Toronto jail, but planned the escape for him. Such was the evidence of Irene Marks given at the trial of the Lavelle woman yesterday. Miss Marks swore positively that Miss Lavelle had confided in her at the jail, her share in the sensational escape.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

THURSDAY, MAY 8, 1919

CHAIRMAN DENNE AS PRESS CENSOR.

MR. ROLAND DENNE has extended the scope of his position as chairman of the Board of Education by arrogating to himself the prerogatives of a press censor. Having assumed this rather autocratic function, Mr. Denne feels constrained to instruct the newspapers in the matter of reporting the session over which he has the honor to preside. Although Mr. Denne spoke in general terms, we believe that he had The Review in mind, this paper having entered somewhat fully into the details of a recent ambitious project which Mr. Denne and his colleagues have been pleased to abandon. An interview with Mr. G. N. Gordon, the only member of the Board who stood out against real estate speculation, was published in connection with the report of the meeting at which the discussion occurred. They were the sentiments of Mr. Gordon, and as events have since developed, it turns out that Mr. Gordon of all the chosen dozen was right. Official jealousy is always to be deplored, but not every victim of that passion tries to ease his mind by taking a fall out of newspapers that give valuable information to the public.

Mr. Denne, figuratively speaking, has been chased up a tree, suddenly and thoroughly. As he shelters himself in the branches one of the leading legal firms in the city keeps watch on the ground ready to ensare him in the meshes of an injunction if he makes any attempt to escape. Mr. Denne would not have been forced into undignified retreat if the newspapers had consented to a conspiracy of silence as they did when his committee pussyfooted it to Toronto to railroad a special act through the Legislature, an Act which now proves only about one fifth as potent as he appears to have imagined it would be. But why should Mr. Denne take on new official duties? It seems that at the present he has his hands full without this censorship fad. The newspapers will make out to hoe their own row without the benefit of any suggestions he may feel called upon to offer. Besides, it is simply the grim irony of fate that the man who sets injunction traps for others should himself be menaced by a similar process.

WHEN THE ALDERMEN FELL BACK.

THE LABORERS and carpenters employed by the city were not given an opportunity to lay their demands for higher pay and shorter hours before the City Council. The aldermen anticipated anything of the kind and were the first to declare war when the rates for civic workmen as well as the hours of labor were officially fixed on motion of Ald. Turner.

When the aldermen met the laborers recently Mayor Duncan assured them that the city was ready to meet them half way, otherwise to split the difference on the wage question. The laborers accepted the offer and reduced their price from 50 to 45 cents an hour. Whereupon the aldermen, instead of making good their promise, fell five points before the move of the others and took refuge behind the 40-cents-an-hour entrenchment. With this incident on the record, how can the City Council expect to have any of their negotiations with Labor taken seriously?

EASILY ACCOUNTED FOR.

THE WOODSTOCK Sentinel-Review, which circulates in Mr. Rowell's constituency, says of the former Ontario leader:

> Mr. Rowell is a Liberal, who endeavors to keep in touch with the progress of Liberalism, which is more than can be said of some of the politicians who take pride in boasting of their Liberalism.

It is easy to account for the milk in this particular cocoanut. It behooves Mr. Rowell to keep in touch with Liberalism, naturally anxious as he must be as to what the Liberal party proposes to do with him later on.

THE FATE OF THE TREATY.

PRESIDENT WILSON has signed the peace treaty besides making the United States a party to the League of Nations, but what Mr. Wilson has done in Europe will not in any sense bind the American nation until his course has been approved and the various agreements ratified by the Senate. A special session of Congress has already been called for this purpose.

The peace treaty that followed the war with Spain was a simple matter compared with the present complex agreement, but the American Senate spent three months in discussing it before its final ratification. Politics figured in that debate, and the same element is likely to pervade the action of the Senate on this occasion.

The British Parliament, too, it waiting to review the work of the Peace Conference. The same is true of the House of Commons at Ottawa. Members of the Opposition have already shown their hand. Politics in the attitude of the statesmen toward the treaty will not be confined to the American Senate. There are men in the Dominion Parliament impatiently awaiting an opportunity to discredit the work of Sir Robert Borden and other Canadian ministers at Paris.

THE MEN WHO CAME BACK.

SPEAKING of the returning soldiers of the United States the Chicago News says:

> "There is nothing finer than the manner in which the overwhelming majority of the returned soldiers conduct themselves. They are finding their way quietly, modestly, back into civilian life. Those who expected heroics from them are disappointed. The boys are not in the least given to boasting. It is generally hard, even for friends and relatives, to induce them to talk of what they have seen and done. They doff the khaki and put on 'civies' as speedily as they can. They are looking for positions and their outlook is altogether toward the future.
> "Who can appraise the national value of such a striking example of efficient performance and quiet modesty? These young soldiers are the principal objects of attention and admiration for all the younger generation and for a large part of the older generation as well. What they do and are today will stamp itself to a large extent on the receptive mind of American childhood. And childhood always imitates what it admires.
> "In the long run it may be that the silent service which our soldiers are unconsciously rendering during the priod of demobilization will be as important as that which stands to their credit because of their service across the seas. At any rate, the way in which they bear themselves is full proof that they are pre-eminently the stuff that good citizens are made of —the sort that their country needs in every phase of its life."

The American citizen soldier is a counterpart of the Canadian young man who took up arms without a murmur when the call came. Canadian soldiers coming from overseas are in all respects like those whose sterling qualities are so aptly set forth by the appreciative Chicago newspaper. They were the best of the young citizenship of Canada when they enlisted. They belong still to that same distinguished class now that the war is over and they are being absorbed again into civil life. The change is being made quietly in the case of at least ninety per cent. of the returning men. True worh is always modest. They are not inclined either to blow their own trumpet or have mistaken friends perform that service for them. Their deeds are written in the annals of the brightest passages of Canadian history in characters that are imperishable.

Most of all does the returned soldier object to being made the shuttlecock of politicians and newspapers that for their own ends, transparently selfish, would exploit him as a martyr to the ingratitude of a nation. The soldier made his way, held his own in the battle line. He can do as much now that he has taken up civil life again. He neither looks for nor does he require the tawdry panegyrics of those who are really wedded to partisanship rather than inspired by patriotic reverence for devoted heroes.

GEMANY'S HUMILIATION.

NO PEACE TREATY ever negotiated between civilized powers contains the drastic terms that have been imposed on Germany by the agreement the text of which was made public yesterday. The humiliation of the Hun is complete, and no other term can be employed to better describe the situation. Just how low Germany has sunk in the estimation of civilization is shown in every clause of the treaty. It is bad enough for a defeated nation to be disarmed, deprived of navy, stripped of territory and required to pay an indemnity that threatens national bankruptcy. It is infinitely worse, however, for that conquered nation to be treated by the party of the other part as a national entity from which everything like a sense of honor had departed.

In the hard school of actual experience the Allies have learned that the Teuton's word is valueless and that he has as little regard for the integrity of a signed treaty. All through the agreement there runs the assumption that even if the Germans do sign it that is no guarantee that they will regard it as binding. This is a new element in international negotioations. It is not unusual to show more consideration for the word or the signature of an admittedly savage people.

But the Allies have certainly not erred on the side of leniency. There is no sentimental sympathy wasted upon a defeated adversary that, while the conflict raged, violated every known code of honor and disregarded everything in the shape of military ethics. Care has been taken to impose compulsion if the Germans' sense of honor fails again. An army of occupation is to remain on duty indefinitely to be ready to punish the violation of a single condition imposed upon Germany. Who ever heard of such a clause in a peace treaty before? Who can recall that between supposed Christian nations such a drastic condition was necessary?

The perfidy of Germany failed against the organized prowess of the Allies. That force is still in existence, strengthened by the co-operation of nations that held aloof from the recent conflict, and it is rather more closely united than ever. It will prevail again if the occasion ever arises for a test of strength. The peace of the world seems assured. The League of Nations is the controlling human agency of the destiny of humanity. The day has passed when a self-seeking power can with impunity make a paper scrap of an international obligation. Germany is dethroned as the military autocrat that has for the past five decades kept the nations in a constant state of unrest and has rendered necessary the wasting of national energy and resources in the maintenance of armies and navies as a measure of safety. Like the neighbors in a peaceful community, like Canada and the United States, the other countries of the world, side by side or geographically divided, can now dwell without the never-ending fear of the possibility of violence, the one from the other.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

AND TO THINK that one man brought Germany to this!

THAT IS THE MOST unkindest cut of all, to larrup Quebec now on its military record after defending it all through the excitement of a general election.

THE CITY COUNCIL did not meet the laborers half way, according to agreement, but traversed the entire distance in order to get into trouble with the various unions.

OH, THAT'S DIFFERENT.

(Brantford Expositor.)

United States insists upon the recognition of the Monroe Doctrine, but it does not hesitate to pass a resolution in Congress calling upon Great Britain to free Ireland.

DRESS UP THE FARM

No more barns in front of houses no more ramshackle houses, no silos in the front yard—and hence, no more young men leaving the farm. This is the plan of George W. Maher, president of the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Architects, who has begun a "stay on the farm" movement indorsed by many agricultural colleges and the governors of many states.

"You can't keep people in the country unless you make it attractive," is the slogan of Mr. Maher. And he means to accomplish his ideal by teaching young men at agricultural colleges the elements of what makes an attractive house and farmyard. The beginning of the process is mostly elimination. Elimination of weeds, and zigzag fences, of unsightly farm buildings.

Monotony of Farm Views

The trouble at present, according to Mr. Maher is that the flimsy attractions of a city are potent by comparison.

"In most country communities there is no park to relieve ragweed monotony; there are no beautiful public buildings, to rest the eye when the sight of the home neighborhood gets wearing. "Lakes and trees are not as plentiful as city people think. There is nothing to relieve the monotony of one ugly farmhouse after another," he declared, expalining that he is a farmer himself. And the much vaunted "drive down a country road," said to be responsible for the marriages of so many rural school teachers, is nothing to boast of either, he explained.

"Why, half the time the only definite impression you get is the dust you raise, he said. "Most farmhouses are so drab and so alike that one doesn't get any definite impression as he drives along."

"At present the farmer learns banking, real estate, politics and everything but the simple elements of art and architecture in the agricultural college," he explained.

Ideal Farm Community

The ideal farm community which Mr. Maher advocates, will have winding roads, the proper placing of houses relative to slopes; trees will be as abundant as they are in rural fiction and stucco houses, as well as bungalows of brick, will be as present in farm communities as they are in city suburbs where they are not as much needed.

For beauty and utility may be one, he wants to impress on the farmer! Only the time to teach a man the necessity of art is when he is young.

WEALTH IN THE ARCTIC REGIONS

Ottawa, May 6—Vilhjalmar Stefansson, the Canadian Arctic explorer, in an address before a large attendance of members of Parliament and Senators in the railway committee room presented a scheme for converting the Arctic and sub-Arctic regions of Canada into a great wool, milk and meat producing area.

Mr. Stefanson recently submitted the proposition ot Hon. Mr. Arthur Meighen, Minister of the Interior, whose department administers the natural resources of the North and it was then thought advisable that Mr. Stefanson should address the Senators and members upon the subject. At the conclusion of the address to-day Mr. Meighen said the Government would consider the proposal.

The Stefanson scheme involves the introduction of large herds of reindeer into the Canadian North and the domestication and development of large herds of muskox. Both these animals will furnish meat supplies. The muskox, in addition, will furnish a wool supply.

Grazing Ground.

"In the Summer," said Mr. Stefanson, "there is an abundant vegetation, which forms nutritious food for grazing animals in Winter as well as Summer. It is estimated there are at least a million square miles of such grazing grounds in Northern Canada. The Winter climate of these areas is too severe for ordinary domestic cattle, but muskox and reindeer can graze there in the open the year round.

"Most people who know reindeer meat consider it is the best meat on earth."

In regard to muskox meat he said that for a year, when he was in the north, this meat constituted 90 per cent of his party's food supply, and they found it indistinguishable in taste from beef. Stefansson claimed that the Canadian North could be utilized to help solve the problem of present and future food shortage, and, in addition, that the development of this industry would naturally expedite the development of the mineral and other resources of the north.

Domestic Reindeer.

About twenty years ago the United States Government introduced 1,280 domestic reindeer into Arctic Alaska for the purpose of assisting the Eskimos, said Stefansson, and these herds had been doubled every three years but under white men's care it was found that they doubled every two years, the reason bein gthat the Eskimos butchered females for their spotted fur.

He stated that no one would find the climate of Great Slave Lake disagreeable who did not find the climate of Lake Winnipeg equally so, and the northern half of Canada was on the eve of development as one of the great food-producing regions of the world. It had undoubted resources in minerals and fish. Even in Banks Island in July there was rolling prairie, differing only from the Western prairie in that it had more small lakes and more flowers. In this connection, he said, the Ontario school geography was the best known work of fiction being read in Canada.

Hon. Arthur Meighen, in thanking the explorer, said that it had been his desire to have Mr. Stefansson acquaint members of Parliament and the Senate with the wonder ful resources of Canada in the far northern country. Speaker Rhodes, who presided over the gathering, also spoke in appreciation of Mr. Stefansson's effort.

HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT

Editor Review:— Under the Act we have three systems of Highway Improvement namely: Provincial Highway, Provincial County Highway and County Highway. Provincial Highway costs from $20,000 to $30,000 per mile to build. Provincial County costs from $4,000 to $10,000 per mile to build. County Highway costs $1,500 to $3,000 per mile to build.

Expenditures met as follows:

Provincial Highway, Province 70 per cent Municipality 30 per cent. Provincial County Highway Province 60 per cent, municipality 40 per cent. Cities and towns separated such as the City of Peterborough are not included in the above but are called upon where a system of County roads are adopted to contribute one half mill on the dollar each year (and the Act limits such participation to one half mill) to a suburban Area of two miles to every $2,000,000 assessment of such city or town.

The counties that are carrying out a system of county highways find it necessary to raise from the Counties 7 mills on the dollar to make the desired improvement consistent with the abnormal traffic attracted from the City and town autoist. Where Provincial County Roads exist although the percentage is 40 per cent to the farmer it costs him more due to the more rigid regulations providing doube driveway, etc.

The same with regard to Provincial Highways.

There is no statutory limit to what the farmer may have to pay? Yet the Province provides by Statute that the percentage of the Province ceases at $4,000 per mile and the City is limited by Statute to one half mill on the dollar on suburban area. If it becomes necessary for greater expenditure on Suburban areas the former is rung in for the same, that is on Suburban Areas only. It is advanced by way of explanation why the Province absorbs the fees collected from auto owners that it is a Provincial Revenue the same as the Dominion Insome Tax is a Dominion Revenue.

The Dominion Income Tax is imposed to provide for war expenditure. The Province imposed a Tax of one mill on the dollar for four years that more than provided for any war expenditure undertaken by the Province. Auto fees are imposed for auto regulation and road improvement it being recognized that they would be exceedingly hard on roads being traction driven. The Province collected $1,200,000 auto fees in 1918 and paid towards County Roads $483,632. Where is the Government assistance?

From the County and City of Peterborough in the neighborhood of $20,000 over and above the cost of collection will be collected yearly.

NO MORE KIDNEY TROUBLE
Since He Commenced to Take "Fruit-a-tives"

78 Lees Avenue, Ottawa, Ont.
"Three years ago, I began to feel run-down and tired, and suffered very much from Liver and Kidney Trouble. Having read of 'Fruit-a-tives', I thought I would try them. The result was surprising.
I have not had an hour's sickness since I commenced using 'Fruit-a-tives', and I know now what I have not known for a good many years—that is, the blessing of a healthy body and clear thinking brain".
WALTER J. MARRIOTT.
50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Why should the County ratepayers be compelled to raise $30,000 to get back their own $20,000 and it is claimed that the County ratepayers own 53 per cent of the autos consequently the County ratepayers would pay at least $10,000, as auto fees then as stated above raise $30,000 more, making $40,000 paid by them.

25 per cent of the County ratepayers would use the County Roads regularly, 25 per cent of them occasionally, and 50 per cent would practically not have occasion to use them at all.

The farmers' output being a finished product, as a result of feeding everything on his farm, thereby retaining fertility for his soil, reduces his hauling to a minimum to his nearest station generally from one to six miles from his farm.

The average expenditure over statute labor in the township of Smith has been one and one half mills on the dollar for all road purposes.

By adopting County Roads you would reduce that to less than three quarters of a mill for all other roads other than the adopted County Roads as the County Roads would necessitate the raising of 7 mills in order to cope with the attracted motor traffic from the cities and towns.

All other roads would have to be kept up by statute labor or commutation by the Township.

Farmers' time for pleasure driving in the summer is very limited but almost every auto from the city would be pleasure driving on those County Roads every afternoon and "Daylight Saving" affords them one hour more for the purpose. At the same time the wealthy autoist half mill on the suburban area.

United persistency is necessary for the farmers which is proven by Robert Cook, esq., member for North Hastings who happens to be a practical former when he secured from the Provincial Government $21,550, to be expended on the roads of his riding without any concession from either County or City to be enjoyed by all alike.

If you going to provide for, and attract auto traffic from the cities and towns, by expending $1,500 per mile, the maintenance costs just as much more proportionately, as by expending $3,000 for maintenance, the cost in twenty years would b less in the $3,000 per mile for co struction. Oxford County that ha had some experience in County R System finds that to please all, th two and three quarter miles must added to the system and a by-law that effect has been passed estima ing $89,400 for construction alon for the 52¾ miles added.

In cities and towns householde being in the majority were not lo in demand water rates by way frontage tax on vacant prope where water mains passed such pr perty and today such frontage tax paid.

The majority paying up to 7 mi on the dollar to keep up main roa when their own roads are not co ing the ratepayers on the main roa one mill on the dollar will not long once he realizes the same demanding a frontage tax to tho living on such main roads.

It has already been agitated a is being pressed.

One of the Toronto papers in quo ing the remarks of a member of t City of Peterborough Motor Leagu writes as follows:

"53 per cent of the Autos of t City and County of Peterborough a owned outside of the City, the sam being an evidence of the wealth ar prosperity of the farmers, and th the City was spending $4,000 p year cleaning the mud off the pav ments, brought in by the farme wagons."

The wealth of the farmers as r ferred by that gentleman, is an ev dence that the condition of the roa has not debarred them from b coming wealthy and out of th wealth he should contribute liberal to provide pleasure roads for his poor brother from the City.

With regard to the expense clea ing streets after an invasion of t farmers, although for one farm that comes to the city to sell, come to buy, and if they neglect sweep the mud off their horses the should be compelled to have all the shipped from the T. Eaton Co., To ronto, to their nearest station there by getting rid of the nuisance the cause by driving on the city pave ments.

What Is the Board of Trade?

It's what the enterprising men of the city make it. A competent Board of Trade is the certain index of civic ambition and progressiveness.

It is a City Federation of all interests: not a union of class, section or sect. It's founded and fostered as a work-together league—for team-work.

The Peterborough Board is being equipped for action for and service to the agricultural, commercial, industrial and civic advancement of city and county.

Its chief function is to build up by using and applying the knowledge, skill and counsel of members who are especially fitted for committee work.

It aims to unite in co-operation the twenty or more business, mechanical and professional societies of Peterborough, which are in fact inter-related.

It stands for integrity and good faith among its members as well as for just and equitable principles in the business and professional life of the city.

The administration of the Board is vested in an elective Council and a sub-executive committee under a form of government that calls for an accounting.

Seventeen committees are to have charge of management, civic and promotive work: five on organization, six on municipal affairs and six on manufactures, trade and agriculture.

Peterborough will grow under the inspiration and backing of a progressive Board of Trade. It must grow in proportion as it uses the elements and factors of growth.

Canada is certain to advance rapidly and the cities will lead that advance. Shall Peterborough lead — or follow? The answer is yours.

Send your application to-day to President J. J. Turner for election as a "Charter" member, on Friday evening.

Music for the Returned Boys and Those Coming Soon

it will take months, and in some cases years, to banish the memory of the roar of battle from our returned heroes. Nothing will help so much to soothe shaken nerves and provide entertainment that has been lacking for years, like usic.

THE NEW EDISON

EDISON RE-CREATIONS

Nor is it only instrumental music it provides. The world's star singers it would be impossible to bring to your home, yet you sit and listen to their marvellous voices just the same as if they were in the room with you. All this you get with the New Edison. Is there any reason why you should get along without one any longer? Think of the Boy Heroes. We'll help you buy it, by making easy terms of payment.

WARNING TO DOG OWNERS

MUST PAY ADDITIONAL DOLLAR FOR SECOND DOG.

Owners of dogs are cautioned that while the license for one dog is $1, that for each additional dog is $2. That is to say, that any person owning two days must pay a fee of $3 in all.

The police complain that some citizens have been putting one over them in this respect. It has been discovered that some owners of dogs have taken out a license for one animal and sent the son or some other person to pay a dollar only for the second animal owned by them, thus evading the double fee for the additional dog. One woman has it seems pursued this policy at least a couple of years. The police give warning that in future any one caught evading the dog bylaw in this manner will be prosecuted for fraud.

The same rule as to double fees for each additional animal applys to female dogs, the license for which is $5.

THEY ACTED in TIME

During 1917, twenty men, all hale and hearty insured their lives in the Sun Life of Canada. All paid the first premium, none lived to pay the second.

They paid a total of $5078.26 and their beneficiaries received $74,212.60.

The records for 1918, owing to the ravages of the "Flu," will show the above record repeated many times, and all such acted in time.

What are YOU going to do about it? Act in time or be forever TOO LATE.

The Sun Life of Canada paid these claims willingly and promptly and will do the same for your loved ones IF YOU ACT IN TIME.

GUIDE TO OPERA

The following "guide to Opera" is furnished by W. W. Whitelock in Argosy:

Bang. thump. and crash, with a roll of the drum—
That's the motif announcing the hero will come;
Ting-aling-ting, and an arpeggio—
The heroine's off for a walk with her beau;
Two minor chords, with the clarinet's shriek—
The public is sure there is vengeance to wreak;
Umpty-dump, upty-dump down in the bass—
The villian is seeking the hero's disgrace;
Tweedley tweedley two or three times—
Here reference is made to most hideous crimes;
Crashescacophondus stunning the brain—
The hero's in danger that's perfectly plain;
Toot, toot! The cornet rings out on the air—
He triumphs and seizes his foe by the hair;
Mush. Mush. played slow and repented ad fin—
The hero is kissing the fair heroine!

THE STUDY OF THEORY

While the education of a violinist should include not only the art of violin playing but a comparatively thorough knowledge of the piano, theory, harmony, and composition as well, there are many pupils who can afford to pay only for violin lessons and not for lessons in the additional branches. In such cases the wise teacher will try to give the pupil a few of the more important points in musical theory since even a smattering of theory will enable the pupil to make much surer and more rapid progress than if he were ignorant of it. It will be urged that in the case of a pupil who has only a short half or hour lesson once or twice a week in violin playing, there is no time to devote to theory. While this is true to a certain extent yet a few minutes of each lesson could be devoted with profit to the most essential facts of theory. The progress in the end will be really greater.

SHOULD ENCOURAGE LITTLE TOTS TO IMITATE NATURE IN MUSIC

Whatever you may have read about the shallowness of imitating nature in music, it is a fact that children unconsciously draw a very close connection in their little minds between the music they expect to hear from musical instruments.

In work with little tots the following are some of the things with teachers may find beneficial to observe:

1.—Encourage the little ones to imitate on the piano the sounds in nature. It is a splendid form of making the ears more acute.

2.—Let them tell you whether they feel that a chord is sad, bright, etc.

3.—Compose little melodies representing undulating waves, rushing water butterflies

4.—Select pieces in the right grade which are imitative as in Grieg's "Papillon" not merely pieces with imitative names bestowed by the publisher in order to use some old title page.

5.—Leschetizky did not believe in excessive practice hours. "Two hours practice with the fingers and the head" he would say "is worth a thousand times more than six hours of merely mechanical playing."

THE PASSING OF THE HURDY-

What has become of the hurdy-gurdy? Not the barrel organ. with which it is frequently confused, but the real hurdy-gurdy, or vielle, as it is known to the French. Only one has been seen in the streets of New York within recent years and the prospects are that within a very short time this ancient intrument will be as extinct as the dodo. And yet time was when composers took it seriously enough to write music especially for it.

In London it used to be a common thing to hear a hurdy-gurdy in the streets, but of late years there has been only one left with a blind performer, and it may have dropped out by this time. He was not a good player, but there was a French player there in the sixties or seventies who is said to have been a master of his instrument.

The hurdy-gurdy or vielle, London Musical Opinion points out in differentiating it from the barrel organ, is a stringed instrument played by a revolving wheel. The wheel is covered with rosin and the strings are thus set in vibration. The notes are produced by the stopping of the strings by means of a clavier on the finger board, and other strings in addition provide a drone bass. Early in the eighteenth century the vielle has a considerable vogue in France, much as the harp has during the period of the First Empire. Many of the French vielles of that period are beautiful and artistic productions. In the hands of a skilled performer the hurdy-gurdy is not destitue of musical value. The staccato with the wheel is surprisingly brilliant; the defect of the instrument for the listener is its monotony of force and intonation, and for the player the extreme fatigue which the rotary motion induces in the muscles of the right arm.

A scholary little pamphlet upon the instrument entitled "Dissertation Historique sur la Vielle" by Antoine Terrason was published in 1741. At about the same period Michel Corrette wrote a method for the instrument; a copy exists at Rouen and another in the Musee of the Paris Conservatoire. Many of the less important French composers of the middle of the eighteenth century, and some indeed of higher rank, occupied themselves in writing pieces for this instrument during its period of favor.

SIXTEENTH NOTES

The commencement of a piano solo on the programme is not the signal for an outburst of general conversation.

Chopin's music conveys to people's of all nationalities a sublime message Paderewski said Chopin is a smuggler. who in harmless rolls of music carries Polish patriotism to his brothers across the bordery.

The real tenor range of voice is given as from C below middle C to the C above it. It is an exceptional tenor however. who can produce good tones on the two extreme notes of this range. The ordinary tenor is satisfied with a range of from the D below middle C to the B. B flat or even A above it.

UNION LABOR

ters' Union, and Secretary Stevens was instructed to call the attention of the Minister of Railways and Canals to this matter. The Labor Day Committee reported progress. There will be a celebration this year at Riverside Park, Labor always having been given first choice in the use of the grounds for that date.

Ald.-Apparent Crowe, chairman of the committee dealing with Mayor Duncans' contract for decorating the Public Library was not present last night, so that no action was taken. One delegate, however, declared that if the Council proposes to fight Labor ther should be reprisal. If it can be shown that Mayor Duncan held a contract with the city contrary to law then steps should be taken to unseat him.

Herbert A. Fife, electrician at the Quaker Oats, is also wiring inspector for the city and district, and objection was taken to one man holding two positions while so many men are idle. Action was deferred, the delegates not being clear as to whether the wiring inspector is paid by the city or by the Hydro Commission. When this point is settled the proper party will be asked to give the job to a returned soldier.

NO LICENSES NEEDED.

By Grocers and Other Retailers To Carry on Business.

Ottawa, May 7.—The Canada Food Board in the last few days has been receiving a large number of applications from every province in the Dominion for the renewal of licenses. Those from grocers and general retailers whose licenses expired at the end of last month have been most numerous. The board, of which only a skeleton staff remains at Ottawa for the winding up of the work, desires to repeat the announcement made some months ago that no food dealers in Canada except millers require licenses. Arrangements are being made to refund the renewal fees being sent in.

EASIER EXAMINATIONS.

Promised Normal School Students by Minister of Education.

Stratford, May 7.—That it was the intention of the Department to add to each Normal school staff a librarian and a teacher of household science was the announcement made by Hon. Dr. Cody, Minister of Education, speaking at the Normal school here. Dr. Cody was in the city as a guest of the Teachers' Association, and during the afternoon inspected the various schools. He told the Normal students that the curriculum next year would be simplified, including more practical work. In marking examination papers justice would be tempered with mercy in view of the extraordinary stress of the year.

CARPENTERS MAKE TERMS

Those in Guelph Agree to Accept 55 Cents an Hour.

Guelph, May 7.—After being on strike for one day and a half, the trouble between the Society of Carpenters and Joiners and the Carpenters' Section of the Guelph Builders' Exchange, was harmoniously settled and the men returned to their work. The terms of settlement are as follows: The carpenters will receive a flat rate of 55c per hour for an eight-hour day and 48-hour week; overtime will be paid at the rate of time and a half, except on Sundays and holidays when it will be double time; no work on Labor Day; the Carpenters' Section of the Builders' Exchange agrees to recognize the Union; one apprentice is allowed for every four journeymen; no apprentice to commence work under the age of 18 years. Both parties signed a contract for one year, and notice as to any change in the agreement will require a three months' notice.

The Easiest Way To Invest

Canada, following the example of other Allied countries, has made it possible for wage earners—men and women—to invest in safe securities without effort.

These securities are called War Savings Stamps.

The cost now $4.04, but by compounding interest, the $4.04 you invest now will be worth $5.00 in 1924. There is no other security in which you can invest such a small amount that is as safe and that bears so high a rate of interest.

In May W-S.S. Cost $4.04

Or you can start with 25 cents, by buying a Thrift Stamp. When you have sixteen Thrift Stamps, you can exchange them for a War Savings Stamp.

In June W-S.S. Cost $4.05

You take no risks. The Government of Canada guarantees to pay you back your money—with interest—at any time during the five years, or to pay you in 1924 $5.00 for every $4.00 (and a fraction) you invest now.

MAY EXTEND STREET RAILWAY TO THE DE LAVAL THIS SUMMER

Hydro-Electric Engineer Working on Estimates Now—Two New Cars Ready—Monaghan Road Extension to be Put Into Operation Soon

Since the street railway extension along the Monoghan Road was laid at the end of last year the tracks have lain ungraded and useless so far as travel was concerned. The cars necessary to make use of this extension in an improved railway service generally were not to hand and their delivery uncertain. At last, however, there is some reasonable ground for hope that this new extension will be utilized at any early rate.

His Worship Mayor Duncan and Alderman Edgar, while at Whitby yesterday, questioned Sir Adam Beck and Chief Engineer Gabey of the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario on radial railway and Peterborough's railway matters and that two new street railway cars are finished for this city and may be expected any day now. Mr. Babey also declared that work on grading the Monaghan Road tracks will be started at once and the line put into operation.

Mr. Gabey also assured Peterborough's civic representatives that he is working on estimates for extending the railway down to the De Laval factory and that there is every prospect for this work being undertaken and completed this summer.

Vitality borrowed from the eyes in early age will bankrupt the vision in later life. You can't overwork the eyes at any time without suffering the consequences, yet the eyes will stand a far greater demand on their reserve if they are given proper assistance when they need it. PRINCIPAL DYDE TO BE PREACHER

AT 86TH ANNIVERSARY OF ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY.

St. Andrew's Church has been fortunate in securing as its preacher on the occasion of the 86th anniversary The Rev. Principal S. Walters Dyde M.A., D.D., of Queen Theological College. Dr. Dyde graduated at Queen's, the medallist in both Classics and Philosophy, taking his B.A., in 1883 and M.A., in 1884. He is an L.L.D. of the University of New Brunswick and D.D. of Manitabo. He was professor of Philosophy in the University of New Brunswick 1886-1889 and came to the Professorship of Mental Philosophy in Queen's in 1889, holding that position till 1911, when he was appointed Principal of Robertson Theological College, Edmonton. He returned to Queen's as Principal of Queen's Theological College a year ago. He has published a translation of Hegel's Philosophy of Right, and Plato's Thaeatetus, which have been used widely as text books. He has lectured with great acceptance on Shakespeare in many places, coming to this city a little over a month ago and giving a scholarly instructive and delightful address to the members of the Ministerial Association and a company of invited guests on the "Philosophy of Forgiveness found in Shakespeare's Plays."

Dr. Dyde was a fellow student of Professor Adam Shortt and it is much so to the credit of Queen's that it should have produced two such fine scholars at about the same time, both of whom are widely known throughout Canada.

These anniversary services will afford the citizens of Peterboro an opportunity of hearing the new principal of Queen's.

To Petition For Union Pay Rate

The striking city laborers have originated a new idea with a view to securing what they want in the way of wages from the Council. They are circulating a petition among the business men and other citizens asking that they be paid the union rate of 45 cents an hour. Realizing that well paid workmen are more desirable as customers than those held down to a semi-starvation level, the merchants are signing the petition almost to a man.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darken's Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Color and Lustre at Once

Common garden sage, brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, a large bottle at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

TORONTO PACKERS RETURN TO WORK

STRIKE WAS CALLED OFF YESTERDAY—DISPUTE TO BE ARBITRATED.

Toronto, May 8. — The packing house strike ended yesterday. All the strikers have been reinstated and will return to work on Monday morning. This was the result of the conference between Senator Gideon Robertson, the employes and the packers, held in the King Edward Hotel yesterday.

Driving home, with argument upon argument, his point that the packers could not consider the situation as a dispute between themselves and their workmen, but must adopt a national viewpoint in view of the general unrest throughout the country, Senator Robertson effected a settlement of the strike which has tied up the Toronto packing houses since Monday and threatened the city food supply.

He brought out, according to one of the smaller packers, who claimed to have been held up by the attitude of the "Big Five," many things "Which they had never though of." He was "the savior of the day," said this packer.

Senator Robertson was assisted yesterday by Mr. E. N. Compton, Fair-wage Officer of the Dominion Government, who had every detail of the situation from the standpoint of bo thparties in his possession.

Union Recognized

The packers agreed to accept a Board of Conciliation which will be formed immediately to adjust the dispute. They refused this board four weeks ago. When the negotiations opened they were willing to meet a committee of the union and negotiate, but the men stood for a Board of Conciliation, since with a hundred per cent organisation it would mean recognition of the union of the packers refused to recognize the union when this point was brought up.

The men also obtained an advantage when at the commencement the packers agreed to reinstate all men and women who went on strike.

LITTLE GIRL NOW A PICTURE OF HEALTH

Suffered Day and Night for Years—After Taking Tanlac Looks Like Different Child.

"My little daughter, Joan, has gained ten pounds on Tanlac and now she's the very picture of health," said Jim Snell, well known poultry and truck farmer of Raleigh, Tenn.

"When Jean was only seven years old," continued Mr. Snell, "she was taken with something like nervous stomach trouble, and there wasn't a day or night she didn't suffer until we got Tanlac for her, and she's now fifteen years old. Her stomach was in such a bad condition she had to live on toast and eggs and milk, and she couldn't eat any kind of meats or vegetables. She complained of pains in her stomach all the time and would spit up half digested food. She was nervous and would toss and roll all night, for she couldn't sleep well at all. She was bilious and her complexion was bad, and she looked pale and sickly all the time. We gave her most every kind of medicine we could think of, but nothing helped her.

"After hearing of some of the good work Tanlac was doing, we got some for Jean, and it has done wonders for her. She actually looks and acts like a different child, and she's taken only two bottles of the medicine. She commenced picking up as soon as she started Tanlac, and she has gained ten pounds. She never has indigestion now, and eats just anything she wants—even such things as beans and other vegetable, and meats of all kinds. Why, she ate corn for dinner yesterday, and it was the first time in eight years she dared taste corn, and she eats boiled bacon thats cooked with vegetables. She's not nervous nor bilious now, and sleeps like a baby, and we never hear anything out of her from the time she goes to bed until she gets up in the mornings. Her skin has cleared up and her cheeks look fresh and rosy. You can just look at her and tell she's enjoying good health."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

CAVAN TOWNSHIP FOR GOOD ROADS

WILL PETITION THAT PORT HOPE-PETERBOROUGH ROAD BE A PROV. HIGHWAY.

A deputation from the Good Roads Committee of the Automobile Association and the Board of Trade composed of W. H. Bradburn, Chairman; H. O. Fisk, Sec'y; and Capt. Claud Rogers, waited upon the Cavan Township Council at Millbrook, yesterday on behalf of the Port Hope to Peterborough Provincial Highway Scheme, and the Cavan Council unanimously passed a resolution petitioning the Ontario Government to take over this road as a Provincial Highway.

The Committee feels very much encouraged with the Good Roads enthusiasm displayed at all points. Considerable road improvement is going on in Cavan and Hope Townships at the present time, in fact a log drag was noticed working in the streets of Millbrook with splendid results.

Other township Councils will be waited upon at the earlist opportunity with regard to this very important Highway Scheme.

The Gods of Mars

By
EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Twenty yards now separated the green men from the black line. Another word from the great Thark, and with a wild and terrifying battlecry the green warriors charged.

For a moment the black line held, but only for a moment; then the fearsome beasts that bore equally terrible riders passed completely through it.

After them came utan upon utan of red men. The green horde broke to surround the temple. The red men charged for the interior, and then we turned to continue our interrupted battle, but our foes had vanished.

My first thought was of Dejah Thoris. Calling to Carthoris that I had found his mother, I started on a run toward the chamber where I had left her, with my boy close beside me. After us came those of our little force who had survived the bloody conflict.

The moment I entered the room I saw that some one had been there since I had left. A silk lay upon the floor. It had not been there before.

There were also a dagger and several metal ornaments strewn about, as though torn from their wearer in a struggle; but, worst of all, the doorway leading to the pits where I had hidden my princess was ajar.

With a bound I was before it and, thrusting it open, rushed within. Dejah Thoris had vanished! I called her name aloud again and again, but there was no response. I think in that instant I hovered upon the verge of insanity. I do not recall what I said or did, but I know that for an instant I was seized with the rage of a maniac.

"Issus!" I cried. "Issus! Where is Issus? Search the temple for her, but let no man harm her but John Carter! Carthoris, where are the apartments of Issus?"

"This way!" cried the boy, and without waiting to know that I had heard him he dashed off at breakneck speed farther into the bowels of the temple.

As fast as he went, however, I was still beside him, urging him on to greater speed.

At last we came to a great carved door, and through this Carthoris dashed a foot ahead of me. Within we came upon such a scene as I had witnessed within the temple once before—the throne of Issus, surrounded by reclining slaves and about it the ranks of soldiery.

We did not even give the men a chance to draw, so quickly were we upon them. With a single cut I struck down two in the front rank. And then by the mere weight and momentum of my body I rushed through the two remaining ranks and sprang upon the dais beside the carved sorapus throne.

Issus, a black, repulsive creature, with nothing godlike about her, squatting there in terror, attempted to escape me and leaped into a trap behind her. But I was not to be outwitted by any such paltry subterfuge.

Before she had half risen I had grasped her by the arm, and then as I saw the guard starting to make a concerted rush upon me from all sides I whipped out my dagger and, holding it close to that vile breast, ordered them to halt.

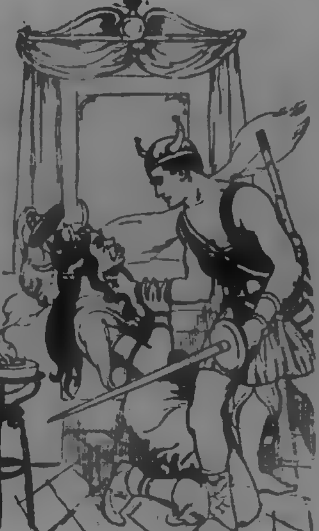
"Back!" I cried to them. "Back! The first black foot that is planted upon this platform sends my dagger into Issus' heart."

For an instant they hesitated. Then an officer ordered them back, while from the outer corridor there swept into the throne room at the heels of my little party of survivors a full thousand red men under Kantos Kan and Hor Vastus.

"Where is Dejah Thoris?" I cried to the thing within my hands.

For a moment her eyes roved wildly about the scene beneath her. I think that it took a moment for the true condition to make any impression upon her—she could not at first realize that the temple had fallen before the assault of men of the outer world.

When she did this must have come, too, a terrible realization of what it meant to her—the loss of power, humiliation, the exposure of the fraud and imposture which she had for so long played upon her own people.



"Where is Dejah Thoris?"

There was just one thing needed to complete the reality of the picture she was seeing, and that was added by the highest noble of her realm—the high priest of her religion—the prime minister of her government.

"Issus, goddess of death, and of life eternal," he cried, "arise in the might of they righteous wrath and with one single wave of thy omnipotent hand strike dead the blasphemers! Let not one escape.

"Issus, thy people depend upon thee. Daughter of the Lesser Moon, thou only art all powerful. Thou only canst save thy people. I am done. We await thy will. Strike!"

And then it was that she went mad. A screaming, gibbering maniac whirled in my grasp. It bit and clawed and scratched in impotent fury. And then it laughed a weird and terrible laughter that froze the blood.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Burning Temple.

THE slave girls upon the dais shrieked and cowered away. And the thing leaped at them and gnashed its teeth.

Finally I shook the thing, hoping to recall it for a moment to rationality.

"Where is Dejah Thoris?" I cried.

The awful creature in my grasp mumbled inarticulately for a moment, then a sudden gleam of cunning shot into those hideous, close-set eyes.

"Dejah Thoris? Dejah Thoris?" and then that shrill, unearthly laugh pierced our ears once more. "Yes, Dejah Thoris, I know. And Thuvia also. They each love John Carter. Ha-ah—but it is droll.

"Together for a year they will meditate within the temple of the Sun, but ere the year is quite gone there will be no more food for them. Ha-ah! What divine entertainment!" and she licked the froth from her cruel lips. "There will be no more food—except each other. Ha-ah! Ha-ah!"

The horror of the suggestion nearly paralyzed me. To this awful fate the creature within my power had condemned my princess. I trembled in the ferocity of my rage.

As a terrier shakes a rat I shook Issus, Goddess of Life Eternal.

"Countermand your orders!" I cried. "Recall the condemned. Haste or you die!"

"It is too late. Ha-ah! Ha-ah!"

She again commenced her gibbering and shrieking.

Almost of its own volition my dagger flew up above that wicked heart. But something stayed my hand, and I am glad now that it did. It is a terrible thing to have struck down a woman with one's own hand. But a fitter fate occurred to me for this false deity.

"Black Pirates," I cried, turning to those who stood within the chamber, "you have seen today the impotency of Issus—the gods are omnipotent. Issus is no god. She is a cruel and wicked old woman, who has deceived and played upon you for ages. Take her

With that I pushed the raving beast, whom a short half hour before a whole world had worshiped as divine, from the platform of her throne into the waiting clutches of her betrayed and vengeful people.

Spying Carthoris among the officers of the red men, I called to him to lead me quickly to the temple of the Sun, and without waiting to learn what fate the Black Pirates would wreak upon their goddess I rushed from the chamber with Carthoris, Hor Vastus, Kantos Kan and a score of other red nobles.

Carthoris led us rapidly through the inner chambers of the temple until we stood within the central court, a great circular space paved with a transparent marble of exquisite whiteness. Before us rose a golden temple wrought in the most wondrous and fanciful designs, inlaid with diamond, ruby, sapphire, turquoise, emerald and the thousand nameless gems of Mars, which far transcend in loveliness and purity of ray the most precious stones of Earth.

CYRIL MAUDE in "THE SAVING GRACE," at the Grand, one evening only, Thursday, May 22nd.

BEST YET IN ALL COMIC SERIES

"MUTT AND JEFF" WILL BE AT THE GRAND SAT.

Simon-pure comedy of the kind that insinuates itself into our very marrow and makes life one long, joyful song, is promised in the latest Mutt and Jeff series which is underlined as the next attraction at the Grand, Friday and Saturday Matinee and Evening, with the customary matinees.

Those who have had the good fortune to already have witnessed this piece of tomfoolery and fun, pronounce it as the final word in up-to-date stage entertainment and modern producing. It is in three rollicking acts and is entitled, "Mutt & Jeff in the Wooly West." The plot naturally permits those two wonderfully humorous cartoon personages ample opportunity to display their talents for arousing mirth, which has been their quota ever since their gifted creator "Bud" Fisher, first brought them into the light of fame and happiness.

As on previous occasions little Jeff becomes the buffer for number of side-splitting pranks at the hands of that champion practical joker and troublemaker, A. Mutt—though in the end Jeff sufficiently outwits his chum and tormentor by becoming the proud possessor of a valuable gold mine, which has been willed to him by his deceased brother. Their adventures carry them through many periods of stress and high jinks, but throughout all there is an irresistible tumult of hearty laughter and infectious mirth. As on former occasions, Manager Gus Hill, who again pilots the destinies of the inseparable twain of gloom dispellers, has mustered a capable cast which includes twenty dashing, fascinating and captivating pretty girls who will assist in dispensing and disporting themselves in a galaxy of tuneful songs and dances; unique features, inimitable surprises, novelties and a gorgeous display of gowns and scenic investiture are also promised.

CYRIL MAUDE TO COME TO GRAND

WILL BE SEEN HERE IN "THE SAVING GRACE" MAY 22ND.

After an absence of five years Mr. Cyril Maude returns to Peterboro and will be seen at the Grand on Thursday, May 22. Mr. Maude is playing only two one night stands in Canada, the cities selected for this honor, being Kingston and Peterboro. After his Canadian tour Mr. Maude will begin a long engagement in New York. He has an unusually fine supporting company under the direction of Charles Frohman, and will present Mr. C. Haddon Chambers' "The Saving Grace." The play was acted for two years in London and won great success at the beginning of the present season at the Empire Theatre in New York. Mr. Maude is now making a tour of the principal cities of the East and at its conclusion will return to England with the expectation of remaining there permanently. It is therefore highly probable that this will be the last opportunity that Peterboro playgoers will have to see this most popular and distinguished of English actor-managers.

GETTING READY FOR THE SEASON

LAWN BOWLERS' COMMITTEE ARE DRAWING UP THIS YEAR'S SCHEDULE.

The opening of the Lawn Bowling Season is now at hand and prospects for the local Club look exceptionally bright. A number of applications for membership have already been received and the executive are now forming the rinks and drawing up a schedule of games for the season.

The greens are in splendid condition and a few of the more enthusiastic member have already gotten off to a start. The opening, however, is to take place on Monday next, and a Double Tournament is being arranged to commence on that date. Any person wishing to join and whose names have not already been handed in are asked to advise the schedule committee, J. W. Maynard (Phone 155.) or R. Elliot (Phone 433, who will arrange to have them placed on a rink.

The body of Miss Emma Austraw, 19, a school teacher, was bound in a farm building near Greenburgh, Pa., with the arms tied behind her back. She had been beaten to death.

Britton Says New Training System Enabled Him To Win Welter Title

New Champion, Who Dethroned Ted Lewis, Says Change in Rehearsal Methods Increased His Strength and Put Him at His Best.

New York, May 8.—According to Jack Britton, who has just removed the welterweight crown from the dome of Kid Lewis, the chief factor entering into the victory was an entirely new system of training. Asked for particulars, Britton said:

"I have noticed for some time past that as a result of the short, decisionless bouts nearly all the boxers have fallen into the habit of confining their training to a little boxing to loosen the muscles and train the eye. In consequence, while the contestants boxed pretty well they lacked staying powers and especially were unable to fight or hit with vigor. They were also unequal to the task of taking punishment.

"Quite naturally, the rapidity with which the leading boxers engage in short bouts precludes time for systematic training, as they are compelled to hop about the country for great distances and hence are at a great disadvantage if they happen to bump against a fighter who has prepared himself for the contest.

"I have been handicapped by the system, but I determined the first time I was matched for an important fight I would get in trim even if I had to cancel half a dozen other matches.

"The chance came when the match with Lewis was ratified nearly a month in advance of ringtime. I at once asked my manager, Dan Morgan, to make no matches in the interim, as I wanted to try my new system of training. I said I was determined to go into the ring in condition to put up the best fight that was in me, and to do that I felt it necessary to get my wind in first-class condition and also to increase my strength and capacity for hard work.

"I got all the boxing necessary in the three-round tilts at the base hospitals every night, but my heavy work I put in on the Harlem speedway. Although that famous course is not open to automobiles, yet there is no objection to its use by a kidmobile. I have a little carriage built for two. It is a strongly constructed vehicle, with rubber tires, and is used to enable my pair of kids, one two years and the other 16 months of age, to inspect the surrounding country.

"Once a day I strapped the youngsters into the wagon and going to the speedway trundled them at a good rate of speed five miles and return. This was about 1½ hours of road work a day, and while the task at times threatened to overcome father it was royal sport for the youngsters.

"As a result of this work I felt like a 2-year-old when I got into the ring at Canton, and I fought like a whirlwind from the tap of the bell in the opening round until I had Lewis on the floor in the ninth. I never tired for a second and I put up the best fight of my life. I also had much more steam behind my punches, and the thumps I got from Lewis had no effect on me.

"A boxer who trains with a shampoo and a shoe shine cannot fight with vigor for more than a round or two, and then he is compelled to ease up for a round or so till he gets his wind. This is what makes so many bouts uninteresting. It would be a good thing if bouts were longer and to a decision."

Britton also called attention to the fact that the published records flatter him in reference to his age. The date of his birth is set down as Oct. 14, 1885, whereas, it was 1883, which shows he is nearing his 37th year.

He has been engaged in ring contests for seventeen years and apparently is good for several years to come.

CAN ALEXANDER WIN 30 GAMES?

RETURNED HERO NOW FACES OTHER THAN A WAR PROBLEM.

As the ages slide deeper and deeper into the dusty antiquity of time, life becomes more complex every era.

The first Alexander, completing one war, sat down and shed bitter tears because he had no more worlds to subdue.

The last Aleaxnder—meaning Grover Cleveland — returns from the world's toughest war with the game's toughest pitching job still on his hands. And by the game's toughest pitching job we mean the task of winning thirty or more ball games for his fourth successive year. Nineteen hundred and eighteen in Alexander's case, is naturally thrown out, as he was able to pitch in only two games, through service in the army.

Alexander now has a chance, toiling with the Cubs, to put an undertaking over that baffled the art of Mathewson, Young, Johnson, McGinnity, Waddell, Walsh and all the remaining line of those who reached the crest.

None of these was ever able to win thirty ball games through four successive seasons of pitching. Young won thirty games or more three times in a row. Starting back sixteen years ago, Mathewson won thirty games in 1903, thirty-three games in 1904 and thirty-one games in 1905. But in 1906 he dropped away to twenty-two games and broke up the big drive.

Only once thereafter was he able to glide by the thirty-game mark and that was in 1908, when he packed away thirty-seven victories.

The noted Cub, who earned his fame with the Phillies, had a later start than Mathewson.

The latter indulged in his three-year orgy at the ages of 23, 24 and 25. Alexander failed to reach thirty victories until he was 28. He was 30 when he won his final thirty games.

And now he begins his last shot at the record around 32 years of age. Mathewson at 32 won twenty-three games and dropped twelve.

Returning from the Rhine and exchanging khaki for baseball grey, Alexander hopes to resume where he left off in 1917—his last complete year.

The big Cub broke the 30-game mark for the first time, operating with the Phillies in 1915, when he fell heir to thirty-one victories. In 1917 he rose to thirty-seven victories and a year later barely arrived with thirty.

Note the keen similarity between Mathewson's three best successive years and Alexander's best:

Mathewson.	Alexander
1903-30 victories	1915 31 victories
1904-33 victories	1916-33 victories
1905-31 victories	1917-30 victories

In each case the total is precisely the same—ninety-four victories over a three year push. A remarkable coincidence, as coincidences go.

Sporting Gossip

This is Hugh Jennings' thirteenth year as manager of the Detroit Tigers. Hugh is a great believer in his star of destiny and not a bit superstitious otherwise and thinks his thirteenth season will be a big one.

Though Pat. Donovan with local men as his partners are nominally in control of the Newark club of the International the impression still prevails that Joe Lannin is the man putting up the coin for the enterprise.

For an invalid nervous wreck and so on, Charley Herzog has looked pretty healthy in his play so far. If he gets any sicker the Braves will have to be counted in the pennant race.

The Bloomington club of the Three-I league announces the signing of a pitcher named Newkirk, who "won 18 straight games for the Oakland Coast league club before he joined the navy." The charitable view is that the press agent for the Bloomington club didn't give out that story. Such bunk doesn't help baseball any.

The big leagues have nothing on Bob Brown's International Northwestern League. On the same date as the major's opening the I. N. L. (that ought to cover it as a designation) started off on its novel experiment of a "chop league" under National Association protection. The schedue called for Seattle to open at Victoria and Tacoma at Vancouver. The season is to close on Labor day, following which will come the play off for the pennant between the leading teams of the organization.

Miller Huggins says Sunday baseball in New York is going to make money for every club owner in the American and National League.

It looks bad for George Halas, former star all round athlete at the Great Lakes. The manner in which Sammy Vick is playing right field for the New York Yankees makes it look as though Friend George will have trouble "busting in." Vick kept Bobby Roth busy recently chasing long extra base wallops.

Just off the sand lots—that's the dope on George Uhle, youthful pitcher of the Cleveland Indians, but he's making the veterans sit up and pay attention. This pitcher figured in the national amateur championships last summer and is now a full-fledged big leaguer.

That report about Ruth being suspended, like that of Mark Twain's death, seemed highly exaggerated. Pitchers wish Ruth would be suspended, exiled, banished or sent a package with a Gimble wrapper on it or something like that.

KING EDWARDS WON.

A well-contested game of baseball was played on the Queen Mary school grounds Tuesday evening last, between the King Edward and Queen Mary senior teams. King Edward won by a score of seven to five. The batteries were:

King Edward — Evans, Green and Rye.

Queen Mary Hill, Menzies and Davis.

Mr. Jack Thirnbock made an efficient umpire.

Calls Congress In Special Session

Washington, May 7.—President Wilson issued a call by cable today for a special session of Congress to begin May 19. This is to consider the peace treaty.

'MULE' CHRISTENED 'MILTON'

Watson, Phillies' Pitcher, Doesn't Know How He Got Nickname

When "Mule" Watson, the Phillies' big pitcher, was christened, the person, at the instigation of the future ball tosser's parents, hung the name of "Milton" on him, at which the "Mule" registered his first kick. As soon as he grew old enough, he made a habit of "licking" any kid that referred to him as "Milton" and at his behest the cognomen was first discarded and then forgotten. Just when he acquired the name of "Mule" he doesn't know, but that's what he has been called over since he can remember.

The "Mule," besides being a pretty fair pitcher, is a rather picturesque character, a queer, eccentric sort of fellow whom some managers have found it difficult to handle. He doesn't always attend strictly to business, but when he does is capable of giving opposing batters something to think about.

He failed to report in Philadelphia on the day set for the departure of the team for the training camp this spring, and Jack Coombs was worried concerning his whereabouts. After the club had been at Charlotte for two days, he wandered in, and, without offering any explanation for his failure to appear earlier, inquired in a laconic tone:

"Got a stall here for the mule?"

FAVOR ATHLETICS ON SUNDAY

English Soldiers Demand Sporting Activities on Sabbath

An increased demand for Sunday sports throughout England is being made by British soldiers and sailors now being demobilized and the innovation is proving popular as a legacy from the war. The spectacle of participating in sports on Sunday was first introduced in England by soldiers of this country. With the arrival of Uncle Sam's fighters and their athletic paraphernalia, Sunday baseball games on public grounds become a popular feature in London.

Subsequently tennis matches between Queen's Club and Manchester were attractions and now the demand is general for a much wider indulgence in Sunday athletics.

Rulter 543, Barrette 538, Carter 538 and A. Fitzgerald 534. De Laval total of three games 2595. High Rollers 2586.

For the Lawn Bowlers Craig had the high count of 594, Maynard next with 173 and high single of 251. For the Shamrocks, King had the high count of the evening with 598, Corai 586, Sullivan 502.

READY TO GO TO FRANCE'S RESCUE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 7.—In addition to the securities afforded in the treaty of peace here the President of the United States has pledged himself to propose to the Senate and the Premier of Great Britain has pledged himself to propose to the British Parliament, an engagement subject to the approval of the Council of the League of Nations to come immediately to the assistance of France in case of unprovoked attack by Germany.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Once a bylaw is passed in conformity with the Act you are in it to stay both for County Highway and Provincial Highway.

Do not imagine for one minute that the Government will "consider" and established Provincial Road "not a proper road for such expenditure" neither will the "Great Automobile Associations" of the cities and towns who are behind the scheme consent to such abandonment.

Provincial Highways with 28 fet culverts and 24 feet driveway with 14 feet wide of solid stones built by the Government costing up to $10,000 per mile then maintenance to follow costing the township through which it runs 40 per cent of such expenditures with 100 autos from the cities and towns to one from the farmers driven over it.

It is not possible for more than 15 per cent of the farmers in a township to make any regular use of such Provincial County Highway.

With the auto fees that belong to the people and a like sum expended by the County with 40 per cent from the Government added to the amount put up by the County on County roads more rural residents would be equitably served. If the Automobile Associations of the cities and towns want elaborate Provincial Highways other than County roads it is up to the Government to provide such.

Respectfully yours,
ED. M. ELLIOTT.

MR. BURNHAM STANDS PAT

Editor The Review:—I have this day received two petitions one from the employes of the De Laval Co., and the other from the emplyes of the Ackerman Co., requesting that as their representative, I will do all I can to prevent any change in our present protective tariff and general fiscal system in order that labor may be protected against cheap foreign labor and cheap foreign labor's products.

Permit me to say that I will cheerfully do as they request. There may be a few minor changes required, but since prices in most things are about the same in Canada as they are where similar wages prevail in other countries, ther could be no gain in throwing ourselves upon the mercy of foreign exporters who would break up our systems of industry and then give us what they liked and at what price they liked.

I am in favor of a permanent Tariff Commission, which, like our Railway Commission will regulate tariff matters between parliamentary sessions, and prevent absurdities which sometimes rise up like mushrooms in a night. There are no freetraders now. But these are those who call themselves such and preach a selfish sectional policy likely to damage Canada as a whole.

Yours truly,
J. H. BURNHAM.

THE CITY'S POSITION.

Eight Men Are Now At Work on King Street.

There are eight men working on the King street surface drainage, started yesterday, one of them being a member of the union.

The Romaine street sewer operations are tied up today, but City Engineer Parsons expects a gang of men to start there tomorrow morning, some of whom belong to the union.

The engineer says street cleaning is not suffering to any serious extent through the strike. Should the situation in this respect become aggravated, he intends putting the horse broom to work to remove the worst of the muck.

Theatrical publicity is a vocation that has been man's exclusive possession apparently butt Miss Mabel Ryan, who is blazing the way for "Tea For Three" reports that the work is being taken up with great zeal by women.

Miss Ryan cites Miss Anna Marble, Miss May Dowley and Miss Affie McVicker of the Selwyn office, New York, as being young women who have made names for themselves in the business end of the theatrical profession.

MISS ELSA RYAN,

Family Reunion; 59 Years Married

We take the following from the Tulsa Daily World, Oklahoma, U.S.A.:

"The home of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Britton, 1544 East Sixth street, will be the scene of a family gathering today, the occasion being the 59th weddnig anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Britton, residents of Tulsa for the past 10 years.

There will be a dinner at which members of the family and a few intimate friends, about 30 in all, will be guests and the aged couple will be presented with a number of fine gifts from their children and friends. Of the 11 children born to Mr. and Mrs. Britton, two are deceased and the surviving members of the family will be in attendance as follows: B. H. Britton, well known business man of Peterboro, Ontario, Canada, and Mrs. Britton; J. S., W. L., C. O. Britton and Misses Sarah and Susan Britton, all of Tulsa. Owing to the frail condition of Mr. Britton the affair will be very quiet.

"The Brittons are Kentuckians, the family having removed from that state to Oklahoma a decade ago."

The above is of local interest from the fact that the Mr. B. H. Britton referred to was for some time manager of Heintzman Hall, in the Royal Bank building, corner George and Hunter streets. It was under his management that this spacious home for Ye Olde Firme's pianos was opened. A few weeks ago Mr. and Mrs Britton were called to Oklahoma by the precarious condition of the father of Mr. B. H. Britton, who was then not expected to live many days and they left Peterborough with the best wishes of a small army of friends by who mthey are highly esteemed and respected.

Revival Service Held at Consecon

EVANGELIST KENNEDY CLOSES A SERIES OF SUCCESSFUL MEETINGS.

Evangelist H. D. Kennedy, of Peterboro, has recently closed a month's campaign at Consecon, Ont. When the first altar call was given over thirty persons came forward and sought the Lord. Great crowds attended the meetings and night after night the altar was thronged with earnest seekers. The most of the converts were heads of families and many family altars were set up in the homes of the people. No weekly prayer meeting had been held in the place for years and the Wednesday night after the meetings closed a large number were present and over sixty took part in testimony and prayer.

The pastor and people are greatly encouraged. Mr. Kennedy is now in a meeting at Ardin, Ont., and expects to open his big ten meeting here in June.

All Is Not Gold That Glitters In Phone World

At the recent telephone rate enquiry before the Dominion Railway Board the outstanding bone of contention between the Bell Telephone Co. and Canadian municipalities was that of financing, especially in regard to depreciation of apparatus and its replacement. Referring to this vexed question the Financial Times of Montreal says:

"Edmonton has a municipal telephone system for which it has sold debentures totalling $1,916,710. This sum apparently represents the total investment on capital account. In 1908 the city installed a complete automatic system which has been frequently improved and extended since that time.

"Now, it is stated, Superintendent Lowery of the civic telephone department says that the entire equipment must be scrapped and new apparatus installed and that it must be done at once if the city is to continue to meet demands for service. He places the necessary new outlay at $1,021,723. To meet this he has on hand the sum of $200,000 made up of unexpended capital and depreciation fund. Thus $821,723 must be found by a new capital issue. Mr. Lowry estimates that the apparatus to be discarded—which apparently cost upwards of a million dollars—should bring about 15 per cent. of its original cost. The city already has an offer of $35,000 for it.

"This is surely a striking example of the need for an ample replacement reserve. If Edmonton piles on top of its present telephone debenture debt a new capital issue of upwards of $800,000, as is proposed, it will likely make higher telephone rates necessary. Either that, or the general taxpayer—telephone user and non-telephone user alike—must foot the bills."

Prudence is the wing plucked from some past folly.

FRANK McCULLOUGH

The witness said Miss Lavelle had admitted to her that she had purchased saws from a well known Toronto hardware firm and sent them to the condemned man in boxes of chocolates delivered by Guard Currell, after, first giving Currell his pick of the box to lull his suspicions.

Miss Lavelle, she said, had also admitted buying veronal from a drug store and supplying McCullough with a watch and money. McCullough had stayed overnight with the Lavelle woman at Sumach street, she said, and had left for West Toronto, on a freight train the next morning.

W. B. Horkins, counsel for the defence, made an effort to have Miss Mark's evidence thrown out. He objected to the witness's story being submitted unless the Crown could prove that the prisoner had voluntarily confided in her. His objections were overruled.

When all the evidence and the addresses of counsel had been heard, Judge Coatsworth reserved judgment until Tuesday morning. It was an important case, he said, and he wished time to look over his notes.

SIR EDMUND KEMP ASSERTS THAT THERE WAS NOTHING AMISS WITH ARGYLE HOUSE

Overseas Minister of Militia Arrives in Halifax and Defends Administration of His Department in London—Trouble Was Due to Anxiety of Men to Get Home.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, May 9.—The Cunard liner Nauretania docked at Halifax this morning with four thousand returning Canadian soldiers made up of number 1, 2 and 3 brigades of artillery or siege batteries, one to twelve under the command of General Andrew McNaughton, D.S.O., and a few other details. Among the ninety-one civilian passengers brought out by the Nauretania were Sir Edward Kemp, Canadian Oerseas Minister of Militia Sir Charles Ross, Sir Percy and Lady Daniels and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid. Sir Edward Kemp vigorously defended Arygle House, the Canadian headquarters in London, upon his arrival here.

What Caused Trouble

Sir Edward Kemp said that out of one thousand officers who had been attached to the Canadian Expeditionary force he did not believe a dozen could be found who would say anything derogatory of the work done at Argyle House. The facts of the matter were that the staff at Argyle House had accomplished a stupendous work under exceptionally esever difficulties. It was only a question of time before the problems precipitated principally by anxiety of the men to home would work out their own solution. It was this anxiety to get home more quickly than ships could be found to get them home which was responsible for the Kinmel Park riots.

Lieut.Col. W. E. Prowse, D.S.O., of Charlottetown is in command of No. 1 artillery brigade returning on the Mauretania. Lieut. Col. Magee of St. John is in command of the second brigade.

Major Dobbie Returns

Among officers with especially good records returning on the Mauretania was Major Hugh Dobbie, D.S.O., who commanded No. seige battery during the latter stages of the fighting and for a brief period commanded the McGill unit. Major Dobbie enlisted in St. John, as a gunner at the outbreak of the war. He was formerly attached to the Bank of Montreal and is well known in Peterborough, Ont., St. John, and Halifax.

ANARCHIST PLOT DISCOVERED IN ENGLAND, NEWSPAPER SAYS

Sailors to Mutiny and Soldiers to March Out of Barracks.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, May 9.—A conspiracy to induce British sailors to mutiny and soldiers to demobilize themselves by marching out of their barracks has been discovered, according to The Daily Mail. The premises of various persons have been searched and documents seized. The stations involved the newspaper says, include four in France and several in England, while sailors in naval ports have been circularized with a view to inciting them to seize ports and invite the soldiers and police to join them.

The object of the plot is stated to be to compel the Government to use force if the projected disorders should occur, the organisers believing that this would precipitate anarchy.

MAY DEBATE IRISH QUESTION AT PARIS

U. S. DELEGATES WILL TRY TO GET QUESTION BEFORE CONFERENCE.

London, May 9.—"We have had no conference and have requested none with Premier Lloyd George, as has been stated," was a statement made by Frank R. Walsh, chairman of the delegation of representatives of Irish societies in the United States, which has been visiting Dublin during the past week. Mr. Walsh left Dublin last Monday night, leaving his colleagues in that city.

"We wanted safe conducts from Ireland to Paris for Professor Edward De Valera and a delegation representing the Irish republic," he continued, "and transmitted our request to Mr. Lloyd George directly. He answered to Col. E. M. House that he wished to confer with us before acting, but that his duties precluded his seeing us in less than a week. So we went to Ireland, and will be back early next week to meet the Premier.

Get Case Before Conference.

Mr. Walsh stated that he came from Dublin to this city on purely private matters and had not made any effort to see any members of the Government. He is traveling on a diplomatic passport, being given every facility by British and American authorities.

Confidence was expressed by Mr. Walsh that the Irish representatives would be given an opportunity to lay their case before the allied representatives in Paris.

Trying To Settle The Civic Strike

LABOR MEN, ALDERMEN AND MERCHANTS HELD CONFERENCE THIS MORNING.

There was a meeting held in the Board of Trade rooms at 10 a.m. today, the object being to devise some means to settle the present strike or the city laborers and carpenters. Those present were Messrs. E. F. Mason, of the Retail Merchants Association, ex-Ald. E. Worth, Secretary Mr. Stevents of the Trades Council and Ald. McIntyre and Gainey and Mr. J. J. Hartley.

The situation was thoroughly discussed and it was finally decided to refer the whole question to the Board of Trade at the meeting to be held tonight.

The carpenters held a meeting last night and the result was a decision to stand by their guns and to insist upon the union scale as originally set.

Atlantic Fliers Postpone Flight

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, May 9.—Departure of naval airplanes, N-C 1 and N-C 3, from Halifax for Trespassey Bay, Nfld., on the second leg of their Transatlantic flight has been postponed until tomorrow.

MANY MEN APPLY TO CITY FOR WORK

MORE NON-UNION HELP ENGAGED—INCINERATOR IN OPERATION AS USUAL.

City Engineer Parsons reports today that the city is not so far suffering from the strike of laborers. Enough men are at work on the King street drainage system, men started today loading gravel for grading purposes, and a sufficient street-cleaning gang is at work.

The work on the Romaine street sewer has stopped, but the engineer reports that it has progressed so far that there is no hurry.

Flooded With Applications.

Street Commissioner Harry Evans says he is flooded with applications for employment, but the kind of men applying need the support of a few experienced hands to coach them in order to assure efficient progress. In some civic laboring, he says, experience counts to a certain extent as well as in skilled operations; and he admits that in this respect the city misses the men on strike who have been in the corporation's employ for a number of years on such work as sewers and sidewalks. However, the commissioner is optimistic of conditions being adjusted shortly.

At the Incinerator.

Sanitory Inspector Stapleton has two new men in charge of the incinerator, which is in operation as usual. The two men on strike had their wages increased about a week ago—Jack Murphy was raised from $2.75 a day to $3.25, and his helper from $2.50 to $3.00—the engineer contends that the men at the incinerator have one of the easiest jobs in the giving of the corporation so far as laboring is concerned.

CHINA REFUSES TO SIGN THE TREATY

GOVERNMENT NOT SATISFIED WITH TERMS AS TO DISPUTED TERRITORY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 9.—The Chinese delegation has cabled instructions from Peking not to sign the treaty of peace because of the Kiao-Chau-Shangtung settlement.

It is generally believed that Germans will answer the delivery of the treaty of peace by proposals relative to certain phases of the document. A competent commission will examine the German answer and if modifications are necessary the Germans will be notified. It is expected that in this rejoinder the enemy will be allowed four or five days to agree definitely to the whole treaty. It is, therefore, probable that from twenty-five to thirty days will elapse before the pact is finally signed.

Germans Fail to Agree

The German delegates to the Peace Congress are considerably divided among themselves in their views on the peace terms submitted by the Allied and associated powers. It was intimated today by a high British authority, a Reuter statement says.

ENGINEERS FAVOR HIGHWAY SCHEME

WILL CO-OPERATE TO HAVE PETERBORO-PORT HOPE ROAD PROVINCIALIZED.

A regular meeting of the Engineers' Club was held in the Board of Trade rooms on Thursday evening, when an address on "Reconstruction Problems" was delivered by Jas. Mackintosh, of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission's staff. There was considerable discussion by the members present, including Mr. R. B. Rogers, A. L. Killaly, and others.

The club decided to support the efforts of the local Motor League, to have the road between Peterborough and Port Hope made part of the Provincial Highways scheme.

It was decided last night to go ahead with the organization in Peterborough of a branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada. It has been felt by the members of the club that while it has been successful to a high degree in its various activities, it will have a much greater influence as part of the Institute. The Institute is Canada-wide, with branches in all the important centres, and its aims and acts are such that to advance the profession of engineering in all its parts.

CHARGED WITH POISONING DOG

AGAINST LAW TO SET POISON FOR ANIMALS—JUDGMENT RESERVED.

At the police court this morning a woman was charged by a neighboring married couple with having caused the death of their dog by leaving poison within access to the animal, which in death gave every sign of strichnine poisoning. The alleged offence is said to have occurred on April 30th last.

In the course of the hearing his Worship pointed out that the law prohibits the placing of poison within reach of other people's animal or birds, under a heavy penalty. The defence was that the poisoned meat in question had been destined for cats, and Magistrate Dumble observed that the law applies to cats, some of which are valuable. A Persian cat is worth $500.

Dog Enjoyed Tea and Cake

The female complainant swore the Defendant came to her on April 30th and said she had put strichnine under her (defendant's) shed for cats, (evidently as a caution to keep her dog confined.) Plaintiff at once chained up the dog, which was at the time in its usual health. Shortly afterwards her niece informed her that the animal was sick and on reaching the dog she found the animal in a dying condition. The defendant remarked to witness' husband "I did not intend to poison your dog." Witness admitted that all parties concerned were very friendly but the defendant did not like dogs. She knew that defendant had laid poison for cats long before she owned the dog. "Five minutes before the alleged poisoning," declared complainant, "I gave the dog a lunch of tea and cake."

A neighbor corroborated previous witness' statement that defendant had admitted laying poison on a plate under the shed for cats, and had remarked to her that she must tell complainant to chain up her dog as she did not want him to get the poison.

Admitted Placing Poison

Defendant admitted placing poison under her shed on the 30th of April; nothing was under there at the time. Her object was to get rid of a family of cats that had made their home under the shed, and bothered her hens and chickens. She warned complainant and saw her chain her dog up 5 or 10 minutes after she laid the poison; the dog she contended was not in her yard from the time she put the poison out until the animal was chained up. She only put poison on one piece of meat on the plate—about an ounce—and the meat was still there after the dog had died. On the morning of the 30th of April she told complainant to tie up her dog, as she was going to set poison.

A daughter of defendant corroborated her mother's evidence as to the quantity of poisoned meat used and the quantity examined after the dog's death.

Judgment was reserved until Monday next.

J. O'Brien for the defendant.

BRITISH LABOR PARTY DECLARES THAT PEACE TERMS ARE UNJUST TO GERMANS

Harsh Conditions Will Cause Jealously That is Sure to Give Rise to Further International Disputes—Allied Powers Should Consent to Disarmament Imposed on Teutons.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, May 9.—After moving to consider the terms of peace imposed upon Germany by the Allied and associated nations, the National Executive Committee of the British Labor Party last night issued a manifesto declaring the treaty in some essential particulars opposed to the declarations of President Wilson, of the Inter-allied Labor Conference and the Berne conference and very defective from the standpoint of world peace.

"It bears evidence of a compromise by the capitalism and the imperialism which still dominate European states," the manifesto declared. "Any permanent denial of Germany of an opportunity to become a mandatory under the League of Nations must cause jealousy and unrest leading to further international disputes."

Other points criticised were the failure to give Germany representation on the Reparations Commission and the omission of provisions for a progressive limitation of armaments by the other signatories to the treaty. The manifesto protested against the permanent separation of the Saare basin from Germany and advocated a plebescite in Malmedy and other contested territories between Belgium and Germany.

"A Capilistic Peace."

Paris, May 9.—The Socialist press criticizes the peace conditions severely, one newspaper, for example, under the caption of "A Peace of Oppression and Injustice" says: "The capitalistic and imperialist world as it exists could only produce capitalist and imperialist peace, which prepares the way for another war. Between President Wilson's fourteen points and certain stipulations communicated to Count Von Brockdorff-Rantzau there are hiatuses and contrasts which are too striking."

REV. W. S. H. ROWAND GOES TO CHURCH AT MOOSE JAW

Popular Minister in Charge of St. Andrew's Asked by Forward Committee of Presbyterians to Accept Position in West--Leaves Here June 1.

Rev. W. L. H. Rowand, who on Sunday last completed two years of successful and highly appreciated service as minister in charge of St. Andrew's Church, will leave the city on June 1 to take charge of Moose-jaw Presbyterian church of the same name. By that time it is expected that Rev. James Rollins, now overseas, will be home to resume his pastoral duties.

Mr. Rowand has decided to accept the new position at the request of the Forward committee of the Presbyterian Church for Canada. The pastor whose place he takes, Rev. Dr. W. G. Wilson, has been appointed organiser for Saskatchewan of the Forward Movement of which so much is heard these days. Mr. Rowand's services in the new field were required at once, but he decided to remain until Mr. Rollins gets back and until the return of his son, Lieut. E. M. Rowand, who went overseas in the early days of hostilities and who since the signing of the armistice has been court-martial officer in France.

Mr. and Mrs. Rowand, when they leave the city, will leave a host of friends behind them who will wish them every success in their new field. Mrs. Rowand has been active in every branch of women's work in connection with the congregation and her wise counsel and long experience has been a source of strength and inspiration.

Both as a preacher and a pastor Mr. Rowand has been successful, and at the last annual meeting of the congregation resolutions appreciative of his excellent work were unanimously adopted. The West is not new to him, as it was in Manitoba that he held his first pastoral charge and where he and Mrs. Rowand spent the early years of their married life. They have always had an affection for the scene of their former labors, and are well pleased at the opportunity to return.

Mr. Rowand's first charge was Burnside in Manitoba. He went from there to Rapid City in the same province, and afterwards received a unanimous call to St. Andrew's Church, Fort William, holding that position for seventeen years. While in the West he was chaplain of the 96th Manitoba Grenadiers, and during the Northwest rebellion in 1885 saw field service with his battalion.

St. Andrew's Church, Moosejaw, of which Mr. Rowand is to have charge, is one of the leading Presbyterian churches in Saskatchewan. The edifice cost $200,000 in the days when labor and building material were normal, and is a credit to the community in which it stands and to the enterprise of the people who erected it. The congregation embraces a large membership.

When Capt. Rollins returns, St Andrew's congregation plan to give him a royal welcome home, and it is likely that on the same occasion the people will take a formal farewell of Mr. and Mrs. Rowand.

TREATY PLEASES OTTAWA HOUSE

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT CHEER AS SUMMARY IS READ TO THEM.

Ottawa, May 9.—The peace treaty terms completely overshadowed the proceedings in the House of Commons. The members were only interested in thes terms Germany is being asked to sign, and most of the day there was a bare quorum in the House. Hon. N. W. Rowell read a summary to the Commons at the opening. The clause that Germany was to restore to France Alsace and Lorraine was greeted with cheers. There were more cheers when the clauses in regard to curtailment of Germany's armament were read, and a regular ovation at the announcement that the ex-Kaiser was to be tried. There was no doubt that the terms satisfied the Canadian Parliament. They were frankly much stiffer than was anticipated.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

FRIDAY, MAY 9, 1919

THE JEWS FILE A PROTEST.

THE JEWS of Peterborough have united in a protest against some of the provisions in the new immigration bill now before Parliament, and a copy of their list of objections has been sent to J. H. Burnham, M.P. for West Peterborough. It must be admitted by any fair-minded person who reads the protest as published in The Review yesterday that every point is well taken and that the objection as a whole is justified.

On their record in every branch or department of citizenship, the Jews are certainly a desirable class of residents for Canada. All these complaints so often heard today on the control of aliens, does not in any way apply to the Jews. The literary test for immigrants is, after all, only on unworkable theory. Some of the best pioneers that Canada has ever attracted would have been denied admission to the country if this test had been the standard by which their ability was judged. No new country could ever be settled with such an enactment in force, and it is equally impracticable now even when it is proposed to limit the number of aliens to be admitted to Canada. Many an illiterate alien has settled here and has developed into a worthy resident. It is not so important that he should be able to read and write as that his children should be educated in the public schools just as are the offspring of the native-born. Get the right class of immigrant, regardless of his scholastic attainments. He will not only in his own interests learn the language of his new nation, but the chances are that in the case of his children all traces of foreign nationality will disappear.

Naturally, the Jews ask that they be not included in the class that is regarded as criminal. Here, too, they are justified by their record. If they have characteristics, a tendency to commit offences against the law is certainly not one of them. There is not an alien race on earth, there is not a strange people in Canada whose morality is of a higher type than that of the Jews. There is no class, not even the native-born and highly churched Canadian people themselves who can show so small a percentage in police annals as can the Jews. It is impossible to gainsay hard facts, and simple justice demands this admission.

During the war the Jews were not regarded as aliens in any of the allied nations where they had made their homes. They bore the same burdens, made the same sacrifices, in private life or on the battlefield, as did the native-born. It was not necessary to intern any of them as a measure of safety. They were in all respects treated as our own citizens. Having stood the test under which so many representatives of strange races failed, is it fair now to discriminate against them or to make no distinction between them and aliens who for the past four years have been justly regarded as so many menaces and who required so much military vigilance in order to be kept in their place?

THE LATEST BRIDGE DEVELOPMENT.

AT THE MEETING of the Trades Council the other night, Delegate J. J. Hartley declared that he would rather see a concrete than a steel bridge built across the river at Hunter street, even if the former would cost $25,000 more than the other. A concrete bridge would keep the money at home and improve the local labor situation., whereas the most of the outlay on a steel structure would be diverted to outside points. Mr. Hartley is an old resident and a substantial taxpayer in the city and is himself an employer of labor with a clean and honorable record. His contention for a concret bridge seems to voice the sentiments of the majority in the community, those of the working classes beyond all question. The steel bridge supporters are mostly men who have an interest in that particular line of industry, so that their inspiration is of a piece with that of those who expect to derive some measure of profit from the enterprise, whether as workmen or as furnishers of material.

The Council seems to have narrowed down the field of contractors to the Russell-Townsend Company of Toronto, to whom the aldermen in committee awarded the contract, only to cause another exasperating delay by later rescinding their action. All other reliable contractors appear to have wearied of the dilly-dallying of the city fathers, and, demanding the return of their certified cheques, have retired from the competition. The Russell-Townsend people, although they, too, have recalled their bond, seem disposed to remain in the field. This firm of practical business men have given the aldermen the benefit of their experience and have shown them how the cost of the bridge could be reduced without really injuring its usefulness, so that the outlay could without any doubt be kept within the appropriation. Narrowing the bridge so as to provide space for a single instead of a double street car track would lop $20,000 off the cost of the structure, according to the present specifications.

Of all the suggestions made by citizens interested in this project the most practical were those in favor of a single track bridge. Mr. E. G. Patterson, in a letter to the press, pointed out that a double track would not be necessary probably for years to come. If the city ever attained the dimensions that called for a double track street railway system, a crossing at some other point would be essential. For all time the single track bridge at Hunter street would serve the purpose.

Suppose the bridge is completed on the single track plan and the street car line is extended to East City, the cars crossing from and returning to this side by way of Hunter street. A switch would have to be maintained at either end for the cars to pass each other. Suppose a street car going east had to wait on this side for one coming west, or vice versa, the time required to make the crossing would be something like thirty-eight seconds, an inconsequential delay. There are longer waits than that on George street any day in the week that the street cars are running. There are still longer delays every day at the connecting points at Charlotte or Park streets, and the patrons of the line have tolerated such conditions all these years with a patience worthy of a better cause. Why, then, should they complain if, with the line extended, an occasional wait of a trifle over half a minute was necessary at one or other end of the high level bridge?

The most hard-headed business men, those not given to visions, believe that the growth of Peterborough into a centre of at least fifty-thousand is assured. When that goal is attained a revision of the present street car system will be necessary. It is unthinkable that the street car traffic would then be congested at Hunter street. Rather would the cars cross either way at that point and go or return by another. In the meantime, a double track is no more required on the new bridge than is the same arrangement on George street or any of the other thoroughfares. It is all very well to look ahead, to build for posterity, but posterity would not be inclined to appreciate enterprise on the part of their ancestors that provided at an expense a portion of which the former had to bear, some structure the necessity for which never materialised.

AN OLD THEORY VINDICATED.

THE CAPTURE of Frank McCullough, the condemned murderer, who recently escaped from the Toronto jail, reads like a chapter from a novel by Hall Caine, Dickens or any of the masters of fiction. McCullough was taken right at the scene of his crime, in a place where he had apparently been in hiding ever since he broke jail. Students of crime always contend that the place where a man commits a murder has a powerful fascination for him as long as he lives. He may escape from the scene, but some power will surely draw him back to it again, and the chances are that he will eventually be captured right at the starting point of his criminal career.

Dickens has always been a disciple of this theory and has played up the idea in more than one of his novels. Rudge, the double murderer, kept out of the hands of the law for nearly three decades, but was finally taken in the very room where he committed his crime, and it was there that the brother of one of his victims watched patiently for years in the hope that the guilty man would, in spite of himself, be drawn back to the spot where he shed innocent blod. The brutal Bill Sykes, after the murder of his paramour, fled to temporary safety, but that mystic spell worked out his undoing in the end.

Murder will out. Justice never sleeps, though her eyes may be bandaged. There must be something, after all, in this idea. The ways of Providence are incredible, and the detective skill of man is not always a matter of working up clues. The most skilled hunter of criminals is the man who best understands human nature.

"YOU, TOO, BRUTUS!"

ONLY YESTERDAY there appeared in these columns an article setting forth the fact that Chairman Denne of the Board of Education had established himself as montor of the local press, a position the necessity of which we were unable to discern. We have since, however, been constrained to revise our views on this question. A press censor is needed, and Mr. Denne has an excellent field for his volunteer mission work, and that, too, right in the Jerusalem of his own immediate journalistic household.

The paper to which Mr. Denne extends the benefit of his moral and material support, from which he derives his political, social and official inspiration, in whose favor he discriminates, using his public position for the purpose, prints an article in which the Board of Education is mixed up in an obscene and filthy illustration, the recital of which would not be tolerated in any respectable private circle. No serpent's tooth is sharper than such ingratitude, the stab of Brutus through the mantle of Caesar could not have caused more poignant agony than this horrible thrust must bring to Mr Denne.

Yes, there is a censor needed. Let Mr. Denne get busy at once and play no favorites in his self-imposed task. Let common decency for newspapers be his goal, the preservation of the purity of journalism his side line ambition.

NO FRANCHISE FOR DEFAULTERS

CANNOT VOTE OR HOLD OFFICE FOR FIFTEEN YEARS.

Ottawa, Ont., May 9.—Hon. Arthur Meighen presented in the House his bill to disfranchise the defaulters under the M. S. A. The classes covered by the bill comprised all those who failed in their obligation under the act.. They are disqualified in the following respects for a period of fifteen years:

(1) From holding office under the Crown.

(2) From being a member of Parliament or a member of the Senate.

(3) From voting in any Dominion election.

The bill provides that any defaulters who have satisfied any conviction lawfully obtained and the punishment imposed shall not be included. Nor are those included who came in under the amnesty proclamation of August last, nor any who having been apprehended, actually served in the military forces. Further any who subsequently satisfied the terms of any legal conviction thereby become relieved of the disqualification provided by the Act.

Sir Sam Hughes— "Does this include all the defaulters under the justice and military departments, the whole six classes "

Mr. Meighen: "Yes."

Committee on Meat Supplies to Require Our Views

London, May 9.—In the House of Commons, Mr. C. F. Hyam, Coalitionist Unionist, Islington South, asked: "Why Canada was not represented on the committee considering the means for securing sufficient meat supplies for Great Britain at reasonable prices and whether the House would have an opportunity of discussing the committee's recommendations."

Sir Auckland Geddes replied that the committee consisted only of representatives of Government departments including the Colonial Office. The Committee would obtain Canadian views by calling witnesses. The House would be given an opportunity of discussing the report if desired.

ITALY'S PRECARIOUS CONDITION

(New York Commercial.)

The return of the Italian envoys to Paris looks for the moment as though the frenzied fermentation that recently raised the temperature of the nation has crystalized into commonsense. To the lay mind the feat of Orlando was not unlike that of the famous French monarch who marched up the hill and then marched down again.

If it be true that coming events cast their shadows before, then is the "Fiume or nothing" policy of Orlando quite understandable as a sop to Italian revolutionists, to check them in their purpose, as sometimes in Russia a victim has been thrown to the wolves to insure safety to others. To understand the ticklish position in which Premier Orlando, Foreign Minister Sonnino and the imperial regime of Italy stand, it must be realized that the kingdom is in jeopardy and that the revolutionists are determined, at all hazards, to join the fast growing family of republics.

A spokesman of the impending order, Flavio Vananzi, speaks in no uncertain language in the current issue of The Dial. Let us first observe the consclusions of the mouthpiece of the men who expect to be in the saddle of the new Italy tomorrow:

"The giving to Italy of all she demands from the peace conference will not change by a hair's breadth the swing of the pendulum of her fate. A country of many revolutionary traditions, in the most precarious social unrest, party strife; a mass of people held under the most brutal iron heel of military discipline of the past four years; with revolutionary parties who unceasingly speak, write, organize and incite the workers and the peasants to solidarity, Italy is at a crucial hour of a great revolution. No magician has yet arisen to avert the social deluge."

Signor Vananzi gives the facts and figures on which he bases his drastic conclusion. Italy is bankrupt; he sees no way in which she can pay the interest on her debts; her deficit in 1914 was 163,910,000 lire; she is absolutely dependent upon outside countries; during four years she has destroyed the best of her human stock, her farms, abandoned all her public works and stripped her peasantry of everything of value; the public debt, which was fifteen billions of lire before the war, is today seventy-five billions of lire. Under the present regime there is no man of sufficiently large vision to guide intelligently the destinies of the nation. Hence the necessity for revolution as soon as practicable.

Whether the facts justify Signor Vananzi's conclusions or not, he is obviously well informed and very much in earnest. His presentment of the crisis throws considerable light upon the seemingly untenable stand taken by the Italian envoy to the Paris conference. The Dial informs us that Signor Vananzi is a research expert in economics and statistics and is a notable journalist and lecturer on political questions.

TO-DAY'S STORY

In France, the police surgeon, or "legal doctor," as he is termed, is a very valuable aid in unravelling criminal mysteries.

A short time ago one of the officials received his notification to accompany gendarmes to the scene of a death that of a woman innkeeper. The apartment where the woman had been found dead had not been disturbed; the legal doctor had full play for his faculty of observation. He went all over the room, and used his microscope at various places and on several objects that appeared to interest him particularly. At last he inquired the name of the last vessel that had come in. It proved to be the Donna Maria from Sicily. He delivered his opinion, then, without a moment's delay or a sign of uncertainty:

"A left-handed man, wearing a slight mustache murdered this woman. He is probably a Sicilian, who arrived on the Donna Maria. He is over five feet six inches in height. He was acquainted with his victim, having been a guest previously at her inn. So he knew that she often got drunk. He broke in, killed her because he feared that she would awaken while he was robbing the place, and made good his escape. He has in his pocket now the stump of the candle he used to light him in committing the crime. Make a swift search for a stranger answering this description."

Pure Deduction.

While one of the Havre detectives hastened to take up the trail, the doctor gave his reasons for deducing all these details:

"In entering the murderer cut himself at the door, and a blood-stained splinter of the wood made it clear that he is left-handed. To one side of the spot where the blood dripped on the floor you can see some candle grease; that is where his candle dripped. It is obvious that while he held in his left hand the weapon he used, he carried the candle in the right. When I put the microscope on the candle drippings I could recognise them as coming from a Sicilian candle, having studied very closely the Bertillon collection of candles assembled from all parts of the world. I now surmised that any one who would be using a Sicilian candle must have just come from Sicily. In the candle grease there appeared two small, reddish hairs, very different in texture from those which grow in the beard. The assassin must have stood there, holding the candle after he committed the murder, biting or twisting his mustache while he debated his crime and his next procedure."

It was not long before the detective brought in a Sicilian named Fo forazzo, who had been one of the Donna Maria's passengers. The doctor, having a piece of paper ready, offered it to him. He reached out his left hand, which was cut, to take it. When they searched him the candle was found in his pocket; and when they questioned him he broke down and confessed the murder.

Equal Right, But No Favor.

"I suppose," said a lady to a trolley car conductor, "if I pay the fare for my dog he will be treated the same as other passengers, and be allowed to occupy a seat?" "Of course, madam," the conductor replied politely. "He will be treated the same as other passengers, and can occupy a seat provided he does not put his feet on it!"

A Little Advice From a Buyer.

Here is what experience has taught one buyer of coats and suits and dresses: First, get that which is becoming, for the really becoming frock is never out of style. At least, there are always occasions when the becoming garment can be worn, whether or not it is this season's or last year's. Seek the color that is most favorable to you, and avoid the one that is not especially so, no matter how smart you may think it appears. Then, in general, if you really must, get the odd and unusual garment.

TUBER DISEASE DANGER

Blackleg Decreases Potato Yield Thousands of Bushels.

Raising Pork Is a Profitable Sideline on the Dairy Farm — Expert Advises One Brood Sow for Each Ten Cows on Average Farm.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

BLACKLEG of potatoes is a disease that has been causing heavy losses to potato growers in many districts during the past few years. As the name of the disease implies, there is a blackening of the lower parts of stems of the potato plant affected. Accompanying the discoloration there is a soft rotting condition followed by shrinkage and death.

The disease is usually first noticed in the young growing crop when the plants are from four inches to a foot high. In looking over a field in which the disease is present, it will be seen that the tops of certain plants have lost their bright dark green appearance, having faded to a more or less dirty yellowish or brownish color. These tops will be somewhat limp and drooping, and in some cases where the disease is well advanced will have dropped right over. If a careful examination of the lower stems of these affected plants is made it will be seen that they are blackened and soft rotting. This blackening and soft rotting is more noticeable below the soil than above it. By carefully removing the soil from around an affected plant the blackening and soft-rotting can usually be traced to the seed tuber. As a rule in such cases the seed tuber will be found to be in a soft-rotting, slimy condition, the soil immediately beneath it being in a wet, puddled condition due to the wetness from the soft-rotted seed tuber. In such cases the disease in the plant has developed from an affected seed tuber and passed up the young growing stems, causing them to discolor and rot and eventually to fall over dead or dying. Sometimes all the stems in a hill will be affected and the whole plant die down. Sometimes, however, only a few of the stems will be affected and the remainder will appear to develop normally. If the season is a dry one a number of tubers may be produced on such plants which may mature, and appear alright at harvest, but if the season is a wet one the disease will spread to the tubers and cause them to rot in a soft, slimy condition before harvest, or if they are harvested before the rot is very noticeable in them, they are liable to rot in storage or to carry the disease over to the next season.

It is tubers from such affected plants which are mostly responsible for carrying the disease over from season to season and spreading it from district to district. Such tubers, if used for seed purposes, will give a considerable percentage of blackleg-affected plants. Consequently, the greatest care should be taken in the selection of seed tubers. If any indication of rot, either wet or dry, is found on a tuber, or any brown discoloration of the potato tissue when cut into, it should be discarded and not used for seed purposes.

Though spraying with Bordeaux Mixture will help to control fungus diseases, such as late and early blight of potatoes, it is of no use in controlling blackleg. Blackleg is a bacterial disease that gets into the plant either from an affected seed tuber or from the soil. It works from below upward and by the time it gets much above the ground it will usually have killed the plant. Consequently, spraying the tops of potatoes will not prevent the disease.

To prevent the disease developing, plant only sound, healthy, well-selected seed and do not plant on land that has produced blackleg plants the previous season.—Prof. D. H. Jones, O. A. College, Guelph.

FARM LOANS for SOLDIERS

How Returned Men Can Become Farmers

EVERY returned man who wants to become a farmer and is qualified for that vocation can get real, practical help through the Soldier Settlement Board.

The Government's programme includes:—

(1) The securing of land.

(2) The loaning of capital needed to purchase equipment and live stock, and erect buildings.

(3) Agricultural training and farm supervision.

The Loans Granted

Loans may be approved by the Loan Advisory Committee, according to the needs of the settler, on the following basis:—

(1) Up to $4,500 on the purchase of land.

(2) Up to $2,000 on the purchase of live stock, implements and other equipment.

(3) Up to $1,000 on the erection of buildings and other permanent improvements.

The first and third are repayable in twenty-five equal annual instalments; the second in four equal annual instalments beginning the third year, no interest being charged for the first two years.

On all these loans the low interest rate of five per cent. will be charged. A cash payment of ten per cent. of the purchase price will be required on the land but this may be waived by the Board in special cases.

Qualified settlers on Dominion lands may secure loans up to a maximum of $3,000 on a plan similar to the above for farm equipment, live stock, and erection of buildings, provided security offered justifies the loan.

To Whom Granted

To be entitled to these privileges a man must have served with an honourable record in the Canadian, Imperial, or British Colonial forces in an actual theatre of war or outside of the country in which he enlisted (service in U.S. or Bermuda not included). Others eligible are:

A British subject who lived in Canada before the War and who was on active service with the Allied Forces in an actual theatre of war.

A member of the Canadian Expeditionary Force who served in Canada only, but is in receipt of a pension for disability occasioned by such service.

These benefits are also granted to widows of such men.

A Broad Policy

All soldiers whose best interests will be served by taking up farms will be assisted. Only suitable land will be approved. That is (a) land that is near to existing railways or organized communities; (b) land that will make money for the soldier; (c) land that will provide a first class home.

In addition to these advantages the Board has planned a system of collective purchase, so that it can guarantee settlers the best value obtainable anywhere in live stock, implements, lumber, and other needs. It will also assist soldier settlers with advice and supervision, if necessary, in the management of their activities, so that the best results will be obtained.

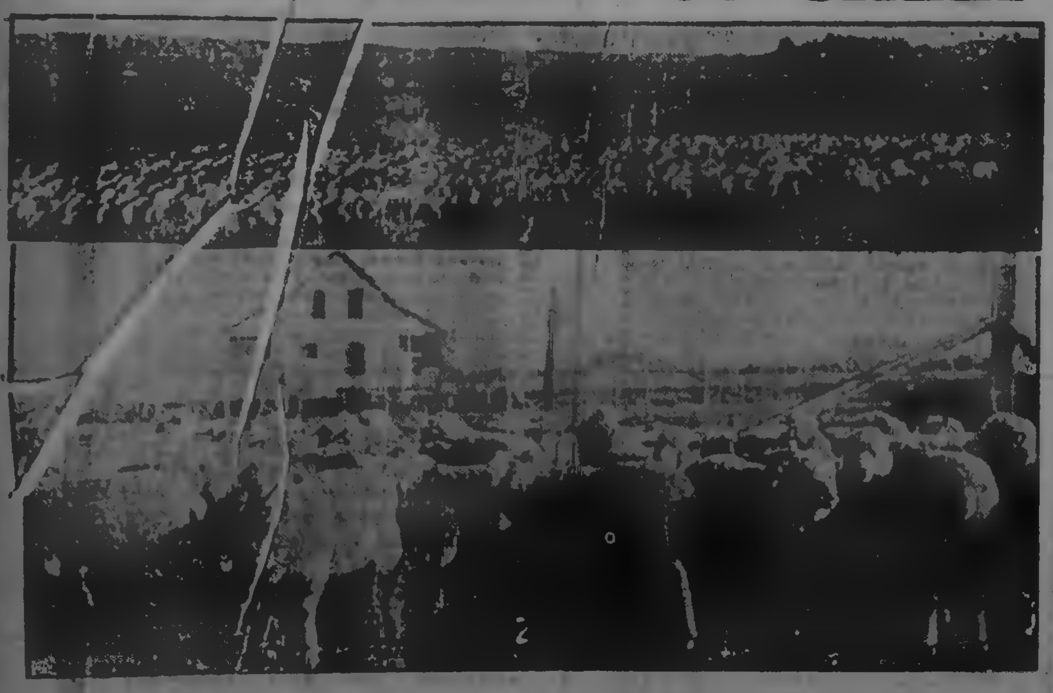
A NEW BREED OF SHEEP



(1) Sheep at Vermilion, Alberta. (2) Group of Yearlings in Feeding Experiment.

An interesting experiment is being worked out in Southern Alberta. An effort is being made to evolve an entirely new breed of sheep. The man who is responsible for this experiment is R. C. Harvey, of Lethbridge, Alberta, who for many years has been one of the foremost sheepmen in the province. Mr. Harvey believes he can evolve an entirely new breed of sheep, which will be particularly well-suited to Alberta conditions, both from a mutton as well as a wool standpoint. For many years he has been experimenting with the Rambouillet rams and Romney ewes, and the new type is being bred up by a careful selection of the breeding ewes from this cross. Every two years will see a step forward toward the new type, and as it will take six crosses to fix it, the whole process will take eleven years.

Plans and charts have been drawn up, and a set of registration books is being opened in the animal husbandry branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa to keep track of the various families of the new breed, so that there may be no inbreeding, and ultimately no difficulty in registering the type.

Mr. Harvey is well qualified for his great task. He is reputed to be the owner of the largest flock of pure-bred Romney-Marsh sheep on the American continent, his flock consisting of more than four hundred registered animals brought together without regard to expense from all parts of the world. Besides these, he has a large number of Rambouillet rams and thousands of cross-breds. Last year the wool from his Romney-Rambouillet crossbreds was sold on the American market for the high average price of 74½ cents a pound on a consignment of 100,000 pounds. As high as 78½ cents a pound was paid for his fine stapled wool.

Babylon in its Prime.

At the time the priests betrayed Nebuchadrezzar and permitted Cyrus to enter the city of Babylon, the students were learned in astrology, kept time with sun dials, and a water clock by night, fashioned rude telescopes, and the rich had perfected a system of entertainment never equaled in lavishness.

An Awful Break.

Squiggs—"Well, I see that porch climber finally escaped from jail. Broke out, I understand." Squaggs—"Say, now, for the love of billyclubs and badges, don't hand us that old stuff about measles." Squiggs—"Wouldn't think of such a thing: this fellow broke out with chickenpox."

Brogue.

Brogue occurs when an entire population of alien blood or tongue acquires the tongue language of its conquerors or its subjects or its neighbors, as the case may be; and acquires it, naturally, with a difference, importing into the foreign speech many of its own native peculiarities.

ST. ANDREW'S ANNIVERSARY

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH, built in 1885, the Jubilee Year of its organization.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church will hold anniversary services next Sunday, celebrating the 86th year of its history. In the year 1833 the Rev. John Morrice Roger came out from Scotland and established a Presbyterian church in Peterboro. In accordance with the practice of ministers in connection with the Church of Scotland it was called St. Andrew's Church after St. Andrew, the Apostle and the Patron Saint of Scotland. St. Andrew is a great name among the Scottish people, and for this reason the earliest Presbyterian churches in many cities were called after St. Andrew, as in Toronto, Belleville, Kingston, Perth, Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec and other places.

The congregation worshipped at first in a small building north of King street, near Aylmer. In 1835 a grant was made to the church of the lot on which St. Andrew's Church now stands, and in 1836 a substantial stone church was erected on this site. To this edifice the Presbyterian services in the city were transferred and the Rev. John Morrice Roger ministered here until 1857. These were the only Presbyterian services in the city up to this date.

The present place of worship was erected in 1885, the Jubilee Year of the church's history.

Looking back through the vista of the years one sees that many devoted ministers have served the pulpit of St. Andrew's. It will be no disparagement of others to say that the most brilliant was the Rev. D. J. McDonnell, as he was one of the most gifted and devoted of ministers who has ever served the church in this or any other country, and who, after leaving Peterboro, preached every Sunday for many years to crowded congregations in New St. Andrew's Church, Toronto.

St. Andrew's Church is fortunate this year in securing the Rev. Dr. Dyde, Principal of Queen's Theological College, Kingston, as its anniversary preacher. Dr. Dyde has recently taken the principalship of Queen's, a position once made famous by the Rev. Dr. Grant.

LADIES' AID OF TRINITY CHURCH

ENCOURAGING PROGRESS IS REPORTED AT THE RECENT ANNUAL MEETING

Trinity Church Ladies' Aid held their annual meeting Tuesday afternoon when the reports for the year were given.

The following ladies were returned to office by acclamation

President— Mrs. Cruikshank.
1st vice President—Mrs. Robt. Neill.
2nd vice-President Mrs. S. Kidd.
Secretary—Mrs. Watts.
Treasurer—Miss Mathers.
Convener Flower Committee Mrs. Walsh.

Visiting Committees Mesdames Cruikshanks, Laidley, McCoy, Dawe, Lane, Storey, Mann and Taylor.

Secretary's Report

The Secretary reported as follows:

The Ladies Aid of Trinity Church has reached the end of another year in its history. During the year the regular meetings were held each month with the exception of July and August with an average attendance of 25 members. We have 107 names on the roll. Many new names have been added and to old and new members we wish a prosperous and busy new year in the work of the Aid.

During the past year we have had occasion for much rejoicing inasmuch as God has seen fit to end the cruel war and that peace again reigns, and while we rejoice with those who rejoice over the return of their loved ones, our hearts go out in loving sympathy, and fervent prayer to those whose loved ones have been sacrificed and who return not.

Our ladies were busy during July preparing the parsonage for our Pastor and his family, in which we found a great deal of pleasure mingle with the work.

The Thanksgiving Canvass supplemented by a sermon from our pastor Rev. F. E. Malott and energetic workers showed the aid that its work was appreciated.

A reception was held in November for our Pastor and his family, and on the same evening the returns made from the $5.00 scheme, with the experience of how the ladies made their $5.00 which proved humorous and witty.

Our Cafeteria Tea was given in February was most successful and here the Aid is much indebted to Mr. Malott for the beautiful illustrated travel talk on "Here and there in old London."

Lonely hearts were cheered during the year by flowers sent, accompanied by a message of love and sympathy.

We bade farewell to Mrs. F. J. Voaden, an enthusiastic and willing worker, but we feel that our loss is gain to some other aid.

Our visiting committees have been [illegible] and have reported many calls [illegible]. Much of the success of our metings and work during the year is due to our President, who has been most energetic in making them such, and faithful in looking after the strangers.

The silent reaper has been among us and claimed two golden sheaves: Mrs. Hawley and Mrs. Austin

Weep not that their toil is over
Weep not that their race is won;
calmly.
When our work, like theirs, is done.

The girls also decided to present a play and appointed a committee to arrange for same.

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING

By Dr. W. A. BRADY

Admirable is the pertinacity of the veterinarian who manages to cure a sick mule that has no faith in either the man or his medicine.

Confidence is a factor of ponderable weight in the practice of the art of healing—any and every "school."

Worry is a homeopathic or attenuated dose of fear, and fear, as everybody knows, is a powerful depressant of the circulation and nervous system. It is fear that paralyzes the animal that is "charmed" by a snake; it is fear that "strikes at the heart" of a child frightened by some real or fancied apparition or threat, predisposing to shock or collapse. It is a harmful emotion. There is no doubt that a susceptible individual might be actually "frightened to death."

If you lack confidence in your doctor, be he regular, homeopathic, eclectic, osteopathic or the creator of his own peculiar theory, you are likely to worry more about your prospects than you would if you had confidence in the doctor. Your lack of confidence, therefore, does you harm.

Confidence is a double acting influence. The patient must have confidence in his doctor; the doctor must have confidence in his patient. More, the doctor must have confidence in his patient in order to inspire confidence, as a rule. If the doctor lacks confidence in the patient he cannot take as much interest in the patient as he would if he knew he could trust the patient thoroughly.

Lots and lots of people who would not for the world pick one's pockets are nevertheless, untrustworthy. They attempt in a thousand little ways to deceive the doctor, and nearly always he is sooner or later aware of the deception. They are not frank with him, yet they expect him to be frank with them. And it is these very untrustworthy people who constantly complain about medical ethics and bewail the unsatisfactory service the physician renders.

A surprising number of patients deliberately endeavor to distort or misrepresent important facts of their medical histories in the doctor's consulting room, where one would think an intelligent person ought to be quite frank and honest, since his own welfare is concerned. Illustrative of the great temptation to misrepresent in this way is the familiar notation in the history blank, that "Patient denies having had venereal disease." or "Patient declares he has never used whisky as a beverage." Isn't it curious that these notations are not written "Patient never has had veneral disease" or "Patient has always been a teetotaler"?

Foods and Food Values.

"Please tell me where I can obtain information about the proportions of protein, fat and carbohydrates needed by the average person each day and a list of the various articles of food commonly used, showing the amounts of these diffrent food elements in each food. F. W. G."

Two to three ounces of protein, three ounces of fat, and twelve to twenty ounces of carbohydrate are essential in the day's ration. For 10 cents in coin, sent to the government printing office, Washington, D. C., superintendent of documents, you can obtain a copy of a free bulletin entitled "American Food Materials" (bulletin 28, revised edition, U. S. department of agriculture), which gives the lists desired.

The advent of prosperity should bring out noiseless calamity hunters.

Music in the Home

SCHOOL CHILDREN BRING MUSIC INTO THE LIVES OF PARENTS

The most wonderful singing he had ever heard from children, was said by a prominent University professor to have been by a chorus of school children from a district in London, England, where the houses all look alike and where the people are all labouring people and yet that choir would simply bring tears to your eyes, he said. Those poor little girls, fifty of them, obtain the most extraordinary effects, proving that there is no limit to what children can do except the limitations of the school music supervisor and the teacher.

What this training will mean to those poor little folks in after life is far beyond measurement. No human agency can take the place of music in the lives of the common people "that great body of laboring people of the world" as President Wilson lately expressed himself "the men and women and children upon whom the great burden of sustaining the world must from day to day fall whether we wish it to do so or not, people who go to bed tired and wake up without the stimulation of a lively hope."

One ray of sunshine comes from the fact that the music in the schools gets into the homes. Music in the home is a by-product, a very valuable by-product of music in the schools. "You can go into the school room and ask how many children take their music books home with them" a public school supervisor assures us, "and you will find probably four-fifths of the children will put up their hands. When they take home songs which have the accompaniments in the book, the father, mother or sister is requested to play the accompaniment. We find that all through the homes form which our pupils come there is singing in the homes as a result of singing in the schools and more than that the parents and older brothers and sisters are getting the singing habit."

Countless people have to work very hard and go to bed tired. Anything that introduces and stimulates vocal or instrumental music in these homes is a veritable godsend.

SIXTEENTH NOTES

When a bass singer has to produce a high note by a leap of an octave it is better to reduce the breath pressure.

Speaking of the old French "Aubade Provencale" it is interesting to recall that the custom of playing a morning hymn or aubade, in place of the evening song or serenade, was a very popular one in southern France, the Troubadours frequently going at dawn to the windows of their fair ladies, and singing a morning song of love. It later became a very popular instrumental form. This selection is an arranement of an old air, by Louis Couperin, and is an excellent example of pure song form. The aubade begins with an cient Gregorian tune, and then changes to a popular rondo thus showing how church melodies became secularised.

The Order of the Bath.

A very youthful British tourist, arrived at an old-fashioned hostelry, had the imprudence to order a bath in his room for the next morning. Very early he was awakened by sounds of hammering somewhere overhead. Then followed much bumping on the stairs; evidently a large and cumbrous weight was being brought down. The noise ceased outside his own door which flew open, and in staggered two strong men bearing the big bath from the public bathroom, dismounted for his morning ablutions!

Phonograph in Photography.

A photographer has found a phonograph a valuable aid in obtaining the desired facial expression in a subject. After studying the face of the person whose likeness he is to obtain he decides whether he wishes an animated, reserved, sad or pensive expression. He then places a record in the phonograph likely to stimulate the expression desired. For animation he will play such a tune as "Dixie," while to produce a sad or thoughtful expression "My Old Kentucky Home" may be played.

Ancient Needlework.

The early Britons were expert in needlework and the earliest (British) Church of England before the fifth century won fame from its "band maids of the church," who made linens and altar frontals for numberless churches in Europe. Tapestry, the work of queens like Matilda and noble ladies in olden times was largely needlework.

Unaccountably Absent Minded.

A friend of mine was being married and a host of friends were present during the ceremony, which the minister was performing most impressively. The bridegroom alone was inattentive and seemed unaccountably absent minded, when suddenly he bawled out: "Gee, I forgot to bring along the wedding ring!"—Chicago Tribune.

Flowers.

Flowers grow in the garden to be given away. Everybody feels that they appeal to finer senses than his own, and looks wistfully around in hope that possibly this friend or that may be nobler furnished than he to see and read them.—Emerson.

Learn to Talk.

All very well, to quote the old saying about speech being silvern, but silence golden. Learn to talk, if you want to get on in the world. There are some folk who talk too much, it's true, but they are better than those who are mute and wrapped up in themselves. A wall of reserve isn't at all a pleasant thing to come up against.

Rushing to the Grave.

Everything hurries in New York, including the undertakers. If the mourners will consent to the vehicle moving at a trot on the way to the cemetery, the charge is about half of that for a walking funeral.—Emporia Gazette.

A Golden Feather.

The feathers of the "golden pheasant" are a source of profit, being used in the manufacture of artificial flies for salmon fishing. These birds, natives of China, are the hardiest of the pheasant tribe, and are not at all troublesome to rear in this country.

Not What He Meant.

"The paths up this mountain are too steep for even an ass to climb; therefore I did not attempt the ascent!" were the words in a lecture which aroused untimely mirth.

Banana Facts.

Bananas should not be put into a refrigerator. They should never be allowed to get colder than 60 degrees. A chill turns bananas black and prevents proper ripening.

TRAVEL BY FLOWERY WAYS

(1) Along the line at Moose Jaw, Sask. (2) Woodstock, Ont. (3) Vaudreuil, Que.

There are many who believe that all big corporations and industrial concerns only look to the material side of things and work machine-like for the production of wealth, regardless of the winter's snow and unheeding of the summer's bloom. This is often an erroneous idea, for it is generally realized that man does not altogether live by offices and pens and papers and engines and other accoutrements of labor—he requires trees and shrubs and flowers and the loveliness of nature.

The Canadian Pacific Railway has always paid considerable attention to the development of garden plots along its lines. It is just thirty years ago since a C.P.R. employee raised a few varieties of flower seeds in his own garden, and distributed them amongst his friends in the service of the company, with the object of promoting flower gardening at the various station plots of the railway. A vast advance has been made since then; and now the company possesses a Floral Department with headquarters at Windsor street Station, Montreal, and a Floral Committee which embraces members from the Eastern and Western lines. It is under the guidance of this department that the various station plots and other properties of the company are cleared up and beautified. Thousands of packages of flower seeds, bulbs, trees, and shrubs and large quantities of grass seeds and fertilizers have been distributed during the last few years to station agents, section foremen, caretakers of round houses, and all employees living on the property of the company. Travellers on the line observe the happy results achieved. The cultivation work is done in all cases by the employees themselves, who in most cases acquired the art of amateur gardening by taking their lessons from leaflets issued by the Floral Department. The best material is always provided. Amongst the varieties of trees supplied are: Maple, birch, beech, poplar and catalpa. Some of the shrubs are: weigelia, berberries, laurel leaf willow and sumac. Perennials distributed are: Oriental poppies, iris, phlox, veronica, gaillardia, lark spur, columbine, sweet william, and pinks. Bedding plants used include: geraniums, coleus, cannas, pansies, asters, verbenas, petunias, and castor oil plants. Standard seed packets sent out contain: Nasturtiums, alyssum, mignonette, sweet peas, phlox and kochia. Ferns and house plants are given to the larger stations. The establishment and maintenance of the gardens and selection of the seeds, bulbs, and plants are supervised by Mr. R. M. Winnegar, forester of the company.

The encouraging influence of flower growing on the C.P.R. during the last thirty years has in a large measure assisted in the inauguration of floral societies all over the country. There are hundreds of C.P.R. officials connected with these societies, and most of them received their first lessons in flower culture at the C.P.R. flower beds. Flowers have improved the railway stations, and inspired by the beauty of the stations, residents of the towns have planted flowers and improved the appearances of their houses. In every division of the C.P.R. prizes are given every year for the best displays, and many of these amateur railway gardeners have tried their products with success against all comers at the big Canadian and American flower exhibitions.

The Hastings Star has taken on new life and we are glad to welcome it in its new and greatly improved form to our table. Editor Doughty had already shown the ability of a practical newspaper man and it is up to the citizens of our sister village to shown their appreciation of his efforts by giving him their most generous support. A good, live, well conducted newspaper is a valuable asset to any village, and The Star under new management is a very creditable sheet.

THE TEMIGAMI FOREST RESERVE

Every angler who knows the real thrill of landing a "big fellow" desires to enjoy the sport that the wonderful Timagami region of Ontario affords. Sportsmen who have fished all the important waters of the continent declare that the fishing in Timagami cannot be excelled. Lake Temigami with its sixteen hundred islands and three thousand miles of shore line is the home of the black bass. The brook trout and other game fish, while the innumerable smaller lakes are also well stocked. There are no hardships to be encountered in reaching Timagami. A few minutes after leaving the Grand Trunk through train from Toronto the sportsman finds himself in the bosom of the forest, and in a labyrinth of islands, inlets and channels inviting him to go north, south, east, and west. There are good outfitting facilities and also some boarding establishments, but this great region is still absolutely unspoiled. For full particulars and information regarding this territory apply to Grand Trunk Agent or C. E. Horning, D. P. A., Toronto, Ont.

BE PATIENT WITH VETERANS

Employers should be patient with returned men and help them to learn the jobs they are to do. The returned man does not want to be petted but he needs the sympathy of his fellow citizens until he gets accustomed to civilian life again. Generous sympathy can be extended by every citizen.

Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig in a recent speech in London said that the British pensions and labour departments were sympathetically coping with the problem of those demobilized. One he heard of sad cases daily. For instance, one officer who had won the V.C., D.S.O. and M.C. was vainly trudging the streets of London in search of work. The Field Marshal begged employers to be patient with applicants for work and help them learn the job.

The Duke of Devonshire, Governor General of Canada, in opening the new Khaki Club at Montreal, said:

"We hear a great deal today of the problem of the returned soldier. Personally, I do not think the problem is nearly so complicated or difficult as many people imagine it to be. A returned soldier is a man and wants to be treated as such. He is different from his fellowmen in that he has had a great deal more experience; however, he does not want to be petted, patronized or ordered but wants to settle down once more as a citizen, doing his duty in that capacity as he did when a soldier.

"In this we must assist him, not necessarily by leading him by the hand, but by giving him ordinary opportunities and facilities so that he may look around for himself, see what he wants and set about doing it.

"The first thing is to give him a welcome home and a place where he can come to. Much necessarily has been and ought to be done by Governments and those responsible for the conduct and administration of affairs but no Government however well intentioned its motives, can be other than impersonal to a great extent. It is not so with institutions of this character, however, for we are able to bring in the personal touch and sympathy, and it is by such means that the problems we have to meet can be in a great measure solved.

"I am convinced therefore that with the facilities afforded by a large building like this, such spirit can be further encouraged, fostered and developed by that body of men and women who have had sufficient vision and imagination to appreciate in the first instance what was required. IT IS NOT THE NUMBER OF BEDS OR MEALS SUPPLIED BUT THE SYMPATHY AND WELCOME EXTENDED TO THE MEN THAT COUNT MOST."

J. P. Morgan, New York, head of J. P. Morgan & Co., has lent his voice to the urgent appeal that immediate employment be provided for the returned service men in that city. The situation is such, suggested Mr. Morgan, as to permit of no delay. He urges that present needs as to employes be forgotten for the moment, adding that the men have well earned the efforts now being made to provide them with jobs.

"I believe," said Mr. Morgan, "every American should give support to the organized effort to give employment immediately to our troops who are being repatriated. The conditions do not permit of delay and the question should not be determined always by immediate requirements. These men have well earned the consideration that is now sought for them."

BENEFIT CONCERT A SUCCESS

C. G. E. EMPLOYE WITH TRUE PHILANTHROPHIC SPIRIT RAISE HANDSOME SUM FOR UNFORTUNATE FELLOW WORKMAN.

Seldom, if at any time in the past has any philanthropic effort been such a degree of success as resulted from the benefit concert given by the empoyees of the Canadian General Electric Company, in Victoria Hall last night, in aid of a Peterborough boy, Mr. Frank Munden. It is true, of course, that no more deserving case has presented itself for some time.

Mr. Munden, though young in life, has been so afflicted with rheumatism that it has been found necessary to amputate both feet, and, from the fact that he has a wife and family, it, on the whole, represents a very pathetic case, and the way in which the citizens have co-operated with the committee in charge of this concert is a matter that has been most pleasing to the committee and a credit to the entire city.

What was accomplished last night shows beyond doubt that when the employees of the Canadian General Electric Company organize themselves and set out to attain certain results, that in itself is its guarantee of success. The employees of this factory have attained a wonderful degree of harmony, and are setting an example to other factories in demonstrating their ability to care for and alleviate any cases of distress which may appear in their midst.

The public feels that it is only justice to these employees to say that they are a big hearted bunch, and in the factory it is recognized that when a punch is necessary, the Punch Press Department can deliver the goods. This is the Department in which Mr. Munden was employed, and indicates that Mr. Munden has made himself agreeable and has commanded the respect of his immediate employees.

To say that the effort was eminently successful is supported by the fact that the proceeds have amounted to $350.00, and while the program was in season last evening, the Rev. Canon Davidson, on behalf of the Great War Veterans, entered the hall and approached the chairman asking the privilege of donating what they had secured in the G.W.V.A. rooms from a "pass-the-hat movement", and $18.00 was handed in, resulting from this. The chairman expressed the thanks of the committee and the employees, and informed the Great War Veterans' Association that it was well known to the public that their heart was in the right place.

The committee in charge of this benefit concert were Mr. W. S. Campbell, chairman Mr. W. J. Nelson, Mr. C. E. Sisson, Mr. W. Hughes, Mr. H. T. McFadden, Mr. Alf Day and Mr. M. Neary, and the committee wish to publicly express their appreciation to the trustees of Victoria Hall, who gave the services of the hall free of charge, including the light; the Ontario Government, who kindly granted exemption from war tax; Heintzman & Company, who loaned the piano, paid the cartage on it, and asked for the privilege of buying tickets; the Peterborough Bread Company, for donating the programs; the newspapers, for free advertising, and the Assembly Hall, for the loan of chairs.

The committee desire in particular to express their public thanks to the several artists who took part in the program. All when approached were ready and willing to render their services for the good of humanity. The audience was delighted with the program, of which they gave plenty of evidence during the evening. Those taking part were Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Park, Mr. and Mrs. Ward, Mr. Douglas Carlysle, Miss Hinchcliffe, Miss Penrose, Miss Cora Logan, Miss Palmer, Mrs. Logan, Mr. Bartley, Mr. George Lynch, Mr. Joseph Parkins and his son J. A. Parkins, and Miss Flowers, assisted by the G.W.V.A. band, about forty strong. The chair was most acceptably filled by Mr. W. S. Campbell of the Canadian General Electric office.

When summing it up, it goes without saying that when the Canadian General Electric Company's employees put themselves on record as being interested in any particular movement the public may rely upon it that they will get value for their money, and that the object to be attained is assured of its success from the very beginning.

SUNDAY AT GEORGE ST. CHURCH

Themes Selected by Pastor Morning and Evening

The services in the George Street Methodist Church on Sunday next will be especially interesting. In the morning the pastor will preach on "The Parable of the Sower." and will also give a short talk to the boys and girls. In the evening the purpose of Mother's Day will be enlarged and the observance will take the form of a great family service. Fathers, mothers, sons, daughters, brothers, sisters, in fact all the folks, are heartily invited to come. The pastor's subject will be "The Fifth Commandmnet." and the music will be bright and appropriate.

If anyone wishes to send flowers in honor of their parents, to the church on Saturday for the Sunday services, their gift will be greatly appreciated. It is suggested that the wearing of a white flower or a bit of white ribbon will be taken of honor for mother and father and will add to the success of the day.

NORWOOD MEN AT THE CONVENTION

SIR ADAM BECK ADDRESSED EASTERN DELEGATES ON RADIAL PROBLEMS

Belleville, Ont., May 9.—Over one hundred representatives of Belleville Campbellford, Percey, Seymour, Trenton and other eastern municipalities attended a meeting of the Hydro-Electric Radial Railway Association in the Belleville Council Chamber to hear Sir Adam Beck discuss the railway situation, especialy his views on Mr. D. B. Hanna's annoupcement that the Toronto and Eastern Railway would be built by the Dominion Government.

Mayor Dr. E. O. Platt presided and in opening the meeting referred to the great needs of county railways both in Hastings and Prince Edward, the neighboring county.

General representatives and township reeves spoke of the lack of transportation facilities in these townships and urged the necessity of radial railways. Last week at a meeting of township representatives a resolution was passed asking the commission to consider the construction of a line from Rawdon to Cobourg. Reeve Squire of Norwood said a deputation of 14 at the present meeting from his township showed their interest and sympathy with Hydro radials.

Industrial Commissioner Richardson of Norwood spoke of the mineral wealth and lumber in his district the development of which only waited for radial transportation.

Will Call Strike Unless Government Sets Wages.

Toronto, May 9.—Toronto letter-carriers and postal clerks will hold an emergency meeting this afternoon to discuss the situation which has arisen through the non-appearance in the Commons of the bill which was to fix their salaries for the year. The bill was being drafted by the Civil Service Commission.

If the press despatches carry no news of the bill a strike vote with a brief ultimatum will be decided on, according to the Executive of the union.

HALF OF FRENCH YOUTH GONE

Terrible Toll of Young Lives Taken by the War

Paris, May 9.—Capt. Andre Tardieu, head of General Commission for France war matters, recently announced that he had made an investigation into the number of French soldiers killed between the age of 20 and 31. He found that 58 per cent had lost their lives. That is that over half of France's youth has disappeared.

Three Chicago women were indicted charged with conspiracy to falsify tally sheets in the recent municipal elections.

POLICE ROUND UP DRUG ADDICTS

ALARMING SPREAD OF HABIT BOTH IN AMERICA AND EUROPE.

New York, May 9.—The New York Police have opened war on the illicit drug vendors and gathered in hundreds of drug addicts to wring evidence from them. The prevalence of the drug habit in the city is said to be appalling. Similar stories come from London and other European centres of population. The London Globe of April 19th, 1919, says:

"Despite free access of both sexes to the bars in the Motherland women have recently resorted to the use of methylated spirits. Many cases have arisen where women have gone to oil and paint shops with the plea that the spirit was intended for mixing paint. Seven times stronger than ordinary whisky and containing a number of ingredients considered sufficient to stop any desire to drink it, the Liverpool Licensing Justices assert that its use as a beverage is increasing. Its effect has been shown as terrible, a frantic state while under its influence gradually giving place to insanity."

A favorite argument of the liquor dealers has been that if alcoholic liquors were prohibited people would take to drugs; but it has been shown over and over again that where the most alcohol was consumed there has been found the greatest number of drug fiends. The number who have begun by taking morphine and other drugs as medicine are very few. As a general rule a man becomes an alcohol fiend first and after a time finds that he must have something stronger to satisfy his craving.

FIRE IN BONACCORD STREET

A call came to the Department to a fire at 502 Bonaccord street, caused by a spark from a chimney near by, which lodged in the shingles. The loss was not heavy, no damage whatever being done to the interior of the building. Mr. Williams is the owner and occupant of the place.

Thieves stole $2000 belonging to soldiers from the office of a New York canteen.

Wm. Ackerson, 16, New York, convicted of murder, was sentenced to 20 years in Sing Sing. His youth saved him from the electric chair.

Because of ill-health, Frank L. Polk, counsellor of the U. S. State Department, will resign when Secretary Lansing returns from Europe.

The Gods of Mars

By
EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"this way," cried Carthoris, leading us toward the entrance to a tunnel, which opened in the courtyard beside the temple.

As we were on the point of descending we heard a deep toned roar burst from the temple of Issus, which we had but just quitted, and then a red man, Djor Kantas, padwar of the fifth utan, broke from a nearby gate, crying to us to return.

"The blacks have fired the temple," he cried. "In a thousand places it is burning now. Haste to the outer garden or you are lost."

As he spoke we saw smoke pouring from a dozen windows looking out upon the courtyard of the temple of the Sun, and far above the highest minaret of Issus hung an ever growing pall of smoke.

"Go back, go back!" I cried to those who had accompanied me. "The way, Carthoris; point the way and leave me! I shall reach my princess yet."

"Follow me, John Carter," replied Carthoris, and without waiting for my reply he dashed down into the tunnel at our feet.

At his heels I ran down through a half dozen tiers of galleries until at last he led me along a level floor at the end of which I discerned a lighted chamber.

Massive bars blocked our further progress, but beyond I saw her—my incomparable princess, and with her was Thuvia. When she saw me she rushed toward the bars that separated us. Already the chamber had turned upon its slow way so far that but a portion of the opening in the temple wall was opposite the barred end of the corridor. Slowly the interval was closing. In a short time there would be but a tiny crack, and then that even would be closed, and for a long Barsoomian year the chamber would slowly revolve until once more for a brief day the aperture in its walls would pass the corridor's end.

But in the meantime what horrible things would go on within that chamber!

I stood and talked with Dejah Thoris, and she stretched her dear hand through those cruel bars, that I might hold it until the last moment.

Thuvia came close also, but when she saw that we would be alone she withdrew to the farther side of the chamber.

For a few minutes we stood thus, talking in low tones. Ever smaller and smaller grew the opening. In a short time now it would be too small even to permit me to see the slender form of my princess.

Above we could hear the faint echoes of a great tumult. It was the multitude of blacks and reds and green men fighting their way through the fire from the burning temple of Issus. A draft from above brought the fumes of smoke to our nostrils.

Presently we heard shouting at the far end of the corridor and hurrying feet.

"Come back, John Carter; come back!" cried a voice. "Even the pits are burning."

In a moment a dozen men broke through the now blinding smoke to my side. There were Carthoris and Kantos Kan and Hor Vastus, with a few more who had followed me to the temple court.

"I shall remain here beside my princess until a merciful death releases me from my anguish," I declared. "I care not to live."

Dejah Thoris stood as closely to the crack as she could, whispering words of hope and courage to me and urging me to save myself.

The smoke cleared away, and we stood gazing upon a blank wall. The last crevice had closed.

They urged me to leave.

"In a moment it will be too late," cried Kantos Kan. "There is, in fact, but a bare chance that we can get through to the outer garden alive, even now. I have ordered the pumps started, and in five minutes the pits will be flooded. If we would not drown like rats in a trap we must hasten above and make a dash for safety through the burning temple."

"Go," I urged them. "Let me die here beside my princess. There is no hope or happiness elsewhere for me. When they carry her dead body from that terrible place a year hence let them find the body of her lord awaiting her."

Of what happened after that I have only a confused recollection. It seems as though I struggled with many men and then that I was picked bodily from the ground and borne away.

I do not know.

THE END.

Ancient Bee Industry.

Some time back in the prehistoric era and probably antedating the time when mankind had tamed the wild hens and organised them in the business of producing "strictly fresh laid eggs," human kind had annexed the bee, or, anyhow, had made a business of robbing the wild bees. Bee farming is no new thing under the sun, but the bees were never before so carefully bred and cross-bred nor so intelligently assisted in the honey-making game as at present.

Mutt And Jeff Search For Gold

FAMOUS CARTOON HEROES AT GRAND TOMORROW, AFTERNOON AND NIGHT.

Once again those two bonifide humorists "Mutt and Jeff," are in our midst. This time they appear as seekers after the yellow metal—gold—with their adventures taking place in the Golden West. And, as usual, that astute and far-discerning manager, Gus Hill, is sponsoring their exploits, having arranged for their presentation in a three act musical comedy which is said to be the best and most entertaining of the Mutt and Jeff series produced in years upon the stage. Opening in the effete East these two popular cartoon characters quickly make their way to the land of alkali and faro, where they indulge in all sorts of side-splitting capers and escapades with the result that their antics and frolics rouse incessant and wholesome laughter from curtain to curtain: The buffer of the noted twain is as usual, Little Jeff. And naturally he is pounced upon and held into mischief by his tormentor and pal, A Mutt. But it is all done in such good natured fun and hilarity that like the immortal Othello, we are prone to love him for the dangers he inevitably survives. Matrimony and high-jinks never go hand in hand, as far as Little Jeff's concerned. He is probably the most hopeless bachelor the world has ever had. Yet in this instance he is prepared to become a benedict for the coin of the realm. You see it is rather compulsory because according to a will left by his late brother he must betake unto himself a wife. The particular lady is none other than his dead brother's widow. In all probability the female in question were possessed of those attributes that are fined under the caption of charm and beauty. However, a scheming lawyer who has his eye on the certain valuable gold mine which is to become the sole property of the diminutive funster if he weds. He rings in an imposter, an old maid named Priscilla Murray. He is smitten with the real widow himsef, and this plot forms the basis of some of the most rollicking comedy, complications and situations ever invented by any playwright.

The action is punctuated with a dozen song hits, ensembles, dances, features novelties, surprises, screams, rib tickeling bits and high-class revelry, without the semblance of any lulls or monotinous noments. There is an admixture of plausible drama along with irresistible amusement of the kind that always finds ready response by theatre-goers who expect to be entertained in a manner befitting the reputation of these world-renowned cartoon creatures. A pretty and fascinating chorus, attired in captivating array have been engaged. In conjunction with an extremely competent cast "Muff and Jeff in the Wooly West," is scheduled to be seen at the Grand tomorrow matinee and evening.

One man was killed and three badly injured when an auto near St. Louis, Mo., was caught in the vortex of a violent squall and hurled fifty feet in the air.

Picture Version Of Popular Story

THE UNPARADONABLE SIN" WILL BE SHOWN AT GRAND NEXT WEEK.

The story of "The Unparadonable Sin," written by Major Rupert Hughes and made into a master photoplay by Harry Garson, is more than fiction. Its subject matter is based upon facts developed by various investigating commissions which were active in Europe some months ago "The Unpardonable Sin" has been secured as an attraction by the Grand theatre, and begins its engagement Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Peterborough is full of admirers of Major Rupert Hughes, who have read his short stories and novels in various leading magazines and in book form for years. These admirers will be interested in the photoplay version of Major Hughes' master piece, "The Unpardonable Sin," which is to be presented at the Grand theatre. The big picture was made by Harry Garson, starring Blanche Sweet, under the personal direction of Marshall Neilan.

Among the most interesting players in the cast of "The Unpardonable Sin," are a group of particularly clever children, incuding Masters Wesley Barry and Bobbie Connolly. Bobbie Connolly, who is widely known among motion picture devotees, appears as a Belgian Boy Scout. Master Barry and two other youngsters are refugees, the first-named a typical American who has been caught in the European Maelstrom and is fighting his way out, and the others a couple of Belgian orphans whom Master Barry has taken under his protecting wing. The children have most of the comedy interest in the big picture and also add much to the dramatic strength.

TRIBUTE PAID BY MILLIONS

"COMMON CLAY" ATTRACTION AT GRAND MONDAY, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY.

It is estimated that more than five million persons have witnessed the stage presentation of the Harvard prize play, "Common Clay," by Cleves Kindead and produced by A. H. Woods, under whose management it ran for a full year in New York, with Jane Cowl in the stellar role. This picture will be at the Grand theatre the first three days of next week. Six companies played it throughout the United States and Canada and it has the record of having made two trips from New York to the Pacific Coast. It has earned a tremendous amount of newspaper discussion and formed the theme of addresses from hundreds of pulpits, because it has to do with one of the most vital of our social problems—the proper rearing and care of The Girl, especially in large cities.

Mr. Woods' screen production of this powerful romance, with all of the facilities that the camera offers for broader and more realistic treatment, will, it is said, appeal even more profoundly than the play itself. It will go straight to the heart and conscience of every woman who sees it, not only because of the story itself but also because of the story itself but also because of the sure artistic interpretation of it by a specially selected cast of players, including such well-known names as Mary Allen, W. E. Lawrence, Helen Dunbar, Andrew Arbuckle, John Barrows, John H. Cossar, Fred Goodwins and Easter Walters. They give a flawless performance of the seven-reel Pathe special.

Suitor Lacked Devotion

"No Herbert," she said, in a low tone, "it is impossible. I fear to trust my future with you."

"And why?"

"I have watched your conduct very closely. It lacks the mark of such devotion as my soul craves."

"Do I not come to see you four night in the week?"

"Yes, but I have detected a calculating selfishness in your nature which I fear."

"What do you mean."

"You have never yet failed to leave in time to catch the last bus."

"But that is only common sense."

"I know it is, Herbert, and therefore it is not love."

Doubtful

Mr. Round Talker was a loquacious magistrate, but had the unfortunate habit of letting himself down through foolish mistakes, which speckled liberally his flow or oratory.

It was his pleasure and privilege to sentence a man for sheep stealing. After discoursing at length on the iniquity of the prisoner and the enormity of his offence, he finished up by saying: "My man, had you been tried for this same offence eighty years ago, you would have been hung to-morrow morning.' Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, two of the greatest outfielders fans have ever seen, played against each other last week in Cleveland. They were eye witnesses to a bolsheviki riot and later were at the jail to identify the instigators. Cobb cut the buttons off he coat of a red leader. Speaker followed suit.

Allen Russell may become the leading pitcher of the New York Yankees. His recent slab achievement against Boston was a boost for the Yanks. Trading Russell will be out of vogue if he keeps up this kind of work.

Dan Howley, aggressive coach of the Tigers, says a pitcher should be kept out of uniform twenty-four hours before being worked in a championship game. Maybe Dan is right and maybe that's what's the matter with some we've lamped this year.

Hank Severoid, who has just returned from army service, probably is the most feared batsman among the catchers of the major leagues. Pitchers feel like passing Hank every time he steps to the plate just to be sure everything will be all right.

TOLEDO NAMED AS SITE FOR WILLARD-DEMPSEY GO

Tex Rickard Says Contest Will Be Staged There For Twelve Rounds as Allowed by Law—Methodist Ministers Protest.

Toledo has been chosen as the storm centre of the proposed Willard-Dempsey fistic encounter July 4 for the heavy-weight championship of the world. Tex Rickard, promoter of the event, has made the announcement. If present plans materialize the fight will be pulled off there and will go twelve rounds "to a decision."

Announcement of the scene of battle for the disputed championship followed a busy day by Rickard. Examination of the Ohio law against prize fighting revealed that the enforcement of the code is strictly up to local officials.

Ohio Law Permits Bouts.

The Ohio law permits boxing exhibitions provided the mayor of the city where the tilts are held grants permits. The bouts must be held under the auspices of chartered athletics organizations. Under the provisions of this law bouts are held in Cleveland, Okron and other Ohio cities. Under this same law the championship battle may be held in Toledo.

Toledo Pastors Protest.

Toledo, O., May 9.—The Toledo Ministerial union composed of 150 pastors of churches in this district, held a mass meeting and protested against holding the Willard-Dempsey fight here on July 4. The union adopted a resolution condemning the fight as being in violation of state laws and those of humanity.

It was resolved that every effort will be made to influence the governor to prohibit the fight and if necessary a delegation will be at the ringside to demand action by the county sheriff. The meeting of ministers was called after word came that Tex Rickard had decided upon Toledo as the site for the bout.

Rickard States Position.

Willard and Dempsey will be paid for their services, Rickard explained, and will not fight for a purse, which is against the laws of Ohio.

"Having consulted my attorneys," he said, "I find that I am entirely within the laws of Ohio and according to a decision of law on such cases. Therefore, I have accepted Toledo's offer to hold the boxing exhibition there.

"Under the Ohio law the mayor of Toledo is permitted to grant consent. Under decision of the court one is privileged to employ boxers to give exhibitions when a purse is not fought for."

Arena to Seat 60,000.

An octagon shaped arena to accommodate 60,000 spectators will be secured at a point convenient to the city. Admission charges will range from $5 to $50, acording to the location of the seas. Both pugilists will train for at least five weeks at the cene oft he contest. In accordance with the terms of the contract made with Rickard.

Cininnati Ministers Indignant.

Cincinnati, O., May 9.—Reports that the Willard-Dempsey boxing bout might be held in Toledo caused the Cincinnati Methodist Ministers' Association to pass resolutions to protest against holding the affair in Ohio or in any other state.

The resolutions will be sent to a ministers' association of every county in Ohio, it was announced.

NORWOOD PLACED IN TWO SERIES

EVIVAL OF NATIONAL PASTIME IS ASSURED BY PRESENT OUTLOOK.

According to the Norwood Register the revival of Canada's National game is assured if the enthusiasm displayed at Friday night's Council meeting of the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association is any criterion. Well over 100 teams throughout the province are entered. Norwood has been placed in both the Intermediate and Juvenile series. In the former this district group is number 6 with Peterborough, Campbellford, Hasting, Norwood, and Millbrook. In the latter group is number 9 with Hastings, Campbellford, Norwood and Havelock.

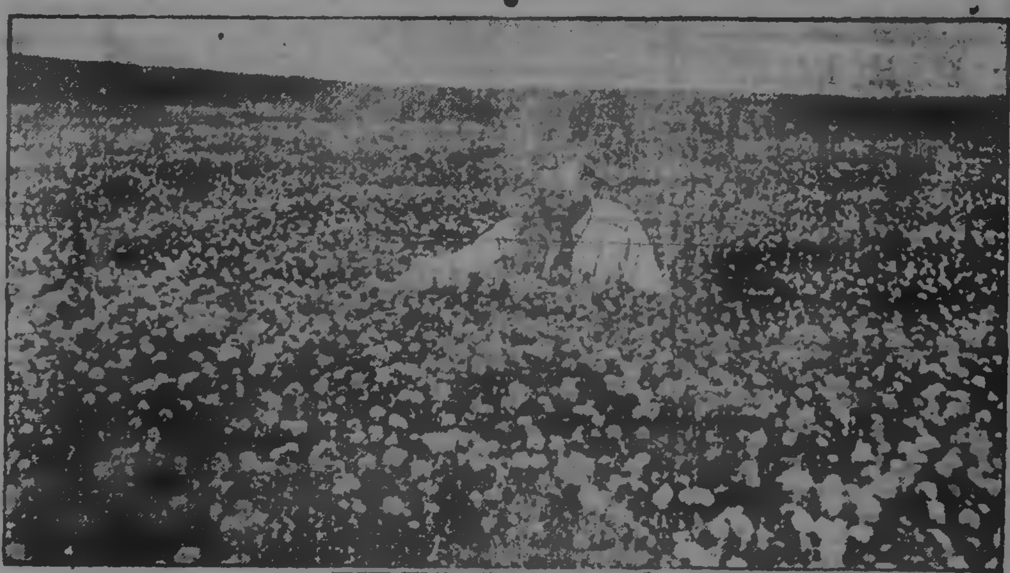
Developing a New Clover Seed District



(1) Alsike clover at Carseland, Alberta.
(2) Field of alsike clover at Tilley, Alberta.

During the last three years Mr. Don H. Bark, Chief of the Irrigation Investigation Division of the Department of Natural Resources of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has been conducting a number of experiments in the growing of clover seed in Southern Alberta, and has met with surprising success. Before coming to Alberta in 1915, Mr. Bark was for several years connected with various irrigation enterprises in Idaho. His experienced eye noticed that the clover growing on lawns, ditch banks, and waste places in Alberta, from the boundary line to as far north as Edmonton, gave promise of good results. This promise was fully confirmed when he shelled hundreds of heads that he gathered. They revealed a large quantity of seed of unusually good quality.

The following year, therefore, he arranged for several plots to be planted on the various Demonstration Farms of the Canadian Pacific Railway situated in the irrigation block, east of Calgary, Alberta. The results of these experiments, which have been continued ever since, have been very satisfactory. Not only have they proved that clover seed can be grown successfully in Southern Alberta, but they have also shown than the seed obtainable is of an exceedingly high quality, with the yield well above the average.

One of the largest plots planted during the first year was three and a half acres, which were planted to alsike clover at Tilley, Alberta. This area produced the following year 2,617 pounds of an excellent quality of machine run seed per acre; an average yield of 748 pounds, or approximately twelve and a half bushels, per acre. This seed could have been sold readily, without recleaning, to dealers at twenty cents a pound, which would have given a gross revenue of $149.60 per acre. But such was the quality that after a thorough recleaning, there remained slightly over ten bushels per acre of the highest possible grade of seed. At this [illegible] prices each acre produced a gross revenue of upwards of $340.

At the same place another plot, comprising almost an acre and a half, was planted to white Dutch clover in 1916. This crop had not looked very well throughout the season, the stand having been thin and the growth rather indifferent, yet a total yield of 205 pounds of seed of an excellent kind were secured from this area in 1917. The average yield was 142 pounds per acre. As this seed was worth at least fifty cents a pound, the returns secured were very satisfactory, despite the poor stand and indifferent growth of the clover. Last year the yield from this plot was somewhat better, 205 pounds of seed of an equally good grade being produced. On the above basis, this represents a gross return of more than $100 an acre.

The following example related by Mr. Bark shows the prolific nature of clover under conditions in Southern Alberta:

In the fall of 1917, a one-acre lawn of Kentucky Blue Grass and White Clover at Cassils, a small station west of Medicine Hat, on the [illegible] line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, appeared to contain enough ripe clover heads so that it would pay to harvest it. This accordingly was done, and the area threshed [illegible] pounds of White Clover seed of an excellent grade and quality. The lawn, therefore, produced over $[illegible] worth of seed, though it was not planted for seed production purposes.

Mr. Bark has gradually [illegible] his experiments over a large territory with equally favorable results. Three and a half acres planted to alsike clover at Rosemary, [illegible] Brooks, Alberta, were harvested for seed in 1918, and although the stand was only fair, an average yield of 250 pounds of seed per acre was produced. Complete records were kept of the cost of handling this area, and at the rate of forty cents per hour per man, and fifteen cents an hour per horse, [illegible] at $62.07, or $17.73 per acre. The total seed produced was 865 pounds which at twenty cents a pound, is worth $177. The net profit from the three acres, therefore, amounted to $114.93, or $[illegible].31 per acre, not a bad return for [illegible] from land that cost only fifty dollars an acre, although the [illegible] was considered rather disappointing.

But much better results were secured with white clover on the same farm. Of this, three acres produced 1,1[illegible] pounds of machine run seed, which when thoroughly recleaned weighed 1,0[illegible] pounds. White clover seed is now being sold on the [illegible] and Winnipeg markets at [illegible]-five cents a pound. The grower, therefore, might reasonably expect to receive fifty cents a pound for recleaned seed in large quantities. On this basis, the gross return from the three acre plot would be no less than [illegible]. As in the case of the alsike [illegible], the actual cost of handling was carefully kept. It amounted to $[illegible] or $[illegible].73 an acre. It will be seen, therefore, that the actual net profit from these three acres was $[illegible].50, or over $130 an acre. With such results it does not take many acres to provide a man with a good [illegible].

Now that the possibilities of growing clover seed on the irrigated lands of Southern Alberta have been practically demonstrated, it will not be long before every farmer in the district is growing at least a few acres. The demand for high-class seed is so great, and likely to be greater in the future, that the danger of causing a glut on the market is very remote, and the grower can rely on good prices. There is little doubt that within the next few years the industry will assume considerable proportions in Southern Alberta.

EMPLOYEE FOR FIFTY YEARS

Mr. Charles Flaherty, Guelph Depot Master, Has Unusual Record.

Guelph, Ont., May 9—Fifty-one years in the employ of the Grand Trunk Railway System is the proud record of Mr. Charles Flaherty, well-known Guelph railroadman, and the present depot master at the local Grand Trunk Railway station, the oldest Grand Trunk employee, in point of continuous service, in the whole district.

Depot Master Flaherty has seen many changes in the method of railroading since that day, fifty-one years ago, when he started braking on a work train. He remembers the days when wood was used in the engine fires, and also to heat the coaches He worked on the Grand Trunk when candles were burned to light the engine cab and also the trains. He saw the candles give way to coal oil lamps, and later saw the lamps discarded in favor of gas and electric light. He was through the hand coupling days, and the days before air-brakes were ever thought of, and also witnessed the introduction of many other improved ideas in the art of railroading.

On August 16, next, Mr. Flaherty will be sixty-five years of age, and entitled to a pension if he wishes to accept it. He is in the best of health however, and has not given the retiring proposition a thought. For several years he and Mrs. Flaherty have been in possession of a railway pass which entitles them to travel free over the entire system of the Grand Trunk Railway in Canada and the United States, and he is happy and contented with life in general, and enjoys nothing so much as to sit down with some one who can talk of the old days.

How Many Pigs to a Cow?

Pigs and cows work very well together as the hog is one of the most economical meat producers on the farm, and does especially well on dairy by-products—skimmilk, buttermilk and whey.

The number of pigs per cow will depend on the kind of dairying the farmer is engaged in. If selling milk for direct consumption, for the milk condensory, or for the powder milk factory, there is no by-product, hence it is doubtful if hogs, under these conditions, will pay at all, especially with an uncertain market. Whey, from the cheese factory, will not support so many pigs per cow as will skimmilk and buttermilk from the farm dairy, or creamery.

On the average, we recommend one brood sow for each ten cows supplying milk to a cheese factory, and one sow for five or six cows where cream or butter is sold from the farm. If a sow reared 10 or 12 pigs each year, this would work out at from one to two pigs per cow on a dairying farm. There are times when a much greater number than this would be on the farm, as the pigs would be in various stages of maturity. The farmer and successful pig-raiser aims to keep up a regular procession of pigs from the sow to the bacon factory. This plan tends to stabilize markets, prevents the gluts which frequently demoralize the bacon business and causes farmers to stay in the hog game, instead of playing "in and out" which is not good for any business.—Prof. H. H. Dean, O. A. College, Guelph.

Sunny Dispositions.

I think it was Carlyle who said: "The man who can laugh way down deep in his diaphragm can never commit murder." And he should have added that the man with a whistling disposition can never be mean, abuse a child, betray a friend or refuse to pay his rent.—Fern Howard, in Milwaukee Sentinel.

Bad for Discipline.

"I understand there's a tendency to drop 'Aye, aye, sir,' in the navy." "That would never do." "Of course not. It's one of the traditions of the service. If that sort of thing were encouraged it wouldn't be long before a 'gob' would be saying 'Yep' to an admiral."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

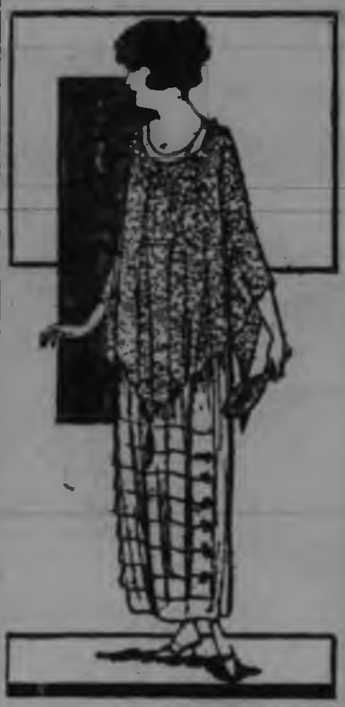
TO SAVE MATERIAL

Negligees May Easily Be Made From Remnants.

Discarded Evening Gowns Also Offer Excellent Materials for the Fashioning of Such Garments.

When a few yards of material picked up at a very low figure on a remnant counter can be turned into a charming gown for home wear there seems to be no excuse for a woman disregarding the feelings of her own family by wearing something that is unbecoming, half worn or soiled. It is so easy for a woman to express her real individuality in these items of in-time apparel that the temptation to possess a number of them is strong with the average really feminine type of woman.

A couple of widths of rich brocade may be transformed into a lovely gown by the simple process of cutting an opening in the center so that the head may be slipped through, finishing this neatly, of course; catching the material together underneath the arms and allowing the front and back panels thus formed to flare as they will over a slip of soft chiffon or lace. Or two or three widths of chiffon in contrasting colors may be laid one over the other, the underneath section being full-figure length, the next one a trifle shorter, and so on, and possibly a lace scarf topping the whole. A charming robe d'interior is the result.



Negligee of Satin and Lace.

The sketch shows a simple and graceful negligee made of lavender satin, with front and back panels laid in large tucks. An old-fashioned lace shawl draped about the shoulders completes the garment. Of course it is not essential that a shawl be used, and, instead of lace, a brocade or a figured silk voile may be used for the coatee.

Discarded evening dresses often offer excellent materials for the fashioning of negligee garments and, regardless of the fact that we are no longer at war, fabric saving is advisable. There is no prospect of an immediate reduction in prices, and until France and Belgium are again able to produce textiles it is not likely that either prices or supply will return to normal.

Early American Newspapers.

The first newspaper published in America made its appearance in Boston on September 25, 1690, and was called Publick Occurrences. It was intended as a monthly, but had only one issue, as it was immediately suppressed by the government for political reasons. The Boston News-Letter was the first permanent newspaper in this country, and usually receives credit for being the pioneer, as it was the first that survived. This initial number appeared on April 20, 1704, and its publication was continued for 72 years.

Doctors' Fees Regulated.

The fees of doctors were prescribed by law in Babylon in the days of Nebuchadrezzar. The code of Hammurabi the great lawgiver, provided: "If a doctor has operated with a bronze lancet on a man for a severe wound, and has cured him, or has removed a cataract with a bronze lancet for a gentleman and cured the eye of the gentleman, he shall receive ten shekels of silver. If the patient be the son of a freedman, the doctor shall receive five shekels."

PRESIDENT EBERT CONDEMNS TERMS OF THE PEACE TREATY

Alleges in Proclamation Just Issued to German People That Allies Have Broken Pledges Given by Them When Armistice Was Signed—Urges All Classes to Work Together to Secure "Just Peace."

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, May 10.—Germany's reply to the terms of peace presented at Versailles on Wednesday will be a proposal, "for peace of right on the basis of the lasting peace of nations," according to a proclamation to German people issued by President Ebert. The proclamation says the treaty would "deliver German labor to foreign capitalism for the indignity of wage slavery and permanently fetter the young German republic."

The proclamation closes with an appeal to the German people to "stand together, knowing no parties persevere with the Government mutual trust in the path of duty, in the belief of the triumph of reason and right."

Ebert's proclamation says "The German people, having laid down its honestly observed all the oblications of the armistice hard as they were. Notwithstanding this our opponents for six months have continued the war by maintaining the blockade. The allies have now given us peace terms which are in contradiction to the promise given.

"From such an imposed peace fresh hatred would be bound to arise between the nations and in the course of history there would be new wars. The world would be obliged to bury every hope of the League of Nations liberating and healing the nations and insuring peace. The German Government is giving expression to the united will of the German nation. The German Government will put forth ever effort to secure for the German people the same national unity and independence and the same freedom of labor in economical and cultural respects which the allies want to give to all the peoples of Europe save only our people. Every thought and the entire will of the nation ought now to be turned to labor for the preservation and reconstruiction of our Fatherland.

The Government appeals to all Germans in this hard hour to persevere with it mutual trust in the path of duty and in the belief in the triumph of reason and of right."

The proclamation which was issued by the Imperial president and the Imperial Government bears the signature of President Ebert.

Schedule of What It Costs To Live

WILL BE SUBMITTED BY LABOR MEN TO BOARD OF TRADE COMMITTEE.

There is nothing of real interest inthe strike sitiation to report today, excepting that representatives of labor will meet in Mr. G. N. Gordon's office this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The object of the meeting is to draft a schedule of just what it costs a family to live in Peterboro, for presentation to the Board of Trade's industrial committee in support of the men's contention that their demands are justified by price-conditions generally. The labor representation is optimistic that their evidence thus presented in concrete form will meet with favorable endorsation from men trained by long business career to grapple with industrial problems.

The reverant gentleman was made the happy recipient of a substantial leath wallet containing fifteen crisp $10 bills, and accompanied by an address from Mr. Andrew McFarlane chairman of the Board of Managers, in appreciation of his two years' effcient and acceptal ministrations. Rev. Mr. Rowand is leaving on or about June 1st to assume the pastorship of St Andrew's Church, Moose Jaw, and he will depart for his new of Christian labor with the best wishes of a host of friends both inside and outside St. Andrew's Church this city.

The presentation to Mrs Rowand took the shape of a beautiful silver card case. Mrs Weir made the offering, and read the following address:

"Dear Mrs. Rowand,—We cannot allow you to go away without expressing to you our appreciation of your work while here.

"You have helped us so much by your presence, your suggestions and your kindly manner, always ready to give of yourself even often times ebond your physical strength. In every activity of the church you have been interested, particularly in the Red Cross work and the Women's Missionary Society. Your leadership and wise counsel will long be remembered.

"Our prayers and best wishes will follow you into the new field to which you are called and we trust you may be long spared to help on the work of the Master. We know wherever you are, you will be an inspiration for good and will do your part to win the world for Christ.

"We ask you to accept this little gift just as a rememberance from the ladies of St. Andrew's Church."

Mrs. T. H., who is leaving for Toronto received a handsome pearl ring in testimony of years of faithful and energetic co-operation in the church's activities.

All three recipients were completely taken by surprise, but replied in graceful words of acknowledgement.

The guests of honor at the banquet were the elders and Board of Managers as also, of course, were those whose coming departure is regretted by a large congregation and appreclative congregation. A new departure was noticed in the manager acting as writers while the ladies were at table.

The after-dinner speeches were worthy of the occasion.

"Go To It," Advice Of Mr. Burnham

J. H. Burnham, M.P., has sent the followin letter to Mr. Noman Sukloff in reply to the protest recently send to Ottawa by the Jews of the city protesting against some of the terms in the Immigration Bill now before Parliament:

Sir:—I am forwarding our telegram to the Prime Minister. If there is any attempt to diminish the liberties of any portion of the people I ought to be struck out at once.

I think you will find that it looks worse than it is. However if you have a grievance go to it. You will succeed.

MANSION HOUSE SEIZED BY POLICE

SINN FEIN PARLIAMENT BROKEN UP WHEN MILITARY FORCES APPEAR.

Dublin, May 10.—At a special of the Sinn Fein Parliament held in the Mansion House yesterday before it was seized, b the soldiers, a reception was accorded the delegates from the Irish! societies in America. Prof Edward De Valera, the Sinn Fein leader, declared in speaking that "Ireland will never be cheated by England and expressed cordial thanks to the delegates for "Coming to defend the right."

Frank P. Walsh, one of the delegates declared that America denied the claim that the Irish question was an international one.

Former Governor Edward Dunne, another of the representatives, said that the general election recently held hal proved that three fourths of Ireland demanded the creation of a republic.

The military occupation of the Mansion House, which was effected by soldiers and police was not aimed at the suppression of the Irish Parliament whose sessions are held there, but was intended to effect the arrest of Robt Barton and J J Walsh, Sinn Fein members of parliament and others who had recently escaped from Mount Joy prison and were believed to be in the building. Dawson street, on which the Mansion House stands and all adjoining streets were cleared of people and tramway traffic was suspended.

PRISONERS TAUGHT GERMANS TO FEAR AND RESPECT CANADIANS

Deserve as Much Recognition From Their Mother Country as Any Officer or Man Who Went Overseas—Thrilling Word Pictures of Prison Camp Conditions by Lieut. Beverly Robinson

Lieutenant Beverley Robinson of the Royal Air Force, the only Canadian born officer who escaped from a German prison camp to safety, gave a vivid ward-picture in St. Paul's Church last evening of German brutality to prisoners of war and conditions generally in Hun prisons. He also described first hand exactlp what was involved in an escape from Germany, and just what solitary confinement in a German prison meant. On his two hours' story of thrilling experiences in prison camps, and in attempted and successful escapes therefrom—here and there tinged with humor—the lieutenant makes no attempt at aratary but rather affects that conversational style of narrative which appeals to the individual listener with greater force than eloquence. In fact his whole address is a heart-to-heart talk, illuminative of the unspeakable Hun, and corroborative of his reported atrocities.

Had Enough of Huns.

Lieutenant Robinson in describing his capture after alighting within the German lines, said he had at that time never seen a Hun and never wants to see one again, and he could not now make up his mind whether a German is a worst liar than he is a boaster, or vice verse. One thing he could cinfidently assert and that is, a German will deliberately lie even if he is sure of being found out five minutes afterwards. He has no idea of truth, of pride, honor or human, and has no sporting instinct.

Courteous Treatment at Front.

While under detention near the front the speaker said he was treated well and courteously, and the staff officers assured him of similar treatment in the interior—but those officers had all been in England. Then he did not know but what they themselves were deceived as to conditions in interior German prison camsp for the Hun military system is of such a underlight compartment character that news considered better concealed would rarely leak out to the ears of those inclined to frown upon atrocities. He also was inclined to believe that Belgian atrocities might have been known to but a small part of the German forces—those who actually took part therein.

Show Camps.

In his description of prison camps Lieutenant Robinson said those run by prisoners officers were comparatively comfortable, but they were maintained as show camps for the benefit of neutrals who were never allowed to visit such notorious prisons as Strohen and Holy Minden, where prisoners were treated worse than brute beasts. But the morale of prisoners was much higher in the latter than in the former, and the attempts at escape were frequent. In fact, it was taken for granted that the one outstanding duty of a prisoner was to escape. The speaker here went on to describe his own attempts at escape and that of others and the rapidity in which preparations were made. Three French officers, for instance, made their getaway in a most daring and courageous manner. One who could speak German like a native dressed up as a Hun under office the other two as private. In broad daylight they marched boldly to the prison gate where the guard saluted and allowed them to pass out on their way to the freedom they succeeded in attaining. In ten days these prisoners secured their German uniforms and ill accoutrements. One pair of trousers they made of a pair of curtains. "I ought to know, he said, for those curtains belonged to me."

Strohen Camp.

In picturing this, one of the worst of camps, the speaker brought expressions of horror from his audience. There was no sanitation—just two huge sess pools—and one could smell the camp at the station ten miles distant. No water fit to drink was obtainable; 0 or 60 officers were crowded into one room where the beds were four high, one above the other, and here they both slept and ate such as there was to eat and that was but little. At his beastly prison brutal atrocities were the rule, and several officers were bayoneted in cold blood. Two were run through the back while with others, retiring to their quarters, their guards having taken exception to them greeting an incoming prisoner with cheers a rule prevalent with prisoners. This was their only offence.

In describing his escape with three others from this prison where 40 yards of a ditch deep with slime and filth had to be traversed, a square of interlaced barbed wire in its midst and an outer barbed wire fence to be cut before freedom could be secured, he faithfully pictured the heroism of their leader Sommerville. This officer was a small man, and after having cut through all the defences suddenly be-

HARMONY AND ENTHUSIASM MARK NEW BOARD OF TRADE

Over One Hundred Members at Last Night's Session and Total List is Now Well Over Two Hundred—By-Laws and Constitution Discussed and Revised—Ryerson Ritchie Made a Life Member.

Moved by W. H. Bradburn, seconded by Geo. J. Sherry:

In view of the lengthy period during which Mr. Ryerson Ritchie has continuously advocated a thorough reorganization of the Peterborough Board of Trade, in his earnest, intelligent manner, furthered by strong personal effort, it is accordingly the opinion and wish of this meeting that Mr. Ritchie be made a life member of this Board of Trade.

On repeated occasions Mr. Ritchie has given splendid addresses, full of inspiration and encouragement. In addition to this, since the reorganization of the Board of Trade, he has spent a great deal of time and effort towards drafting and completing a thorough system of government.

This resolution, therefore, is intended to convey some small mark of appreciation to our fellow citizen to whom we are indebted.

That was the compliment that the Board of Trade last night, at one of the best meetings the organization has ever held, to the man that has brought it to its present high condition of working power, who has planned every detail and whose experience and talent have been so unselfishly devoted to the interests of his native city. Mr. Ritchie has travelled extensively in the United States, but nowhere has he seen a community in whose prosperous future he has so much confidence as in that of the place he calls his home.

When the resolution had been enthusiastically adopted by a rising vote, Mr Ritchie was called into the room and President Turner read the document to him. The recipient of the honor then made a graceful reply.

There were over one hundred members present when President Turner called the meeting to order, and enthusiasm and harmony marked the proceedings. Mr Turner delivered the following address:

The President's Address.

The members of the Board of Trade have doubtless noticed the full page advertisement that appeared in our daily newspapers on Wednesday and Thursday of this week. The suggestion came through your committee on civic education, composed of Chairman Fred L. Roy, P. P. Westbye, A. Mowat, R. M. Glover and Alex. McGregor. The object of these advertisements is to arouse an interest in what a comparatively few of us are trying to do, and get the work togther spirit into real action in Peterborough. We are trying to get enough men to take hold with you, and they must do that, otherwise it is not worth while for us to bother about it. But I believe, and I think you believe, that we shall get together and pull together sincerely, vigorously.

Sometimes I wonder if we are tending towards an emotional age, for it often seems that if we are to do anything in a public way we must stimulate our enthusiasm, indulge in flambuoyant displays, and have whirlwind campaigns. One thing must be clear to you—we cannot build up Peterborough by sensation. We must think about and devise ways to that end, and we must work as we never have worked in Peterborough before for results. It means steady, plodding effort. And this work cannot rest upon one man, or a hundred men, for it is the rightful duty of every one to assume his or her share. The theory upon which we are entering this work is that if we "play the game" others will join, and thus more and more will intelligent and helpful co-operation come to us.

Much of the fault—if fault there be—is due to the fact that we have not been attending to our business as citizens. Just now we have a bit of business to attend to—of extraordinary importance. I refer to the business of putting the Board of Trade into action. Let me say to you in all earnestness that it is within the power of those of us who are here tonight to put the Board of Trade "over the top" before noon tomorrow. All that would be necessary is for you to form yourselves into teams of two, leave your business for one hour, and get your immediate neighbors into line. Will you do it?

A friend said the other day that we are trying to organize a Board of Trade for a city twice as big as Peterborough, and that is exactly what we are trying to do—create a Board of Trade for a city of 50,000 people, and if we do that we shall rise to the job of making the city to fit the Board. If we go at it right and stick to it right, Peterborough will be a city of a hundred thousand people within twenty years and, though some of us may drop by the way, pray God we shall all live to see that day.

But to have a big city is a small part of the job, more bulk isn't much to work for if it isn't valuable. God has put the materials in our hands out of which we can mould a great city. We can easily master the science or art of city building. All the problems that affect our commercial, industrial or social developments are solvent, and we can set our own scientists and artists at work, the workshop being these rooms of the Board of Trade. These scientists artists and workmen are put upon our committees. What's everybody's business is nobody's business, consequently we appoint committees on the promise that each committee shall function and make a good report of itself. We shall all take our turn on the committees.

In choosing our committees for this first year of formative work, we have tried to select men fit for the jobs assigned them. No one has been appointed out of mere compliment or courtesy. And with few exceptions the committeemen are asked to do just one thing, and to do that one thing well.

Every member of the Baord had been supplied with a copy of the constitution and bylaws, and this passed the test afer a few amendments had been suggested and adopted.

Stand by the Veterans.

Major Layfield asked for the co-operation of the Board when the Veterans' big drive starts one week from Monday. There is no doubt as to how the members stand on this question. Their position was manifested in the applause which greeted the major's statement that the Veterans' new club rooms would be a credit to the city and that the men who occupied them would also do honor to Peterborough.

G. O Cameron announced that the Playgrounds Associaton will also raise funds. All that the members of the association ask is that the citizens donate fifty cents of their vacation money in order to make a vacation for a thousand kiddies in the city. This announcement, too, was received with enthusiasm that augurs well for the success of the movement.

Referred To Committees.

The request of the G. W. V. A. for co-operation in securing employment for returned men was referred to the industrial and welfare committee. The transportation committee will deal with the complaint regarding the new timetable of the C. P. R. by which the local train does not reach Petrborough until 9:25, which is regarded as an inconvenience.

The Board will co-operate with

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

SATURDAY, MAY 10, 1919

MOTHER'S DAY.

"HER CHILDREN arise up and call her blessed."

Such was the tribute of the wise king of old to the mothers of his day and generation, and, like every passage in Holy Writ, it is just as apt now as it was in the time of the author of those imperishable proverbs. Thousands of young men and women in Canada will tomorrow pay silent but nevertheless touching tribute to their mothers, living or dead, by wearing floral tokens. Preachers all over America will render homage to the women who have reared the sons and daughters of the rising race.

Many a mother today is grieving for a son who went to war and never came back. But that grief is the grim penalty for raising such children. The most illustrious mother the world has ever known would never have been forced to endure the agony of witnessing the excruciating death of her Son on Calvary if that Son had not been gifted with Divine inspiration that gave Him authority to speak as none ever spoke before or since.

RICHARD HALL & SON TAKE THE LEAD.

AS WILL BE SEEN by an announcement in another column, Richard Hall & Son, Limited, have decided to set an example for all other merchants in the city, and on and after June 2 will close their mammoth mercantile establishment at 5 o'clock, Saturday evenings excepted. This hour for closing is not for the summer season alone, but is to be continued indefinitely regardless of the time of year. The introduction of the innovation has been postponed until the date specified in order to give the firm a chance to get the matter before the public so that their patrons may govern themselves accordingly.

In these days of agitation for shorter hours, it is certainly refreshing to encounter such an incident as this. This firm does not wait for the employes to make a request, but the concession is doubly acceptable for the reason that it has been voluntarily made. There would be infinitely less in the daily papers of labor troubles the world over if more employers would adopt such a policy of generosity.

The members of the firm are anxious in the first place to promote the welfare of those on their payroll. The majority of those are girls whose duties keep them almost constantly on their feet during working hours. Naturally they show evidence of the strain towards the close of the day. Letting them quit half an hour earlier than usual will be, not only for the girls, but the male members of the staff, a boon indeed.

Richard Hall & Son adopt this plan in spite of the fact that their competitors all around them have decided to keep open until 5:30 five evenings in the week. In the end, however, the firm that adops the new hour will be the gainer. Their liberality and consideration for their employes is sure to result in more loyal and more efficient service. Customers will not fail to notice this, and will have no complaints to make of indifference on the part of attendants, who are really indifferent only because they are weary. There is no chance for an argument on the point so frequently mooted—shorter hours make for a more loyal, a more efficient and a more contented staff, and the firm which takes the lead in such a policy will have first choice of all the desirable labor on the market.

Outside cities have been advertised in the press from one end of the province to the other when a leading merchant or manufacturer reduces the hours of labor in his institution. Toronto has been made famous in the mercantile world by the generosity of some of its merchant princes in this regard. It is an encouraging sign of progress in Peterborough when it falls to the lot of the newspapers to record such an instance in this city.

The example is worthy of imitation, and beyond all question before the summer is over the other leading merchants on George street will fall into the procession of which Richard Hall & Son have furnished the lead. Uniformity of working hours is just as essential in any line as uniformity of wages. Otherwise stable conditions are out of the question.

SCHOOL BOARDS OF THE PAST.

THE MEMBERS of the present School Board are, many of them, new in the matter of providing school accommodation for the increasing juvenile population, but all are practical and intelligent business men, and no one doubts that they will eventually make good and live up to the record established by their illustrious predecessors. Even if they start wrong occasionally, they invariably so far have ended right, and in their hands the school system of the city, one of its proudest institutions, is perfectly safe.

For years there were on the Board of Education men who devoted time and energy unsparingly to the educational welfare of the city. In the course of time and of their own volition, they left the task to others, but their works remain, outstanding witness to their public spirit and civic devotion. Those were the days of the "Old Guard," of the Hills, the Cranes, the Eastwoods, the Millers, the Ackermans, and of the only one of the number who has been called away, the gentlemanly and cultured Dr. Burnham, one man who certainly left the world and the city much better than he found it. That the services of the others are no longer available is the city's misfortune, but they now can rest from their official labors with a consciousness of duty well performed and the assurance that their work will be more and more appreciated with the passing of time.

The Old Guard were accustomed to caustic criticism from press and people, but, undismayed, they held to their course, and their every act of moment has been justified by later events. Four years ago they selected as a possible school site the very location at Sherbrooke street which the present Board now has in view. If that Board had remained on duty and the war had not broken out, the proposed new school would have been by this time an accomplished fact, but the delay has been occasioned by circumstances over which no human agency had control.

When the Old Guard built the King Edward School they were assailed without mercy. They were accused of extravagance, the assumption being that they were spending money on a building many of the rooms of which would remain idle for years. The King Edward School is a comparatively new building, and yet even though all the township pupils have been turned away, it has been found necessary to hire a room in a neighboring church to accommodate the children in the city.

The Collegiate Institute is one of the best institutions of its kind in Ontario, perfect in all its appointments. It enjoys another distinction, too, because it was erected at a cost which is cited to the present by school boards all over the province as an example of what may be accomplished by businesslike methods in the conduct of public affairs.

It was, perhaps, in the building of the King George School that the Old Guard achieved their highest financial triumph while establishing an institution that was up to modern requirements in every way. They secured the lot, comprising six acres, for the sum of $3000. A few years before that transaction the owner of the same property received from the Dominion Government five acres of this land, farther away from the city and on the other side of the hill, to be used for the route of the Trent Canal, the price being $14,000. He was not satisfied with this amount, and a lawsuit resulted with the Federal powers.

THE AUTOIST'S LIABILITY.

THE POSSESSION of an automobile thes days is not always an evidence of wealth. This has been demonstrated time and again to the grief of the pedestrian who has been injured through the carelessness of the driver of a car. When an autoist runs down a citizen the usual punishment is to impose a heavy fine or send him to jail, but this neither helps to pay the victim's doctor bill or assuage his suffering. Civil suits for damages by those permanetly disabled in auto accidents have been started, and the plaintiff finds that even if he wins the case and is given a verdict he is unable to collect it. There is not, probably, more than one car owner in ten who is financially responsible to the extent of ability to settle if a judge and jury decide a damage suit against him.

Recognizing this fact, the legislature of the State of New York has just passed a law which decrees that no man shall be granted in that commonwealth a license to run a car until he has filed a liability bond varying in amount, according to circumstances, from $2,000 to $5,000. That looks like the first sensible step to protect the public against he careless driver, and the idea might well be adopted in Canada.

PRISONERS TAUGHT GERMANS

thought himself that the holes which had allowed his passage through would not be large enough for his companions to follow him; he therefore gallantly turned back and waded through all those 40 yards of filth to cut another strand of wire at each barrier. Eleven attemted escape that storming night—three got free of the camp—the leader referred to, an officer named Nanfifield and the speaker. Of these three two made the 86 miles across the border, but Lieutenant Robinson unfortunately was betrayed by an hostile old hen on the fourth night of his flight. It happened in the way. He had taken refuge in the loft of a barn where he found a nest of 13 eggs. There he appropriated to his own rise, cooked two in his tommy heater and had just enjoyed a comfortable meal when along came the mother hen. "She made an awful noise," said the lieutenant, "and told me what she thought of me." This aroused the woman of the farm, who discovered the escaped prisoner and game the alarm. Her husband appeared with a shot gun, and the result was that the unfortunate officer was returned to Strohen, and given a month's solitary confinement.

Hun Horrors

In reference to solitary confinement Lieutenant Robinson did not care to talk of its horrors and the atrocities it entailed in a German prison. But one officer spent one year and seven months solitary confinement in a cellar so small that when his bed was let down there was scarcely room for a camp stool. On some occasions he suffered rations reduced from those appallingly insufficient at their best, and air so shut off that he had to lie on the floor and inhale what air he could from between the bottom of the door and the floor in order to just exist.

The Worst of All

The worst camp of all, and from which Lieutenant Robinson finally escaped into Holland, was Holy Minden, of which he would say but little, conditions having been pretty generally exposed. There was nothing equal to it, he declared, for the atrocious treatment meted to prisoners under commandant of Charlie Niemeyer, better know as "Milwaukee Bill," who will surely be brought to trial by the Allies.

Heroism of Prisoners

In conclusion, the speaker contended that prisoners of war displayed as much heroism and reflected as much honor on Canada as their brethren at the front. Their letters home were cheerful while the writers were enduring with unbroken spirit, untold brutality at the hands of a pack of swine. They endured countless insults and atrocities and yet they came through smiling. Canadian prisoners caused the Germans more trouble than those of any other nationality. They did less work, called for more men to guard them, raised more hell than any other prisoners, and successfully defied every effort of the Huns to break their spirits. By their indomitable pluck and heroism they taught the Germans to fear and respect the name of Canada and Canadians. By the fortitude with which they endured pestitential conditions, filth, abuse, working in salt mines, being strung up by the wrists hours at a time, or tied to a post in freezing weather, they upheld the honor of Canada and deserve as much of their mother country as any officer or man who went overseas.

THE ROAD TO NORMAL TIMES

(New York Commercial.)

The war is over and the world is awaiting the signing of the treaty of peace. The rough and rugged road of war must be retraced, and the road to normal times must be traversed.

Confidence is the keynote of the arch of business. Capital is timid, and runs to cover at the slightest hint of danger. Business and financial panics are always caused by lack of confidence. War destroys confidence; fear destroys confidence. Threats to overthrow and disintegrate established institutions destroy confidence and cause a slowing down of business.

One of the contributing causes of this lack of confidence and delay in the revival of business is the fear that many of the socialistic and un-American schemes foisted on the republic in the name of "winning the war" might be so attractive to the public as to be grafted permanently on the body politic. Government control and management of public and many private institutions seems to appeal to so many that a lack of confidence is abroad, a fear that the Constitution of the fathers will be forgotten, or is forgotten, and that business and capital can no longer rely on protection from the Constitution and the law.

There never was so much money (both gold and credit money) in the United States as there is today. But money is of no avail unless it becomes liquid and active, and finds its way into the mills, shops and factories, to help produce more wealth.

There never was so much wealth in the country as there is today; but more wealth does not make business activity and prosperity. A doubling of our national wealth in the next thirty days would not make business more active or give employment to any more men, now idle, unless such wealth was bold and active and working in the vineyard of business.

But the moment this capital, this wealth, restored to vitality by confidence in the sanity and sound judgment of the people and the men in authority, enters the avenues of trade and commerce and production, normal and prosperous times are assured.

What is the trouble with both England and the United States? The fear of radical socialism, of an assault on the capitalist system, of so-called bolshevism, of lawlessness and anarchy. Capital is timid. "Democracy as defined by some seems to be a rule of the mob; and that definition of democracy makes capital afraid to venture.

Revolutionary schemes to make everybody rich and happy by confiscation, by division, by government fiat, have all been tried at some time in the world's history and all have failed. Capital knows this, yet hides for a very good reason. Hence normal times have not yet arrived.

Human institutions are built on confidence—confidence in the fidelity of the laws of nature and the inherent fidelity of the human heart.

All industrial, commercial and economic life rests on confidence—confidence in each other, confidence in the integrity and reliability of the average man and the clear thinking of the intelligent.

When this confidence is shaken by the false teachings of the mentally deficient; when it is destroyed by the lawlessness and loose living of the irresponsible, the wheels of progress slow down, and the business world becomes partially, perhaps totally, paralyzed.

There is just one remedy for this world-wide state of affairs, and that is a restoration of common sense, and law and order, a return, in the United States at least, to constitutional government, and a removal of all governmental shackles on private business not permitted by the constitution and not within the ordinary scope of government functions in times of peace.

GENERAL DEBILITY FOLLOWS INFLUENZA

HEALTH CAN ONLY BE RESTORED THROUGH THE USE OF A BLOOD-MAKING TONIC.

Debility is a loss of vitality not affecting any one part of the body particularly, but the system generally. It is dangerous because it reduces the body's resistance to disease. When debility follows acute diseases convalescence is slow and one's strength does not return as it should. An attack of influenza often results in debility that persists for months. Everybody recognizes that the remedy for debility is to build up the blood, because the blood goes to every part of the body, and any improvement in its condition is quickly felt throughout the system.

In cases of simple anaemia, or debility following acute diseases such as fevers or influenza, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will be found valuable, because they really build up the blood and strengthen the nerves. There is no other medicine as valuable for growing children, and for men and women whose nervous energy has been overdrawn. They are worth a fair trial in every case where thin blood and weak nerves have started the trouble. The value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills has been proved in the home of Mrs. John Fram, Owen Sound, who says: "My daughter Mabel was troubled with a bad cough; she was pale, weak and her appetite was very poor, indeed I feared that she was going into a decline. A friend advised the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after taking eight boxes she was again enjoying the best of health. Again last autumn Spanish influenza attacked our home and after the acute symptoms were past both myself and another daughter were left very much run down. My daughter was so weak that she could not walk to school and would tremble when she got upon her feet. I was so weak myself that I could not do my housework. Again we resorted to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and in each case we took five boxes when we were as well as ever we had been. I never enjoyed better health than I am now doing, and am able again to do my housework. After our experience it is not possible for me to say too much in favor of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING

By . A. BRADY

Many a family is kept poor in health and in pocket through its own extravagance.

Notwithstanding the sugar shortage in the past summer the government urged and encouraged extensive home canning operations, and yet a great many housewives canned nothing to speak of, because, they argued, "Everything was so high." The time of times to preserve perishable food as the government well knew, is when it is high in season. Some housewives consider it economical to pay 6 cents for one pound of food three days a week instead of buying ten pounds for 55 cents.

It is extravagant in both senses to peel potatoes before cooking them. The roughage—that is, the cellulose or woody fiberof the skins—that cannot be digested by man is, nevertheless, sorely needed, to maintain the functional activity of the bowel under the demoralizing influence of the ultra-refinement of modern diet. Strange how childishly credulous we are to throw away nature's own "regulator." The skins of potatoes carry most of the valuable mineral salts, including iron, which are needed by the body.

Another favorite extravagance of housewives is the waste of the water in which vegetables are cooked. This water contains much of the mineral matter, the vegetable salt, which are essential in the processes of digestion and assimilation. Why throw it away and then spend good money for alleged aids to digestion? Why discard nature's true skin and hair tonics? Use the water in which the vegetables have been cooked to make soup.

There is something called vitamin in rice. Fowls fed with the ordinary polished white rice soon develop multiple neuritis, because the refined or polished rice is robbed of its vitamin; if the polishings are added to the feed the fowls soon recover from the neuritis. There is no evidence that polished rice has anything to do with the ordinary localized neuritis (nerve inflammation) we frequently see in this country, but, among races using rice as a staple food, beriberi (multiple neuritis) is likely to develop if the polished rice is used. Unhulled or brown rice contains all the vitamin nature has put in the rice kernel.

When the Doctors Disagree

"I am 50 years of age, sixty-three inches tall and weigh 200 pounds. Last summer I did all my own housework and besides, worked in the garden and orchard several hours a day, and at the same time I kept on a strict diet, including but little sweets and starchy foods, but at the end of the summer I had gained three pounds. What is the matter? Our family physician tells me I inherit the tendency to be stout and that I cannot overcome it without ruining my health.

"MRS. B. I. H."

Your intake of food is obviously greater than your output of energy. The habit is handed down in some families. Your doctor may know some particular reason why you should not reduce. As a general rule, any one who is overweight gains in strength and health by reducing, provided the reduction of weight is brought about by diet and exercise. The only harmful methods of reducing of which I know are reducing by taking salts or by using drugs without medical supervision.

When To Discard the Corset

"When should an expectant mother discard her corset? A. C. D."

Immediately, if not sooner. Except for certain disease condition and defects of development, the corset is never helpful to a girl or a woman.

Uric Acid in the Blood.

"I am suffering from uric acid in my blood and must abstain from eating acid foods. Can you give me a list of foods which contain acid and foods which would be suitable for me to eat to reduce the acid? MRS. H. N. E."

A certain amount of uric acid is normally present in the blood. Acid foods are oranges, lemons, grapefruit, apples, berries—but these are all advisable to increase the alkalinity of the blood and reduce the acidity of urine. Uric acid is not derived from acid foods, but from nitrogenous foods, purin-containing foods. These foods are purin free: Bread, most cereals, most fruits, most nuts, cucumbers, cabbage, turnips, onions, tomatoes, milk, cream, butter, eggs and Edam, Swiss Gervais or Rouquefort cheese. These foods contain purins and give rise to uric acid: Beef, veal, mutton, pork, tongue, brain, chicken, goose, salmon, oysters, crabs, lobsters, spinach, kohlrabi, peas, beans, liver, sweetbreads, sardines, anchovies, bouillon, beer.

FARM WATER SYSTEMS

A Summary of Best Available Types for Stables.

When Pastures Fail the Milk Flow Decreases Unless Soiling Crops Have Been Provided — Corn Silage Will Also Greatly Increase Milk Yield In Hot Summer.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

IN a day's visit among the farmers of Ontario in almost every county you would run across quite a number of stables equipped with some form or other of water system for supplying the farm stock more or less automatically with water each day. With few exceptions every new barn built now is provided with a water system. Among the available systems are the following, which, in this short article, can receive only a very brief description:

Of these probably the most common is that consisting of a water supply tank in the hay or straw loft above the stable, from which the water runs by gravity into a regulating tank on the stable floor, which supplies the individual drinking basins with water automatically. The tank is usually built of concrete and the size depends upon the kind of power used for pumping; if windmill be used then the tank needs to be large enough for three or four days' supply as the wind does not blow every day. Under these conditions a tank 10 x 4 x 4 feet, or its equivalent would be required for 30 head of stock. Sometimes the concrete tank is built just outside the stable wall and underground enough to protect it again frost, or in one corner of the stable, elevated enough off the floor to feed the regulating tank by gravity. In case pumping is done by gasoline engine and a smaller tank is sufficient, a metal one is suspended from ceiling of stable. In every case an overflow is necessary. Many provide means for collecting the rain water off the barn and running it into the storage tank so that in wet weather very little pumping is required, especially where a large tank is used. Another method of filling the storage tank is by the hydraulic ram installed at the spring. Still another is by means of a one-inch pipe leading from a spring or other source at an elevation at least as high as the storage tank. Sometimes where hydraulic ram or gravity system is in use the storage tank is dispensed with, the water, in the case of the former, running through the drinking basins or trough all the time and escaping to a good outlet or drain, in the latter the water is piped directly to the regulating tank which in turn supplies the basins or trough automatically. Again the water is pumped directly to tank in the attic of the house, and the overflow from it supplies the stable with water. And since the advent of the compression water system we find a few cases where it is used to supply the stables as well as the house, the installation being proportionately larger than it would be for the house alone. Probably no one system, however, can be absolutely recommended as best for every case as the circumstances pertaining to the source of supply, amount of water used, position and elevation of the farm buildings, etc., always have to be carefully considered in planning the ideal water system for the farm house or stable.—R. R. Graham, B.S.A., O. A. College, Guelph.

Soiling Crops for Cows.

Most Ontario dairy farmers depend on the pasture crop for the feeding of cows during summer. If the pasture fails, there is no remedy, the cows go dry, the creameries and cheeseries suffer loss of patronage, the city milk plants are short of milk, and the whole dairy business is more or less handicapped. The time has come when dairy farmers should take out an insurance policy in the form of a summer silo, filled with corn from the previous year's crop. Failing this, silage in the bottom of a winter silo is good feed, but the surface exposed should be reduced one-half by cutting the silage down the centre with a hay-knife. If this is not available, the silage in one-half the silo may be dug down with a fork, but this leaves an irregular edge which causes excessive spoiling of the silage. Great care is needed in feeding summer silage, else there is danger of tainting the milk. The strong advantage of silage for supplementing poor pasture, is the fact that a man can get feed out of a silo for a herd of cows in about one-half the time required to cut a soiling crop in a field and haul this to the stable for the cows to eat. Some meal, or wheat bran, should be added to the silage for best results.

If silage is not available for feeding during the season of '19, then soiling crops like clover, oats, peas and vetches, corn, etc., should be provided, so that the cows may not want for feed to make milk.—Prof. H. H. Dean, O. A. College, Guelph.

Farm Tractors.

Interest in farm tractors has increased rapidly in Ontario in the part two or three years. In the early part of this year the Ontario Department of Agriculture held 32 courses on farm power in different parts of the province, and there was a total attendance of 12,270. No greater interest has been shown in courses on any other subject, and much useful educational work was done.

Handle Tubers Carefully.

Potatoes should be handled carefully and not as though they were cobblestones. The potato is a living thing, with a protective skin, which it is able to keep intact if it has a fair chance.

The path of success has been invariably the path of common sense. Xmas B. C.

Xmas was celebrated many hundred years before Christ was born. It was in honor of Tammus one of the Babylonian sun gods. They had three, Baal, Ashtaroth and Tammus, and built many temples in their honor. The letter "T" was changed to "X," as this was considered a sign of the holy entrance into the temple of the gods of the sun.

How Great Poems Were Written.

Two of the greatest poems in the language were written by chums competing against each other in friendly rivalry. They undertook to work at these poems for six months and then compare results. Keats went to the Isle of Wight and wrote "Endymion," and Shelley went to Marlow and, lying in a boat on the Thames, wrote "The Revolt of Islam."

Freed from Chronic Pains

To those who are afflicted with the agonies of a chronic aching back, loss of strength, weight and vigor, the case of Mr. P. Herbert of Plessevillo will appeal with special significance.

Mr. Herbert had suffered with Kidney trouble for years and failed to find a prescription that would give him any relief. Finally he tried Gin Pills because he was impressed by the fact that Gin Pills contained the beneficial ingredient of Juniper without any Alcohol being added.

Note these extracts from his letter:

"I suffered from Kidney trouble for several years, and tried numerous remedies without finding any permanent relief. My case appeared chronic.

I knew that Juniper without alcohol was excellent for the Kidneys, so decided to try Gin Pills. One single pill gave me great relief, and since taking four boxes, I find myself completely cured. I am no longer bad-tempered, have increased in weight, and am strong and vigorous again."

Here is another case. Mrs. M. E. Gardner, of Richmond, Que., writes:

"My husband was taken with severe kidney trouble last winter, and could not work for some time. He heard of Gin Pills, and after taking one box was able to resume his work. Two boxes relieved the pain in his back, and to day he is well and strong again."

Gin Pills help others—surely they will do the same for you. Try them. 50c a box everywhere.

Co-Operative Live Stock Marketing

(1) Cattle in the Vermillion District, Saskatchewan.
(2) Appraising the pork supply.
(3) Group of sheep in feeding experiment after being sheared.

TO get better and quicker results from any industry or calling it is generally necessary to have some external or internal stimulation. No matter how favorable the soil and how high the quality of the seed, the plant does not reach its best possible growth unless care has been given to the cultivation of the soil. It was with this principle in mind that the Government of Saskatchewan five years ago established a branch of its department of agriculture to foster among the farmers of the province the idea of co-operative marketing of their products. Natural conditions in the province have always been favorable to the development of balanced farming, but the stimulation given to the farmers in providing markets by means of co-operative organization in the sale of their products has been responsible for the development of many phases of farming which were hitherto, comparatively speaking, almost negligible. Dairying, sheep-raising and beef production have all grown to a point of considerable importance in a province which has earned its reputation for grain growing, and the end is not yet reached, though the yearly revenue from the farmer is gradually raising up to the latter.

One of the first steps undertaken by this branch of the Provincial Government was the organization of a co-operative system of live stock marketing, which would eliminate all needless middlemen, and secure for both the smaller and the larger producers the benefits of competitive bidding obtainable on central markets. A bulletin explaining these benefits to farmers was compiled in 1914, and sent to farmers in the province. As a result nine co-operative stock marketing associations were formed the following year.

During the first year thirty cars of stock which realized $42,034.00 were handled by these associations. By 1918 the number of associations had grown to fifty, which handled seven hundred and fifty cars of stock of a value of $1,432,000. This does not show the whole growth of the movement, however, for its success induced the Grain Grower's Association, the largest co-operative association in the province, to take up the handling of stock, and the considerable numbers handled by this association through its locals in all parts of the province are not included in the figures quoted.

Little or no capital is required in the formation of these societies. Though some of the associations at the beginning find it necessary to obtain a loan from the local bank to pay advances on stock, the practice is generally discontinued, as they become firmly established. A number of farmers in a district get together and form an association, which is incorporated under an act of the province, called the Agricultural Associations Act. Each organization is required to submit a statement annually to the government, showing the amount of business transacted during the previous calendar year. The statement serves to show the progress of the association, besides enabling the government to keep a check on transactions and protect the interests of the shareholders.

In the marketing of stock all the associations employ a somewhat similar method. A manager is appointed whose duty it is to look after all the details. He is usually remunerated at a set rate per hundred on the number of stock sold, or he may receive a commission on the proceeds of each sale. Certain shipping days are set every week or every month, and the members deliver their stock at the local stockyards on these days. Many associations in the province have regular weekly shipping days. Others ship only once every two weeks. Several associations ship more frequently at one season of the year than they do at other times.

When stock is delivered, the animals are first weighed. Hogs are usually graded according to weight and quality. Cattle and sheep are usually branded, so that each farmer's animals may be properly identified. The farmer receives a receipt certifying the number and kind of animals delivered and showing the grade or brand assigned to his stock. The animals are then loaded, shipped to market, and sold through one of the live stock commission firms. On receipt of the proceeds, the manager prepares individual accounts showing the amount realized on the sale of the animals of the various shippers and the expenses incurred, and mails a check for the net amount to each shipper.

Provision against loss in transit is made by many associations by the formation of insurance funds, shippers contributing a portion of the proceeds of the sale of their stock, generally about two or three cents a hundred pounds, for this purpose. Other associations prefer to insure their shipments with regular insurance companies.

How [illegible] the farmer [illegible] in this manner? To [illegible] the Saskatchewan Government [illegible] in 1917 [illegible] summary of [illegible] that on [illegible] average [illegible] saving of one cent a pound has been realized by farmers who have sold their stock through these co-operative associations. This is equal to about $200 a car. On this basis the saving effected last year would amount to $1[illegible].

The government renders assistance in the formation of these associations by providing each new association, free of cost, with a set of receipt and account forms, sufficient to record all its transactions for the first year. A bulletin explaining how the accounts should be kept, is also furnished. When the first consignment is made, an experienced man is sent by the government to assist the manager of the association in receiving, weighing, grading, loading, and forwarding the stock. This man will also accompany the manager to the central market to aid him in the disposal of his stock if desired. Through this assistance many associations have been encouraged to undertake the work and having once started it is very seldom that the undertaking is abandoned.

There is no doubt that these associations are a means of increasing the [illegible] of the farmer. Not only does he get higher prices for every shipment he makes, but this fact and the competition of the market also encourages him to increase his live stock holdings. The success of one association also encourages others to follow its example. As farming is the occupation of by far the largest [illegible] of the population of the province, it is not difficult to see how [illegible] the province as a whole benefits from this movement, which is [illegible] the farmer to obtain an increased revenue from his land.

Maxwell—a car improved each day

More miles per gallon
More miles on tires

THERE is nothing like doing one thing year after year because it always results in doing the thing well.

This is the underlying thought in every Maxwell.

It is why 300,000 Maxwells have been built on the original chassis plan. Each day this car grows better. Each day it is improved somewhere.

There never has been a radical change in design. There never has been a departure from the original idea.

Still there have been more than 1000 improvements made in this car since the first one was built.

Every time a chance was seen to make it better the improvement was made.

That's why a Maxwell runs on and on in almost endless mileage; why it grows better as it grows older; why it stands the moods of the careless driver.

No one has ever criticized the Maxwell on the grounds of reliability.

No one can criticize it on the grounds of good looks.

For there have been 24 recent improvements in its appearance.

McDONNEL ST. SEWER BY-LAW QUASHED BY JUSTICE LENNOX

Judgment Handed Down in Case That Was Tried Here Recently—Mr. G. W. Hatton Wins His Contention.

The Honorable Mr. Justice Lennox handed down judgment at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, quashing By-law No. 2125 of the Corporation of the city of Peterborough with costs against the [illegible] tion made before the Hon. Mr. Justice Logie to quash the same by-law.

Bylaw No. 2125 was passed on the second of December last to authorize the construction of a sewer on McDonnel street from Cambridge street west to the Monaghan Road under the Local Improvement Act and at the expense of the owners of the vacant property on both sides of the street. Mr. G. W. Hatton contended that in as much as there were no buildings on the property to be served by the sewer it was wholly unnecessary to be constructed on sanitary grounds, and that it was not necessar and desidable in the public interest within the meaning of the Local Improvement Act.

It appeared from the evidence that there was no unsanitary condition originated within the limits of the City of Peterborough dhere the sewer in question was to be constructed and it was contended that the City Council was not exercising to extraordinary powers bona fide in passing the bylaw in question to tax the property for an alleged improvement o which the owners would get no present benefit.

R. R. Hall and J. F. P. Birnie appeared for the Plaintiff and Daniel O'Connell and C. R. Widdifield appeared for the defendant.

The object that the City Council had in view when this bylaw was passed was to extend the sewer to the city boundary so that the communit of Mount St. Joseph would have been able to get sewer connections with the city system.

BOY'S TROUBLE COST MOTHER THOUSANDS

Suffered Since He Was Two Years Old—Gains 16 Pounds On Tanlac —Now Well and Strong.

"My nephew, James Hogan, who is fifteen years of age has gained sixteen pounds on Tanlac and is now a robust happy boy after thirteen years of awful suffering." said Miss Maggie Goldsmith, 280 Henry Ave., Memphis, Tenn. (Miss Goldsmith has been connected with the Joe L. Ullathorns Seed Co., of that city for twenty-seven years and is a stockholder and director in the company.

"Ever since James was two years old" continued Miss Goldsmith, "he has been afflicted with stomach trouble. Two or three hours after eating, especially the evening meal, he would begin to complain of severe pains in his stomach which would increase until he would go into convulsions. These spells would come on five or six times a month and last about thirty mintes and he would be unconscious for an hour. Some said he had heart trouble and others said it was vertigo. His condition kept him down to almost a skeleton and it was pitiful to see how he suffered.

"His mother took him to St. Louis and many other places for treatment and we spent thousands of dollars trying to find some relief for him but it was all to no avail.

"But all that awful load of anxiety and worry has been lifted. James is now a well and happy boy and is going to school, and a few bottles of Tanlac did it. He always complained of having to take other medicines but he seemed to like Tanlac and since taking five bottles he is sixteen pounds heavier and doesn't look like the same boy. He wants to eat all the time and can eat anything without it hurting him. It makes us rejoice to see James well and stout and enjoying life like other boys. We are not looking for notoriety but for the sake of suffering humanity, we are willing to give our unqualified endorsement for Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

TOMORROW AT MURRAY ST.

Mother's Day Will be Marked by Special Musical Program.

The people will be glad to hear that tomorrow evening at Murray St Baptist Church a full and re-enforced choir will present two of the numbers given at the musical on Tuesday evening last. These will be "Hear Oh Lord When I cry," by the Misses Eastwood, Scott, Herbison and Lynn, and the Messrs. Graham, Humpage, Ward and Huycke. Also the full choir with the tubular chimes will render the piece so thoroughly enjoyed at the concert and so favorably commented upon since. "Abide Wtih Me"

The pastor will preach at both services, the morning being the great annual service in honor of motherhood. Every mother is asked to have her children in the pew with her.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Suject Selected by Rev. A. G. Dover Tomorrow Night

This most interesting question will be answered at Bethany Tabernacle on Sunday night at 7 p.m. by the pastor. Rev. A. G. Doner, who declares that the title of Christian Science is a Satanic forery as the system is neither a Christian religion or a sensible.

He brands it as "Mental Assassination," "Intellectual Bankruptcy" and "Physical Peril" proving from its own text book its subtle and dangerous denial of the Holy Scriptures. While merciless in his attack, Mr Doner frankly acknowledges whatever there is of reality and truth about it or its kindred religions.

Next Sunday evening, May 18th, he will speak on "Russellism or Millennial Dawnism."

The subject tomorrow morning at 11 a.m. will be "Motherhood" A cordial invitation is extended to all.

The military authorities have taken possession of the Mansion House Dublin, the official residence of the lord mayor.

Thanks From Mr. And Mrs. Munden

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Munden take this opportunity of thanking the C. G. E. committee in charge of the concert in Victoria Hall in benefit of Mr. Munden, the G. W. V. A. band and all who contributed to the program; Heintzman & Co. for the loan of a splendid piano for accompaniments and to those who patronized the event and contributed in any way to the success of the occasion.

They also extend their hearty thanks for the generous donation from the G. W. V. A. as a result of their "get-together" evening in the home of veterans.

OLD ESTATE SOLD.

Lord Aberdeen Ceased to Be Large Land Owner.

Although Lord Aberdeen is disposing of the greater part of the Haddo estate in Scotland, he is retaining the house itself and some thirteen thousand acres round about it. There has been a growing disposition on the part of ancestral families to cut down their responsibilities as landed proprietors, and this has fitted in conveniently with the desire of the magnates of commerce to take up large domains. In some cases, for example, that of Lord Crewe, there have been ownership of two or three seats with many thousands of acres in different counties. In that case Lord Crewe has preferred to limit his charge. One of the difficulties of sale lies in the entail that is usually associated with titles. Lord Aberdeen has to go through certain formalities, and his eldest son and his other son have both to execute deeds of renunciation in order to enable the conveyance to be made. Just now under recent Acts of Parliament the best fields for cultivation are being selected unhesitatingly by county authorities to provide holdings for ex-soldiers. It is believed that a big change will come over rural England through this development, although on this subject, as on every other, opinions are different. Nobody grudges the fighter the best possible plot of land provided only there is reasonable chance that he will be able to make good upon it. Experienced agriculturalists, however, incline to the view that with the taxation burdens and other difficulties which attach to profitable cultivation in the old country, a good many men who are not practiced, but simply think they would like to live on the land, will find the business too hard for them. Much depends upon co-operation and on the incentive that in the course of years they may become owners. In Denmark the problem of small holdings has been solved on a free basis because the people stick to the land when once they have got it. There is no danger, although the land could be sold, that the small occupations will become merged through the rich buying of the poor. The scheme of the Government provides for numerous alternatives—all designed to encourage the revival of peasant and yeoman farming in England and Scotland. Ireland, under her scheme of land laws, has had the opportunity long ago and has taken it up to a large extent.

Cannibals of Australia.

Lowest in the human scale of all existing peoples are the "black fellows" of Australia. They are rather monkeylike, with protruding jaws, wear no clothes whatever, have no habitations and subsist from day to day on what they can pick up or kill.

In former days white settlers in the island continent hunted them down like wild beasts, regarding them as a kind of apes. Some excuse for this was found in the fact that they were hopelessly treacherous, chronic thieves and professed cannibals.

Prof. Karl Lumholtz, a Norwegian scientist, made a trip of exploration through their country, and it was a marvel that he got out alive. The natives whom he employed as helpers and baggage carriers, and whom he liberally paid with tobacco and pipes —they knew nothing of money— were constantly plotting to kill him.

One of them, named Mangoran, who looked more like a great ape than a man, and whose mouth extended almost from one ear to the other, would," says Dr. Lumholtz, "when he talked to me, grin widely and rub his belly, as if the sight of me made his mouth water."

He soon found that it was dangerous to allow one of the black fellows to walk behind him. To be liberal with them was a perilous mistake, for they attributed his generosity to fear, and went so far as to demand as gifts his weapons and the trousers he wore.

His chief protection came from their belief that he possessed supernatural power, and that he never slept. Also they were particularly afraid of his revolver, which they called the "baby of the gun," and which they thought could keep on shooting indefinitely.

Human flesh was the food they relished beyond anything else to eat. To get it, they were always ready to murder. For drinking cups they used skulls, usually.

To celebrate events that merit re[illegible]—such, for instance, as the capture of human prey for killing and eating—they hold a "corroboree," the principal feature of which is a dance with singing. Their bodies painted in ghastly fashion, they caper about a huge bonfire, waving spears and firebrands.

The boomerang is their chief weapon. But the kind that returns to the thrower is used as a plaything. The boomerangs employed in the chase do not return.

SPECIALIST SAID HE MUST OPERATE

She Took "FRUIT-A-TIVES" Instead, And Is Now in Perfect Health.

MME. F. GAREAU

153 Papineau Ave., Montreal.

"For three years, I suffered great pain in the lower part of my body, with swelling or bloating. I saw a specialist, who carefully examined me and gave me several tonics to take, which did not help me. Then he told me I must undergo an operation. This, I refused to permit.

I heard about 'Fruit-a-tives' and the wonderful results it was giving because this medicine is made from fruit juices, so decided to try it.

The first box gave great relief; and I continued the treatment, taking six boxes more. Now, my health is excellent — I am free of pain and swelling—and I give 'Fruit-a-tives' my warmest thanks".

British Orators.

Political observers say that the long-winded orator will get scant attention in this new House of Commons, and that the fifteen-minutes' speech-maker will be the man who will get the closest hearing. If this is so it is at least rather curious that this change should come at a time when the House has lost the compactest speaker in its annals. No one could say so much in so short a time and so clearly as Mr. Asquith; his speeches were models of luminous compression. It has been remarked of Mr. Lloyd George that as he has ascended the slippery pole he has become less and less compact. He is apt to repeat himself in order to gain emphasis, and does not always attain his end. Mr. Bonar Law is not long-winded, but his speeches are sometimes untidy. On the other side, it has always been the besetting sin of the Labor leaders to talk too long, and often to use too long words. So that in this case it seems likely that private members will have to educate their leaders.

Probably Astonished Pussy.

A cat has been in the habit of sleeping on a rubber mat under a dynamo in Cleveland's power house. Somebody removed the mat and the cat slept on an iron plate. It didn't seem to hurt the cat, but her fur became so charged with electricity that ever since it has stood stiff on end like the bristles of a hairbrush.

Evidently Hers.

Alice is interested in the sayings printed each day. A few days ago she read one that was signed with initials the same as her own. The small miss was excited and, bringing the paper so her mother might see also, she joyfully explained: "Mamma, here's a saying that must be mine, 'cause it's got my 'nitials 'broidered right on the paper."

Strange Plant.

A little plant called the adoxa or moschatel is often found in Welsh hedgerows, and is (writes a naturalist) the only species of its genera in that country. The leaves have this peculiarity that whilst they emit a delightful musk-like odor, when handled or crushed they become absolutely scentless.

Learn to Use Both Hands.

You have noticed perhaps that left-handed people seem to have an advantage over right-handed people in being able to use the right hand with greater ease than right-handed people can use their untrained hand. It is a good thing to practice writing and drawing with the left hand.

Seek Truth Even In Error.

There is no error so crooked but it hath in it some lines of truth, nor is any poison so deadly that it serveth not some wholesome use. Spurn not a seeming error, but dig below its surface for the truth.—Tupper.

Good In Discontent.

A lot is said about contentment, but discontent has its value, too. It is the mainspring of progress. A man must be discontented with what he has before he will try to better his circumstances.

World's Best Climber.

The world knows no better climber than the Rocky mountain sheep.—Chicago Daily Journal.

Big Dye Factories.

Japan has 80 dye factories, with an annual capacity in excess of 10,000,000 pounds.

And They Come High.

"It sounds funny," said the facetious feller, "but most deep thinkers have lofty thoughts."

Optimistic Thought.

I regret often that I have spoken, never that I have been silent.

Start Tomorrow and Keep It Up Every Morning

Get in the habit of drinking a glass of hot water before breakfast.

We're not here long, so let's make our stay agreeable. Let us live well eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, and look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet, how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of theinternal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestiblewaste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on thesubject of inside-bathing befor breakfast.

A. J. THEATRICAL

A scene from the astounding photo play by Mayor Rupert Hughes "THE UNPARDONABLE SIN," at the Grand Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Matinee daily.

GUS HILL KNEW HUMAN NATURE

WHEN HE MADE STAGE CHARACTERS OF JEFF AND MUTT

When Manager Gus Hill some years ago decided to transfer the famous cartoon characters Mutt and Jeff from the confines of the newspapers to the stage, there were many doubting folks who were ready to proclaim that these two noted personages would never be very funny outside the pages of the dailies, where their mirth-provoking propensities won both fame and fortune for their creator, Bud Fisher. That Mr. Hill's judgment has been so far-reaching as it has been effective has been demonstrated. Probably no production of the many he has offered since he entered the show business has been as successful as those in which these world-renowned pair have figured. Each season he has surrounded the two in some sort of musical play until today their advent is looked upon with as much importance as the coming of our daily food. And why not? Everyone likes to laugh and forget their troubles, especially just now when there is so much real tragedy in the world.

This year the Long and Short of it as this twain of hilarity mongers has been captioned, will have the leading roles in a play with the locale laid in the Golden West. If their adventures of the past have made us sit up and shriek with glee and tickled our ribs until we were prone to admit that our sides ached and were sore, the prediction is made that they are bound this time to become so injured that unless we are careful the treatment of a skilled surgeon must needs become essential. Their excuse for cutting up all kinds of capers, tomfoolery and didoes that would compel the silent sphinx to get up and yell, adventures that would make the boldest and most heroic savior of the nation stop and ponder, is called "Mutt and Jeff in the Woolly West."

The captain of a German U-boat which sank several hospital ships arrived from Spain yesterday and was placed in the Towers, London.

THE UNPARDONABLE SIN" SURE TO DRAW CROWDS AT GRAND

Harry Garson's extraordinary screen production, "The Unpardonable Sin," starring Blanche Sweet under the personal direction of Marshall Neilan, begins an engagement at the Grand Theatre Thursday and will continue there for three days, the final exhibition being given Saturday. The picture will be projected twice daily, matinee presentations beginning at 2:30 o'clock and the evening shows at 8:15.

"The Unpardonable Sin" will unquestionably attract to the Grand theatre a class of patrons which have heretofore been inclined to scoff at the moving picture as a means of telling a dramatic story. Reviews of the picture which have been printed in other cities emphasise the fact that here is one of the few photoplays ever produced that "starts out to do something and does it." One situation follows another in as logical a manner as was ever accomplished on the speaking stage where the human voice was available as an agency to tell those out in front just what might reasonably be expected and the whole action moves without break or interruption to its final and most powerful climax.

PRIZE PICTURE AT GRAND NEXT WEEK

AND ALL-STAR VAUDEVILLE ON MONDAY, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY

Three souls in the iron grip of modern circumstance—a simple, devoted old woman; a man who has gained worldly eminence, despite "the skeleton in the closet"; and a girl handicapped by adverse circumstances—each telling the innermost secret of a bitter experience, and eventually finding a way to face life with renewed courage. Here is chrystallized the big emotional spirit of "Common Clay," A. H. Woods' screen presentation of the Harvard prize play by Cleves Kinkead, and featuring Fannie Ward. And that it is a play with a real punch is attested by the fact that it ran for a solid year on the New York stage and was played for three years following by six companies in every city of the United States and Canada, during which time it is estimated that more than five million persons witnessed it.

"Common Clay" touches upon one of the greatest problems of the big cities—the girl, handicapped by poverty, who is struggling along without proper safeguards. It has been widely discussed in the newspapers by social welfare and civic organizations, and made the text of discourses from many pulpits. This is so because "Common Clay" has to do with stark realities that cannot be overlooked or lightly brushed aside. It deals with souls in travail and good endeavor combatting the evil.

Miss Ward, in this seven-reel Pathe special, has done some of the most appealingly emotional work in her entire career on the stage, and the screen.

The special vaudeville bill will include the famous Burley Bros., comedy acrobats; Harrison and Jarvis, in shooting the chutes, and the Singing Xylophonist, Wendell Hall. The scale of prices that has proved so popular to the patrons will remain the same for this augmented program—matinees 10c and 15c, evenings 15c and 25c. Reserve your seats in advance for the evening performances. Follow the crowd to this popular house of amusement and see a show that can't be duplicated anywhere at this scale of prices.

This bill will be presented on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week.

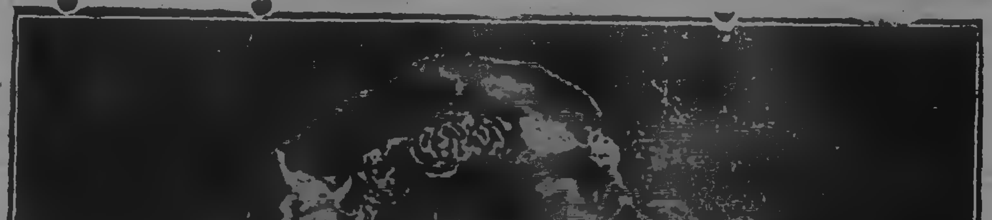
Daily Thought.

Chance is a word void of sense; nothing can exist without a cause.—Voltaire.



FANNIE WARD in the great photo play, "COMMON CLAY," at the Grand in conjunction with an all-star vaudeville bill, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Matinee daily.

First Wedding Veil.

The first wedding veil was called the "flammeum." It was a large yellow veil that completely covered the Greek and Roman brides during the marriage ceremony. The bridal wreath of orange blossoms, which is the conventional thing today, was introduced into Europe by the Crusaders, and is a Christian substitute for the gilt coronet worn by the Jewish brides.

Copper of the Ancients.

Metallurgists who have examined specimens of the so-called hardened copper of the ancients have found not pure copper, but usually an alloy, either natural—that is, the two metals existed in one ore so that in reduction an alloy was formed—or an artificial alloy made by melting the two ores together, the one copper, the other zinc.

Law of Progress.

Let us then be of good cheer. From the great law of progress we may derive at once our duties and our encouragements. Humanity has ever advanced; thwarted sometimes by obstacles which have caused it for a time—a moment only; in the immensity of ages—to deviate from its true lines, or seem to retreat; but still ever onward.—Charles Sumner.

You Win!

The man who is riding sixty miles per hour in a big machine is no happier than the man who is riding thirty miles per hour in a flivver, because the man in the flivver thinks he is going sixty.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

But It's Always There.

Every man has embedded somewhere in his nature an instinct to dodge. And in many cases it remains dormant until he comes a taxpayer.

Many Times.

Haven't you observed that most of the world's mistakes are due to the circumstances that it refrains from doing things as you would have them done?—Houston Post.

GIANTS AND MIDGETS WHO HAVE FIGURED IN RING

Charles Freeman of Michigan Was Bigger Man Than Jess Willard and Was a Marvel of Endurance.

Speaking of Willard's size and of what his chances are to win the world's championship was Charles Freeman, who made big Jess look small in comparison.

Charles Freeman was the greatest man in point of size that ever figured in the ring. He was born in Michigan in January, 1820. He was a circus performer and was quite famous as a two-horse rider and weight lifter. He was known as the "American Giant," though sometimes called the "American Atlas," on account of his great strength. Notwithstanding his great height and weight he was a wonderfully active and nimble man. He could run [illegible] handsprings and somersaults by the dozen and ride horses like a monkey.

When Ben Caunt, the champion of England, visited this country in 1842 he became acquainted with Freeman through two challenges issued on behalf of the "giant." Caunt, possessing a showman's instinct and possibly a little fear of the tremendous American, engaged Freeman to go to England instead of fighting him. At the time Freeman knew but little of the name of fisticuffs. So Caunt instructed him.

Arriving in England, Freeman challenged them all—that is, all except Caunt, for it was announced that they were "sworn friends and partners," and would not meet as antagonists. The huge and formidable appearance of the American caused panic among the big men of that time. None of them cared to take a chance with him until William Perry, "the Tipton Slasher" (afterwards champion of England) came forth in answer to the challenge.

The "Tipton Slasher" was a smaller man than Dempsey. He was slightly above six feet in height, but weighed hardly 190 pounds. Dempsey will be six inches shorter than Willard and outweighed about fifty pounds when they enter the ring. The "Slasher" was ten inches shorter than his opponent, and was outweighed by 125 pounds.

The fight was held on December 6, 1842, half way ebtween Tipton and London. It was a bare-knuckle affair (London prize ring rules) and for a purse of $500. Five hundred dollars! How times have changed!

This match is noticeable as being the first in which contestants were examined by a physician before the call of—"time."

Despite the tremendous handicap of size and strength the "Tipton Slasher" manged to stick 109 rounds. The fog stopped the contest on the first day after seventy rounds had been fought, and the men met twelve days later and battled thirty-nine more, the "Slasher" being disqualified in the 109th round for deliberately throwing himself on the ground to avoid a blow.

Freeman was the first to claim the championship of the world, and there were none who dared dispute him. He died two years later, however, in the Winchester hospital, October 18, 1845, of tuberculosis, the result of dissipation.

SCHEMER FAILS IN ATTEMPT TO "FIX" AN IRISH JOCKEY

Story of "Macushla," the Play Presented at Grand Last Night Centres Round a Horse Race in the Emerald Isle.

"Macushla" as presented by the Boyle Amusement Co., and featuring Barry McCormack at the Grand last night is an Irish comedy drama of great merit. It is a source of great satisfaction to an Irishman to listen to a play of this kind and to notice that the old time slap jack comedy has been left out. Time was when an Irish character in a play was always cast as a gross caricature of the race, but happily this is all of the past.

"Macushla" is the name of a steeplechasing mare in the stable of Sir Brian Fitzgerald, a young Irishman who had but recently succeeded to the title and an impoverished estate, and around this horse the play is built up. The owner has been training the horse under cover and has her entered in the Grand National and in order to try to make enough money to re-build his fallen fortunes has wagered his all on the outcome of the race.

A scheming neighbor, Warren Fairchild, first tries to purchase the mare and failing this attempts to bribe Sir Brian's stableman to "dope" her. In this he is caught by the owner and his attempt is frustrated. Sir Brian becomes suspicious of his jockey and himself rides Macushla to victory.

Two or three love stories are interwoven in the plot and are quite interesting, that of Sir Brian and Patricia Boyer, or "Pat" as she is familiarly called, culminating in a betrothal just before the final curtain.

Mr. McCormack sang several old Irish songs which were well received by the audience, he best, possibly being entitled "[illegible]." His portrayal of the part of [illegible] Fitzgerald displayed his histrionic ability to good advantage.

The supporting company is wonderfully well balanced and it would be rather hard to particularize on the playing of any other individual; they were all so good.

All in all "Macushla" is one of the best and brightest plays seen in some time and those who hadn't the opportunity of seeing it missed a treat.

J. S. COON MADE HIGHEST SCORE

SUCCESSFUL SHOOT HELD YESTERDAY BY LOCAL GUN CLUB.

The Peterborough Gun Club held a very successful shoot at their traps last evening and, although the windy weather was not good for shooting some very nice scores were made.

Four new members from Lakefield took part in the sport, namely, Messrs Strickland, Tate, Tanner and Hendron and, for their first attempt over the traps they did some very nice shooting.

Stan Coon and Clare Gutterson were hitting the clay birds in good shape for the home talent and the competition for the High Gun Cup promises to be closer this year.

Next Friday evening the Club meets again and the handicaps will be posted.

Below are the scores:

Sporting Gossip

Manager Barrow of the Red Sox decided to be lenient with Babe Ruth. So far as a bunch of opposing batsmen are concerned, his boss could suspend Babe for the remainder of the season and they wouldn't care.

Some one sent the New York American League club office a box of lobsters. Secretary Harry Sparrow thought it was an infernal machine. They tried to figure out who it could be for, Col. Huston or Col. Ruppert. A scribe figured it must be for Col. Ruppert because he failed to put a kick in the beer sent the writers at a recent banquet.

Some of the White Sox, who have been losing, fear they will go broke if the weather man doesn't put on ball games instead of forcing indoor pastimes.

If Earl Keiser makes good on the White Sox, Kid Gleason may have an overseas battery in a game before long—Keiser and Jenkins. The soldier ball players may warm up in the exhibition game at Bloomington.

Harry Heilman, first baseman of the Tigers, is running Joe Jackson a race for batting honors, according to the latest averages. Harry, who is in Chicago with Ty Cobb and other Detroit players, swatted .478 in 23 times at bat; Jackson lambasted the leather for .533 in 30 trips to the home pan.

Browning's High Ideals.

Probably the writer who most frequently refused money was Robert Browning the poet. During the last 25 years of his life editors offered large sums for a short poem from his pen. But Browning said "No." He told his friends when they pointed out the unwisdom of this course that he was determined not to thrust his poems down the throats of the people; that if they wanted to read them they could buy his books.

Nell Gwynne Custom.

The custom of placing an orange on a plate near the door of Savoy chapel, London, the Sunday after Christmas is probably a survival of the custom which prevailed at this chapel after the death of Nell Gwynne. In those days it was usual, in memory of the orange-girl, who was notably large-hearted and a kindly giver of alms, to place an orange on the plate whenever alms were distributed.

Island Scene of Fierce Fighting.

The Isle of Wight, indeed, has had a checkered history as far as wars are concerned. Romans, Jutes, Saxons, Danes all descended upon it in their time, and from the fourteenth to the sixteenth centuries the islanders lived under the almost continuous threat of invasion by the French, who, in 1377, burnt Yarmouth, and so devastated Newport that it "lay uninhabited for two years."

Didn't Lose Any Time.

Ruth was left to watch baby brother in his bed while mother prepared dinner. In a few minutes followed a thump and then a wail. Running upstairs mother said, "I thought I left you to take care of brother?" "Well, mother, I did call you the very minute he hit the floor," was the comforting response.

Puzzle for the Jury.

Here is a summing up which is hard to beat for succinctness: "Gentlemen of the jury: In this case the counsel on both sides are unintelligible, the witnesses incredible, and the plaintiffs and defendants are both such bad characters that to me it is a matter of indifference how you give your verdict."

Minneboohoo.

Governor Saunders of Nebraska once spoke at Lincoln of a little settlement on a stream called Weeping Water. Lincoln chuckled: "Well, they say that Minnehaha means laughing water, so Minneboohoo must be Indian for weeping water."

To Whiten Wax.

The wax should be boiled in water, spread out into thin layers and then exposed to the light and air. Repeat this process until all the color is gone, and the wax will remain pure and white.

Law of Life.

A thought, good or evil; an act, in time a habit, so runs life's law; what you live in your thought world, that, sooner or later, you will find objectified in your life.—Ralph Waldo Trine.

Long Day and Night.

The north pole has six months day and six months night, the sun apparently traveling in a circle around it from the time it appears in March until it disappears in September.

Spasmodic Sermon.

The world may owe every man a living, but some fellows are convinced that the world has been holding out back pay on 'em for a long time.

"It may seem a little strange, said the facetious feller, "but ice is a lot smoother before it is shaved."

That inward eye, which is the bliss of solitude.—Wordsworth.

Six players who engaged in every game in the American League last year have gone through with a clean record this season. One of these, Everett Scott, of the Red Sox, has not missed a single contest in the last 392 played by the Red Sox.

ST. ANDREW'S REVERES THE MEMORY OF MRS. NICHOLLS

Benefactions to City and Various Churches Were Princely—List of Her Good Deeds—Rev. James Rollins Expected Home May 25

In looking back over the history of St. Andrew's Church, which celebrates its 86th anniversary Sunday, one sees the names of a number of women who by their good deeds have been an integral part of the church's life. Out of the goodly company there was one who was worthy to stand as a representative of the chaste and bountiful Christian womanhood of our church Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls. A tree is known by its fruits, and a church is known by the beautiful lives that have been developed within its fold. St. Andrew's honors itself in honoring the memory of Mrs. Nicholls. The people are gratful for her good example and for her bountiful benefaction.

In addition to her gifts to St. Andrew's Church, her benefactions, made in a public way, to the town and to the city exceed all others from which the municipality has in any way accrued. She gave large gifts to the Presbyterian churches of the city, and further pave liberally by bequests in her will to all the Protestant churches in Peterborough. She gave a very substantial sum to the building fund of the local Young Men's Christian Association. Her noblest benefaction was the gift of the magnificent Nicholls' Hospital, furnishing the means for erection and equipment of the building and also an endowment fund of $85,000.00. To this endownment her trustees, after her death, materially added. To the town and city her gifts in the manner of grants to charitable, religious and educational institutions amounted to over $176,000.000.

Her gifts of park lands and sums of money set aside for upkeep were very large in amount, and in addition she game $35,000.00 to Presbyterian missions, $40,000.00 to the aged ministers' fund, and $42,000.00 to Presbyterian colleges. Her death took place on May 16, 1890, nineteen years ago.

St. Andrew's Absent Pastor.

It is expected that the Rev. James Rollins, chaplain of the 21st Battalion, will sail for Canada this week and that he will occupy his pulpit on May 25th. It is almost three years since Capt. Rollins went overseas on military service. Before leaving he offered his resignation to the congregation but it was refused. Contrary to the practice of some of the ministers who have become chaplains, he arranged with his congregation that the minister in charge during his absence should have the free use of the manse and the full salary paid by the congregation. When Chaplain Rollins left Canada he occupied the position of quarter master of the 93rd Battalion. It is an unusual thing for a minister to hold such a place, but Capt. Rollins is a man with unusual gifts for an executive office and for the administration of business.

After doing excellent work in this office he was offered and accepted a transfer of the chaplain's service, and in August, 1917, became chaplain to a number of Forestry Battalions at Smith's Lawn, Sunningdale, England. When Rev. John Neil, D.D., moderator of the general assembly in Canada, was on an official visit to the Presbyterians in the army, Capt. Rollins was selected to accompany him to the various camps as his A.D.C.

In July of last year Capt. Rollins at last received the opportunity for which he so much longed and accepted the chaplaincy of the 27th Battalion for active service at the front. After that, until the armistice was signed, he shared the hardships of the soldiers, encountered danger in several engagements and won the sympathy and confidence of his men.

Capt. Rollins, by his prompt and faithful service in the army, deserves well of his fellow citizens in Peterborough and will receive a rousing welcome from St. Andrew's Church.

Next Sunday will be the third anniversary service in the absence of Mr. Rollins.

PETROGRAD TO BE SCENE OF ATTACK

DESPATCH SAYS THAT ALLIED FORCE WILL MOVE AGAINST IT.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Stockholm, May 12.—The Entente forces are preparing military operations, with Helsingsfors as a base for an attack upon Petrograd, according to a Helsingsfors despatch to the "Aftontidengen." Fifty thousand troops are expected to take part in the operation according to a despatch which says French cruisers are now lying in the Gulf of Finland off Helsingsfors. Despatches last week reported that the Finnish Red Guards and Finnish White Guards were fighting for the possession of Petrograd.

British Triumph Over the Afghans

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, May 12.—News from Afghanistan where the tribesmen have been attacking the British positions on the Indian front'er was scanty, but satisfactory over the week-end The British drove the Alghans from Ashraslakhel on Friday, while airplanes crossed the frontier and bombed enemy positions at Lotdatta with good results.

Koreans Now Ask For Independence

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 12.—A petition from the Korean people and nation asking for liberation from Japan was submitted to the Peace Conerence by representatives of Korea. The uetition also asks or the recognition of Korea as an independent state and for the nullification of treaty of August 1910.

ADVERSE WINDS STOP BIG FLIGHT

BRITISH AIRMEN GIVE UP IDEA OF MAKING START TODAY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

St. John's, Nfld., May 12.—With adverse winds reported the whole way across the Atlantic the British airmen here abandoned the idea of flying today. The general belief now is that they are purposely waiting for the full moon on Wednesday. Messages from Trepassey say the American airmen will test the'r new motors this afternoon and if satisfactory may fly immediately but weather experts here think the conditions are unpromising for them also.

GERMAN CABINET PREPARE COUNTER PEACE PROPOSALS

Answer to the Allies Will Likely Be Made Public Today—Ebert Government is Playing For the Favor of the Workingmen and Socialists

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, May 12.—The Associated Press this morning issued the following:

The Peace Conference Leaders have renewed their effort to reach an understanding on the Italian question, in view of the imminence of the arrival of the Austrian peace delegates in France. Consultations were begun today between Foreign Minister Sonnino of Italy and Col. House of the American delegation. Meanwhile attempts are being made by the German delegation at Versailles to draw representatives of the Allied and Associated Governments into oral discussions of the phases of the peace treaty presented to the Germans last Wednesday. The French opinion as reflected in the newspapers regards one of the notes sent to Premier Clemenceau as president of the Peace Conference by Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau, head of the German mission, as distinctly of propagandist order. This is the note advancing the counter project as to international labor legislation, which, the French argue, is intended to convince the socialist and laboring classes of the Allied countries in general that the present German government is working in their favor.

The German cabinet council, under the chairmanship of President Ebert, took up yesterday the question of counter proposals to the peace terms to be made by the German delegation at Versailles, and committees from the German National Assembly met during the day and discussed the terms of peace. The national assembly will meet in Berlin today, and it is expected that Chancellor Scheidemann will give some idea of the German reply to the Allies.

SPECIAL COUNCIL MEETING TO DISCUSS LABOR STRIKE

Men Will Present Data in Support of Their Contention That $3.60 a Day For Work Controlled by Weather Conditions is Not Too Much on Which to Support Family.

There is practically no change in the strike situation today.

The city engineer is not worrying himself about the Romaine street sewer work. As for the King street drainage system, the men did not work this morning ow'ng to inclement weather. They stuck to their job all day Saturday, every man sustaining a thoroughly wet jacket.

To Meet Council.

His Worship the Mayor has promised labor representatives to call a special meeting of the City Council this week to discuss the situation with them in open council. It is safe to say that there will be a full house, as the labor men and trades and labor council have arranged to parade to the city hall in a body on that evening, when they will submit data as to just how far the wages demanded will go in this city of high prices toward keeping a workingman's family the year round. One of the men's claims will be that $3.60 a day averages up none too large for twelve months' maintenance, when inclemen summer weather losses and enforced winter idleness are taken into account. Out-door wage earners they will point out are at $3.60 the day's actual a considerably handicapped in comparison with salar'ed men drawing even less money per week the year round.

CODD, EX-NAVAL MAN, GETS TWO MONTHS' JAIL WITH HARD LABOR

Beat His Board Bill—Altered Discharge Papers—Wrongfully Sported Military Service Button.

R. H. Codd, the Toronto-born ex-naval man, remanded by Police Magistrate Dumble last week on three charges—beating his board bill, forging his discharge papers by making false alterations, and wrongfully wearing a military service button—came up again this morning for another hearing.

The prisoner had previously pleaded guilty to all three charges, and also of having stolen the military button in Lindsay.

Said He Was Cartoonist.

Mr. R. P. Gollop, proprietor of the Grand Hotel, testified that the accused owed him $38.50 for 14 days' board.

He represented himself as a cartoonist about to start business in Peterborough. When asked for payment of his bill, prisoner skipped out with his belongings on the 2:30 G. T. R. train the same day. The hotel rate is $2.75 a day. Prisoner registered as Burns. On this charge the accused was fined $40, or one month in jail with hard labor in default of payment.

Thirty Days for Forgery.

On the charge of forgery Codd was sentenced to thirty days in jail with hard labor, without the option of a fine.

Five Dollars or Thirty Days.

For illegally wearing a military service button prisoner was fined $5 or thirty days in jail with hard labor in default of payment.

County Crown Attorney Hatton pointed out to his Worship that the button itself had printed thereon a maximum penalty of $500 for anyone wrongfully wearing it. The latter replied that a fine of 500 cents was sufficient.

Two Months on thet Hill.

Prisoner had no means with which to pay his fines, and consequently goes up on the hill for two months. The first and third sentences are to run concurrently; the second month stands alone.

BURNED TO DEATH AT BOBCAYGEON

FOUR-YEAR-OLD GIRL PLAYED WITH MATCHES—CLOTHES CAUGHT.

The funeral of little Ellen, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Hill, of Bobcaygeon, the victim of accidental death by fire Friday afternoon, took place Saturday.

This little victim of a horrible fatality secured a few matches, which she succeeded in lighting and her clothes took fire.

According to the Lindsay Warder, the mother went out to a neighbor's, a hundred yards away and told Ellen to remain in the house, that she would be back in a few minutes. While absent the little girl climbed up on a chair and reached up for the matches. Her clothes caught fire, and were burned off, her ha'r also being burned completely off.

At was in this pitiable condition that the little one was found by her mother. Dr. Thorne was summoned but ere his arrival death had occurred. He claimed that the child had suffered very little pain.

Mr. Cecil Hill, father of the deceased child, was a soldier in the army, and recently returned from overseas. At the time of the accident he was working for the Carew Lumber Co., in Harvey township, at Gold and Gull Lakes, some 25 miles distant.

POISONED DOG; FINED $20.00

S JUDGEMENT RENDERED BY POLICE MAGISTRATE DUMBLE THIS MORNING.

Magistrate Dumble, this morning, gave judgment in the dog poisoning case adjourned from last week. A married couple had charged a neighbor—a woman—with having set poison within reach of their pet spaniel day, thereby causing the animal's death from strychnine. His Worship had foreshadowed his pending verdict when he declared that it was contrary to the law to set poison for either animals or birds owned by other people.

This morning he imposed a fine of $20, half of which is to be paid to complainants, and 15 days imprisonment in default of payment of fine

In rendering judgment His Worship quoted the act covering the offence and adjudged that defendant put out poison, by her own admission to kill cats, which he said might or might not have killed a newly hatched chicken valued at 10 cents, and her neighbor's dog got the poison resulting in his death and consequent sorrow and distress of a family of young children at the loss of their pet.

MILITARY HONORS FOR EDITH CAVELL

REMAINS OF HEROIC NURSE TO BE BURIED IN ENGLAND.

Brussels, May 12.—The removal of the remains of Nurse Edith Cavell for interment in England takes place Tuesday, May 13. The body was exhumed at Brussels on March 17, placed in a double coffin of zinc and oak and conveyed to Tir National. The body was found clothed in a black dress under a blue cloak. A black hat was also discoverd in the coffin. The body was well preserved and the features were perfectly recognisable.

On Tuesday the coffin will be placed on a gun carriage drawn by six black horses, which will convey it to the Gare du Nord. Military honors will be rendered at he Tir National and at the station. The long route for the cortege has been arranged in order to enable the public to pay its last respects. The gun carriage will be preceded and followed by British troops with bands. The Belgian army will also be represented.

After a funeral service to be conducted in the station hall by Rev. H. Gahan, the British chaplain who was with Nurse Cavell the night before her execution, the coffin will be entrained for Ostend, where it will be placed aboard a British warship for Dover, where the Admiralty will hand it over to a committee charged with organizing the funeral in England.

The coffin will be conveyed thence to London, where it will be received by an honorary military escort, placed on a gun carriage covered with the Union Jack and conveyed to Westminster Abbey, where the funeral will take place. Afterwards the procession will reform and march through the city to the Liverpool street station, from where the corpse will be taken to Norwich for burial.

It is understood the exhumation reveals that the nurse's death was instantaneous. She was struck by four bullets, two of which entered the right side and two the left, one of the latter piercing her heart.

Four More Heroes Reach Home Today

Four more returned soldiers—battery men—reached the Grand Trunk Station this morning.

The civic officials had received notification that 14 men were coming and had reception representation at the station. It may just be possible that the one had been added to the 4 in the telegram, by mistake.

STRIKE COULD NOT PREVENT SAILING OF THE OLYMPIC

Big Liner Left Southampton Saturday, Clearing Under Own Steam, With Nearly Six Thousand Canadian Troops and Dependents Aboard

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, May 12.—"Olympic" sailed from Southampton on Saturday evening with 5,600 Canadian soldiers on board. Gen. Burstall, commander of the departing second division, arrived early and was long busy bidding every one a cheery good-by.

Brig. Gen. Tremblay was in command of the troops on the ship, among them was the famous 22nd, the French Canadian, 24th, 25th, 26th, 29th battalions, the 5th engineers, 5th field ambulance and other drafts.

The Scandinavian sailed on Saturday from Liverpool for Quebec with various troops from Buxton, Bramshott and London with their dependents, 416 wives and 150 children.

Circumstances tended to give the Olympic quite a dramatic departure for in addition to the civic farewell by the Lord Mayor and a great crowd of cheering people in the gathering twilight, the huge steamer had to clear without the aid of tugs on account of the strike of their crews which had led to the expectation that the liner might not sail. The captain declared boldly that no question of tugs was going to prevent his getting the Canadian boys home and at 8 o'clock the Olympic cleared under her own steam and started on her voyage amid a scene of the greatest enthusiasm.

The Olympic carries 227 officers, 5290 of other ranks and 11 dependents. She will dock at Halifax on or about May 15.

IDEAL WORKING CONDITIONS

The employes of Richard Hall & Son have no organisation and none is required. The firm, too, acts independent of all its competitors in dealing with the members of its staff. The conditions that prevail in that establishment as between the two paries interested are certainly ideal. If such relations were universal, labor unions and associations of capitalists would be entirely uncalled for.

Without even a suggestion, without even a hint of dissatisfaction among their employes as to the hours of work, the firm have lopped off half an hour from the time the store is to be kept open, taking this generous course even though in the innovation they stand alone. But they have already been rewarded in a measure by the appreciation of those who have been benefited by the reduction in working hours. If the employers have been generous, one of the most pleasing features of the affair is that the members of the staff have proved equally so.

In this issue of The Review appears a full page advertisement which has been inserted by the employes of the mercantile establishment in question. The statement which it contains is one of the best examples of literary cultured taste that could be cited. The wording of the acknowledgemnt is perfect in every detail and comment upon it would be entirely unwarranted. It speaks for itself, and no improvements, additions or eliminations are required. In graceful language the employes express their appreciation.

"Happy is is the man who has found his work," says the Sage of Chelsea. The clerks in Messrs' Hall store appear to be in this category. They are not only better and more loyal workers in the interests of the firm, but their enviable situation beyond all question makes of them better citizens.

EXPECTS TROUBLE EVEN IN HEAVEN

UNLESS SOME OF THE PEOPLE ON EARTH MODIFY VIEWS.

Rev. Dr. Dyde, principal of the Theological Department of Queen's, preached the anniversary sermons at St. Andrew's yesterday and was greeted by large congregations at both services. In the evening the church was filled and the doctor preached an eloquent sermon from a clause in the fifty-first verse of the ninth chapter of St. Luke, "He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem."

Dr. Dyde believes in that broad minded religion that is ready to concede that others than those of a particular sect have a chance to reach heaven. He believes there are people on earth who will make trouble in the celestial regions when they get there. These are the ones who hold the Gentile view of grace.

"How in the name of heaven," asked the preacher, "are peoples to get along together in heaven if they cannot do so on earth?"

The entire discourse was filled with practical Christian counsel, and the doctor's plea for toleration was especially significant as coming from the head of a leading theological institution.

The choir under the leadership of Mr. H. C. Treneer rendered an excellent musical program, one of the features of which was Miss Helen McLaren's rendition of "More Love to Thee." The church was beautifully decorated with flowers and with the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes. Altogether St. Andrew's congregation yesterday celebrated one of the most successful and encouraging anniversaries in the long and honorable history of the church.

EBERT DENOUNCES TREATY OF PEACE

SAYS IT IS MONSTROUS DOCUMENT DESIGNED TO ANNIHILATE GERMANS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, May 12.—"Germany has seized and unfurled a new banner on which are inscribed President Wilson's fourteen points, which the President apparently has deserted," said Friedrich Ebert, German president, in a statement to the Associated Press.

President Ebert called the peace treaty a "monstrous document." He declared that history holds no precedent for such determination to annihilate completely the vanquished peoples.

To Refer German Notes to Experts

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 12.—The Council of Four at its meeting today decided to refer the German notes on labor and war prisoners to experts for consideration, instead of answering them at once, as it did with the first two communications from the German delegation.

COUNCIL TAKES UP GERMANY'S NOTES

HUN MINISTER HAS SENT TWO PROPOSITIONS TO PEACE CONFERENCE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 12.—The Council of Four decided yesterday upon the terms of the reply to be made to the two notes sent to President Clemenceau of the Peace Conference on Saturday evening by Von Brockdorff Rantzau. The first of these notes asked that there be reciprocity policy adopted as to the repatriation of prisoners and requested that the details of transfer be placed in the hands of a commission.

In his second note, the head of the German peace delegation advances a counter project as to the international labor legislation. According to he newspapers the basis of the second note is a labor charter inspired by the conferences of Leeds and Berne and they argue that the purpose is to create among the Socialists an opinion favorable to Germany by putting in direct collaboration the working classes and the present Government of that country.

HENRY FORD'S CASE COMES UP TODAY

SUING CHICAGO TRIBUNE FOR MILLION DOLLARS ON LIBEL CHARGE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Mount Clemens, Mich., May 12.—One of the most noteworthy libel suits in the history of American jurisprudence, that of Henry Ford versus the Chicago Daily Tribune, for $1,000,000 was scheduled to open before circuit Judge James G. Tucker here at 9 o'clock this morning. With most of the preliminary battles already fought and decided in Illinois and Detroit courts, it is anticipated the case will come to trial with little delay.

The suit has already been in the courts for two and a half years. Broadly, the defence is that the alleged libelous statements of which Mr. Ford complains were printed as an incident of Tribune's fight for preparedness to which it devoted hundreds of columns and that Mr. Ford, by reason of his wealth and arguments against preparedness was in fact a public character and as such a proper person for comment.

THROW STONES BREAK LAMPS

BOYS FINED FOR MAKING STREET LIGHTS TARGETS FOR STONES.

Two boys of working age pleaded guilty in Police Court this morning to having broken with stones an electric light lamp on Lock street. They were charged jointly and fined jointly $10 and $3.10 costs, $13.10 between them.

Still Another.

Another lad pleaded guilty to having made an electric light lamp in Ashburnham the target for stones and breaking same. He suffered a fine of $8.00, covering costs.

These fines must be paid within five days, or fifteen days' imprisonment for each of the three lads will be imposed.

A Warning.

Boys are warned by his Worship that this pernicious practice must cease. Electric street lamps are public property, maintained for public comfort and convenience. He made examples of these boys, and expressed his intention of severely punishing all similar offenders who may come before him in future.

EX-POLICEMAN FINED

Farmer Convicted of Selling Liquor—Bottles Under Floor

Deseronto, May 12. — Walter Thompson, farmer, at one time on the Toronto Police Force, was convicted before Police Magistrate Bedford at Deseronto and fined $200 and costs for selling liquor. Four bottles were found concealed under the floor in his house at Milltown by Chief Portland of Deseronto.

THE VETERANS' DRIVE.

THE MEMBERS of the G. W. V. A. will one week from today begin a campaign, the object of which is to raise $15,000 to complete the hall which they have remodeled from the old Baptist Church building on Murray street. The Veterans received a grant of $10,000 from the City Council, all that they asked for, but in these days of high prices for labor and building material, such a sum does not go very far in purchasing a site and structure, especially when the latter has to be practically rebuilt. That the grant referred to was wisely expended, no one doubts for a moment. The outlay was confided to practical business men. The old building was bought on advantageous terms. Every dollar expended on the work of reconstruction was paid to Veterans, as every trade, profession and occupation of whatever nature is represented in the membership. The problem of finding work for the returned soldiers has to that extent at least been solved. The $10,000 has been returned by legitimate avenues to the regular channels of finance. The city has really lost nothing, and many a worthy family in Peterborough has been benefited by this civic generosity, which was authorised by legislative enactment.

The Veterans of Peterborough have never appealed in vain to the citizens for any measure of material aid. They will not do so in this instance. The war is over, but, thought the militant ardor of the laity may have in a measure cooled, they are by no means indifferent nor are they disposed to forget the services of the heroes who have survived the war. The $15,000 that it is now sought to raise will be forthcoming. It is all a question of getting the case clearly before the public.

At Friday night's meeting of the Board of Trade, which was attended by over one hundred citizens who represented every walk of life in Peterborough, Major Layfield brought up this matter and asked for the co-operation of the organization. The applause, hearty and unanimous as it was, that greeted the major's remarks, was the most satisfactory answer that could be given. There will be a big drive undertaken next week and behind the movement and in the organized workers will be found men who in the past have brought success to such efforts.

Major Layfield said that the new hall, when completed, would be a credit to the city. He added that as much could be said of the men who would occupy it. In this claim, too, he has the public sentiment with him.

Peterborough veterans have been recruited from the best class of citizenship. Their military experience has developed them into more loyal and devoted subjects of the Empire than ever. They were all through the dark days of the war this city's only hope for safety one link in the chain of defence that stood between the Empire and annihilation. They are just as reliable now that they are wearing civilian clothes again, just as anxious to preserve in their integrity the institutions on behalf of which they made so many sacrifices and suffered so much on the fields of France and Flanders, or on the scorching sands of the Balkan States. There is no taint of bolshevism among them. The lawless element will be given short shirft by the men who risked their lives on behalf of an orderly citizenship. The new hall on Murray street will be an institution where patriotism of a type brighter than this country has even seen will be nurtured.

AN EDUCATIONAL MEMORIAL.

THE MEMBERS of the Board of Education are talking of asking the Minister of Militia to donate to the city part of the Armories to be used as a gymnasium for the Collegiate Institute pupils. The necessity for this step has been occasioned by the action of the Y. M. C. A. in seeking an increase in the rental charged for the use of the gymnasium at that institution.

There is little probability that this request will be granted, even if the point is pressed that the city contributed to the cost of the Armories. That building was erected for permanent military purposes, and from present indications there will be more occasion for its designed use than ever when all the soldiers are back and the work of recruiting the 57th Regiment begins. The Military Department is now, just as it always has been, jealous of its prerogatives.

There is a necessity for a gymnasium building, a technical school and a department of domestic science in connection with the educational system of this city. The use of the Y. M. C. A. rooms as a gymnasium for the Collegiate has simply been a compromise arranged to answer the conditions of the regulations and so preserve the legislative grant to the city. The necessity for a technical school and a domestic science department has long been recognized. At the last commencement exercises of the Collegiate, Mr. Roland Denne, chairman of the Board of Education, who presided, stated in his address that the best possible monument that the city could erect in honor of its soldiers would be the construction of a building which would embrace all three branches for which there is at present no accommodation.

The New York Times and other leading American journals are advocating the very same idea as worthy of adoption by all the school boards in the United States. A former school trustee of this city, one of the veterans, who spent years, profitable to the municipality, in building up the system, is of the same opinion as Chairman Denne. He calls attention to the fact that there is ample space behind the Collegiate Institute for such a building. He would have all the rooms required, and a special department set aside as Memorial Hall, this to contain the pictures of every student of the Institute who enlisted, whether he gave his life for the Empire or returned home, as well as portraits of every other Peterborough soldier that could be obtained. The room would contain records of the war to be used in class work.

The schools of Canada are supposed to be the nurseries of the highest type of citizenship, and this includes the development of a patriotic sentiment among the children. In the Memorial Hall, as proposed, no better means could be provided for object lessons in loyalty, for encouraging the love of country that is so essential to national safety and progress. The student of history, even if he gathers his information from between the covers of a school text book, is generally the most devoted patriot of them all. The pupil who could avail himself of the opportunities afforded by the new department as proposed, would have the additional advantage of the inspiration that would certainly result from an intimate knowledge of the lives of the soldiers, living or dead, who passed through the hades of the recent war and who saved civilization in one of the darkest Gethsemanes from which it has ever emerged.

PREMIER EBERT'S PROCLAMATION.

PREMIER EBERT'S proclamation on the peace treaty just issued to the German people is at once a threat and a whine. It is not stretching a point to infer from some of his statements that the Germanst will take up arms again rather than be bound by the conditions which the Allies lay upon them. This threat will alarm no one, effectually deprived of all means for further hostilities as the Germans have been ever since the armistice was signed, and when the orginasation of the League of Nations is recalled.

But President Ebert in his proclamation has manifested another national characteristic when he plays the role of the baby and declares that the Allies have broken their promises. The gist of his argument is that Germany is now a republic, and as the war was waged by the Allies to make the world safe for democracy, the new republic is entitled to easier terms than those contained in the treaty. It was the German military autocracy that brought about the war. The people were so many pawns in the game, forced to do the bidding of their masters. Hence, reasons President Ebert, they should not now be penalized for the sins committed by the party that is now down and out.

The German people cannot hope to escape the consequences of the war on any such plea as this. If they have been mistaught by their leaders all these years, they were easy pupils and easier dupes simply because that teaching appealed to the most sordid passions in human nature. They have been schooled to believe that might alone was right, that they were supermen designed by high heaven to achieve all that was worth while of the wealth and surface of the earth. It is a simple matter to induce the people of any nation to espouse such a false doctrine as that, compared to the task of drilling them in the principles of national righteousness.

The German masses suffered themselves to be misled. They have no one to blame but themselves. They were gifted with ordinary human intelligence and should not have been so many dumb cattle either driven or led to the slaughter. If their leaders were inspired by the lure of conquest, the people themselves were inflamed by the same unholy passion.

The German people awoke to the fact that they had been duped, but, unfortunately for them and for the world, the awakening came only after all the mischief had been wrought. When all hope of victory was gone the German people turned on their leaders. The Royal Family fled to alien lands for safety and their holdings were confiscated. The people set up a government of their own. Now, after they have shed the blood of millions and sent grief into every corner of the civilized world, they plead they are an emancipated people and that their new action entitles them to mercy at the hands of the nations they did so much to despoil.

What the German people did last November in the way of breaking their own bonds, they could have done any time during the war or even before the hostilities began. The leaders cannot be held responsible for every measure of cruelty on the battlefield and the indignities that were heaped upon Allied prisoners by the non-combatants of Germany. The people of the fallen empire, whether they wore the kaiser's uniform or the garb of private life, have placed themselves outside the pale of civilisation and deserve no better treatment than the treaty of peace vouchsafes them.

The naval force of Germany revolted, rather than engage in a helpess contest with the Allied fleet. They could have done as much before the battle of Jutland. The army revolted rather than continue the hopeless struggle, for the ex-kaiser and his fellow conspirators would never have given up so long as there was one army division left to carry on the struggle. The German army could have done as much before the big drive started over a year ago.

President Ebert says that the treaty of peace makes German labor the slave of foreign capitalism, referring to the indemnities the people have to pay. German labor has been the serf of its own rulers since the beginning. Every resource was devoted to the maintenance of the military system that has now been broken down. If the German people have to submit to a new form of slavery they have themselves forged the manacles and they will find that the new so-called serfdom is rather more beneficent than the old.

MAGNA CHARTA OF WORLD

(New York Commercial)

The shot that sank the Lusitania sank the German Empire.

The date of May 7 marked the fourth anniversary of the sinking of the great passenger ship and the loss of so many non-combatants. The deed was unique in the annals of crime.

While services were being held in churches in English-speaking countries in memory of the victims of this world horror, the text of the Treaty of Peace between the twenty-seven allied and associated powers on the one hand and Germany on the other was handed to the German plenipotentiaries at Versailles.

It is the longest treaty ever drawn. It is not, strictly speaking a treaty. It is a notice served on Germany and is not debatable. It contains the covenant of the League of Nations as its first section. The frontiers of the Germany of the future are fixed. Her crimes are relentlessly set forth and the reparation therefor clearly and coldly defined. It is a terrible document for a German to contemplate. It is as bitter as death and as forbiddingly cold and just as Dante's hell. It is the combined work of many hundreds of minds working for a period of four months. It contains eighty thousand words, even after the art of condensation had been strained to he umost.

It is the magna charta of the modern world.

The famous document granted by King John of England to the barons of that realm at Runnymede in 1215 has been viewed by afer ages as the basis of English liberties. It certainly abated a colossal nuisance of centuries' standing.

The comparison between the charter wrung from John at Runnymede in the thirteenth century and that being wrung from the Blond beast of Millarism at Versaillles in the twentieth century is not inept. The one formed the basis of the liberties of a nation; the other forms a basis for the peace and happiness of the world.

Formerly treaties were written in Latin; then French became the diplomatic language of the world. The terms of the present treaty are couched in both English and French. There is a rule to the effect that each signatory may insist on his own language being used. A treaty is somewhat analogous to a contract in private law, the main difference being the origin, purpose and manner of enforcement. The Versailles document is different from any treaty ever drawn. There is no precedent for the conditions engendered by the world war. The rule that formerly obtained in the German Empire was that treaties which relate to any subjec already regulaed by imperial law require the approval of the legislature. The German plenipotentiaries at Versailles have power to act for their Governmen, regardless of ratification. In the French republic the President is empowered to negotiate treaties.

The President of United States can negotiate a treaty only by and with the consent of the Senate. In negotiated by the President have been rejected by the Senate. Foreign governments, therefore, negotiating with the President are presumed to know that negotiations is only the initial stage of the procedure. The Senate has on occasions claimed and exercised the right to ratify only a part instead of sending a treaty back as a whole for revision. Some critics on the treaty making power hold with the Roman law that the principals are in good faith bound by the acts of their duly authorized plenipotentiaries, but in the present instance this principle has no likelihood of being put to the test.

The features of the Versailles world document are so many, so complex and of such grave moment as to change the face of the world. Apart from the rigid and severe justice meted out to Germany, the League of Nations is accepted by the allied and associated powers as operative, and by Germany in principle, but without membership. Of tremendous and compelling importance is the creation of an international labor party, with a permanent office and an annual convention. Some problems are necessarily left for solution between the allied and associated powers, notably the disposition of the German fleet and colonies, laws of the air, opium, arms and the liquor traffic, but they will not affect the main issues, which are set forth with admirable distinctness and precision.

It is difficult to form any concluson other than that Germany will agree to the terms laid down. She has no alternative save national suicide, which, were it possible, would amount to confession of guilt.

TO-DAY'S STORY

The tanned Belgian veteran leaned over one of the dogs that lay in the machine gun harness and patted him. Concern shone in his eyes.

"He doesn't breathe right," he said "since he was gassed."

"Oh yes," he explained in answer to a question. "These dogs have been through the war, just as we. This one, he ran into the field without a mask on to try to save his friend who was killed."

The "friend" it developed, was another Belgian soldier. Between him and the dog Turc there had been the tacit affection that exists between dog and man. Sometimes the soldier would look wonderingly into the eyes of his dumb friend as if to ask "Well, Turc, when will it all end?" And Turc would turn his great eyes toward the man and give him silent comfort.

The soldier, Philip was part of his name, found the end before long. He lay bleeding in no man's land, and the dog, choking amid poisonous fumes, was licking his dead friend's face when another soldier pulled him back. And after Philip, there were others who found comfort in looking questioningly into the mastiff's eyes.

Ten Veteran Dogs Here

Ten Veteran dogs were in Chicago with 115 picked soldiers of the Belgian army, who had been in the war since the Germans first stormed Liege.

They hauled machine guns, ammunition and supply carts in a parade. Among them one—Max—loped with three legs beside his companions in the march. The others, all dogs which were formerly used as police dogs in Belgium, are named Bonnot, Hamboula, Vos, Baron, Trompette, John, Khaki and Sarah. They have all seen more than two years of service.

Asked about the engagement when Max lost a leg, the stalwart soldier shrugged his shoulders.

"He was in só many," he explained.

The dogs, hauling machine guns, often preceded their detachments into action at the front, learning to find cover as best they might. Knowing no weariness, no fear, they led the way, or followed, unquestioning at the behest of the many voices of friends in the regiment.

Share Hardships With Men

"Many times they helped us to fight," said Alfred Ridix, commandant of the veterans. And their story is that of any Belgian soldier in the recent war, a story of year after year of weary following of the same star, constant separation friends weariness and physical ills. For the dogs, some of them still carrying bullets in their bodies, and some who breathe painfully from the effects of gas, are suffering now as many of the veterans of the army are.

"They are soldiers all," said Commandant Dirix.

MOTHER'S DAY

Today a snowwhite flower we wear,
In memory of the loving care,
That blessed, our earliest years,
Hushed us, at eve, to sweet reporse,
Soothed all our childish fears, and woes,
And kissed away our tears.

Nursed us in sickness, clothed, and fed,
And taught our faltering feet, to tread,
In wisdom's narrow way.
What filial, gratitude, and love,
Can, worthy such devotion prove,
Such tender care repay.

Though fate may frown and friends be few
A mother's heart is kind, and true
Through good report, or ill,
The same, in fortune's sunny smile,
In sorrow, suffering, shame or guile,
Unselfish, loving, still.

On the bright, lusterious, roll of fame may proudly shine, the warrior's name
Who follows glory's lead.
But, higher, holier honors far,
Than fairest laurels, won in war,
Shall be, the mother's meed.

Emblem of spotless purity,
Of truth and saintly piety,
Our mother's own bequest,
Thy tribute, fragrant blossoms bear,
To mother, and her name, declare,
Ever revered, and blest.
May we still follow, day by day,
The path that leads no foot astray
The path our mother's trod,
Though, straight, and narrow, it ascends,
Twill lead to life that never ends,
And to our mother's God.

BEET BOTH EARLY AND LATE CROP

SHOULD BE WELL CULTIVATED TO ENSURE TENDERNESS AND FLAVOR.

The beet is an early and late vegetable. The seed for the early crop may be sown as soon as danger from frost has passed.

Beets sholud be grown for the purpose of having early greens and with the diea or having tender young specimens all summer and a good crop to keep for winter use.

Beets, like other root crops, need rich ground, but to avoid split or divided roots the manure must be well roted and the soil well broken up.

It might be interesting to know that beet seed is a pod containing several germs, each of which will sprout.

Plant the seed about one inch apart and when the young plants come up, thin them out so they will develop roots about four inches apart in the row. The seeds are drilled in about one inch deep and the rows can be from six to fourteen inches apart depending upon the size of your garden and the variety you are growing. The winter varieties should be planted farther apart.

Cultivate Them Thoroughly

All root crops require constant and thorough cultivation if they are to grow rapidly and taste right.

Beets grow quickly, and by successive planting you can have young, tender specimens for the table all summer.

Your winter crop should be planted about the middle of June. The Eclipse is one of the best winter varieties. For early spring beets grow Crosby's Egyptian. This variety is in great demand by market gardeners for early out of door planting.

It is perfect in shape, deep red in color and of superior quality. The crimson globe and Detroit dark red are two medium early sorts that give good satisfaction. Fireball is a handsome globe-shaped variety, with a smooth skin and a solid sweet flesh. I can highly recommend this kind.

Grow in Any Climate

Beets can be grown in almost any climate. They are probably the favorite root crop in America and would be planted more extensively by the home gardener were he more familiar with the splendid keeping qualities of properly grown and properly stored beet roots.

To be palatable, beets must have quality and flavor. Turnips taste, alike, so do carrots. But poorly grown beets are likely to be bitter, woody and tasteless. To enjoy their choicest quality the roots should be eaten as soon as they average two inches in diameter.

The best way to store beets in bulk is to bury them in boxes of sand or soil in a frost proof cellar. But a good supply should be put up by canning and pickling. Pickled beets are one of the best winter table relishes.

"KNOW HOW"

It is of vital importance that the man who supplies your glasses knows how. It is a highly technical business—takes years of training and experience. An error of only two degrees may cause very severe trouble. You don't understand this. We do. It is our business to know how. That is why you should come to us to have your eyes examined and glasses fitted.

Mrs. King Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Iola, Kansas.—"I was a constant sufferer from female trouble for about a year. I had pains in back and stomach, in fact all over me, and was all rundown. A friend of mine was cured of the same trouble by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it and it gave me health and strength and made a new woman of me. I cannot praise your Vegetable Compound too highly, and you may publish my testimonial as it may be the means of helping some other suffering woman."—Mrs. IRENE KING, 105 West Campbell Street, Iola, Kansas.

The great number of unsolicited testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory, many of which are from time to time published by permission, are proof of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, in the treatment of female ills.

M'CULLOUGH TELLS STORY OF ESCAPE

CONCLUDED GAME WAS UP WHEN GIRL WAS ARRESTED.

Toronto, May 12. Frank McCullough, the condemned murderer, has told his story of his twenty-thee days of liberty to Detective Bart Cronin. His story reveals the fact that the whole period of liberty was a close chase by the police, which ended in his capture at the house at 78 Bathurst street last Wednesday. Five times in three days of the time he was hiding on Bathurst street, he told Detective Cronin, he had seen the detective from his window, and it was this fact which determined him to make a bold bid for final liberty by travelling out of the country as a lineman, a scheme which was forestalled by only twenty four hours.

McCullough's first night of freedom was spent in the old British Welcome League Building, now empty, situated at the corner of Spadina avenue and Front street. Leaving the building after a night's rest he cunningly nailed a board up over the doorway, knowing that anyone who might enter the building during his absence would knock it down and thus reveal to him that a visit had taken place. As it happened Detective Cronin, in making investigations, had knocked the board down, and when McCullough returned he was agraid to re-enter in case has refuge had been discovered.

From then until the following Saturday his whereabouts were somewhat uncertain. On Saturday, April 19, he went to the Bathurst street house and there he stayed until Detective Cronin's investigations resulted in his recapture.

Questioned about Vera De Lavelle McCullough admitted that her arrest had upset his plans. He became worried when she did not return to his room on the night of April 22, and it was not until the following morning that he learned through the papers that she had been arresed. He admitted that he had put all hif aith in Miss De Lavelle to assist him in his plans, and when she was arrested he almost gave up his slender hope of getting out of the country.

Daylight Saving Is Standard Time

London, Ont., May 12.—London has been advised, in answer to a direct inquiry, that Greenwich, England, Observatory is operating on daylight-saving time in concord with the British law, which advanced the clocks an hour durin gthe summer months. As a result daylight-saving advocates here contend that they are in a position to fight the matter out in the courts, and an endeavor to restore the quashed daylight-saving by-law may no wbe made.

Mr. Justice Logie of the Supreme Court, who gave his ruling at the session at which application to quash the bylaw was heard, may not have given consideration to the origin of standard time in Ontario. The law prescribes that "standard time" is five hours in advance of the time of Greenwich, England, Observatory. Thus daylight-saving supporters contend that when England adopted the chane the whole of the Province of Ontario was automatically forced to follow suit.

WHY NOT A SOLDIERS' SUNDAY

A Soldiers' Sunday would not be a bad idea for the churches of Canada to institute right away.

A national plea for the co-operation of Canadians in finding opportunities for employment for returned men from the pulpits of Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific on a particular Sunday would help to create a conscious ideal, and enable Canadians to re-dedicate themselves to the greatest duty and privilege they possess—namely, aiding in the repatriation of returned men.

It is not merely a duty for the people to interest themselves in finding acceptable employment for the men who are discharged from the service. It is a wise, economic move as well, since it reduced the number of unemployed, supplies labor where it is most needed and contributes materially to the process of industrial readjustment so essential to the restoration of the country to a normal basis.

It is a pleasant fact that most employers are restoring to their former jobs the men who a year or so ago gave them up to fight their country's battles. When these soldiers donned their uniforms and marched away they went with the emphatic assurance of their employers that their jobs would be awaiting them upon their return. It is cheering to know that the employers are keeping faith.

The movement to secure employment for returned soldiers is one worthy the efforts of every patriotic citizen. It should be undertaken out of a sense of gratitude, even though it also has its practical side which strongly recommends it.

Let the churches start the new movement.

CHEAP LABOR OR PRODUCTS ARE NOT WANTED IN CANADA

J. H. Burnham, With Shipbuilding Bill Before Parliament, Delivers Another Speech Opposing Free Trade

The ship-building program proposed by the Government calls for the expenditure of thirty million dollars for the construction of vessels. When the bill was before Parliament Michael Clark of Red Deer spoke in favor of importing steel plate for the Canadian built ships. This called forth the following reply from J. H. Burnham:

There is a disposition in this country to urge provincial interests, but I think national interests and wide economic interests should be more especially regarded. It will suit a particular case sometimes in order with considerable cunning to draw a general conclusion, but it is a practice that must be guarded against. We are not here for the purpose of being beguiled by any such form of reasoning. The fact of the matter is that if you lay down the proposition that has just been outlined, you must also lay down the proposition that cheap products and cheap labor shall have free access to this country. The result would be that you would ruin production and reduce the producer to the level of the foreigner. That is the true general conclusion to be drawn from such a statement. In the particular instance which has just been developed it may quite reasonably have occurred just as outlined, but as I say, to draw a general conclusion from it is both dangerous and harmful.

We cannot do anything of the sort if we wish to develop Canada. I might say in particular that if you put a Chinese wall seven hundred feet high around this country and balanced consumption and production, you might well raise this country to the highest possible degree of economic equilibrium, which any man who knows anything about the science of economy is aware is quite possible. But he would also know that if you reduce that wall, if you disturb the equilibrium and destroy the balance of your own resourceful country by admitting cheap labor and cheap labor's products, you must ultimately reduce the country and the people to the level of China and the Chinese coolie.

Mr. Michael Clark: How does my hon. friend propose to get his ships over his seven hundred foot wall?

Mr. Burnham: I might answer my hon. friend by saying that in the case I supposed we would not need to get them over the seven hundred foot wall. That is just where the error of such reasoning as my hon. friend's comes in. We would have the ships employed within our own country; they would get all the employment they required. We would have the farmer raising no more than was necessary for the sustenance of the people, and we would have the manufacturer making no more than was necessary for their requirements; and we would have the administration employing its arts for preserving the admirable balance of trade in this country. Then we would have such complete immunity from confusion that there would be plenty of time to study economic subjects and bring into this House better conclusions than we have just hear announced.

PROVINCES GIVEN CONTROL OF TRADE

LIQUOR LAWS OF EACH TO BE RECOGNIZED BY DOMINION.

Ottawa, May 12.—Now that the preliminary resolution embodying the intentions of the Government as to prohibition legislation has at last appeared on the order paper, it is clear that the Government has accepted it is a principle that legislation as to sale of liquors falls within the purview of the Provinces themselves. It the legislation, as already intimated last week the Government will enforce regulations to permit only the manufacture and transportation of liquor of such strength as is permitted to be sold in each individual Province.

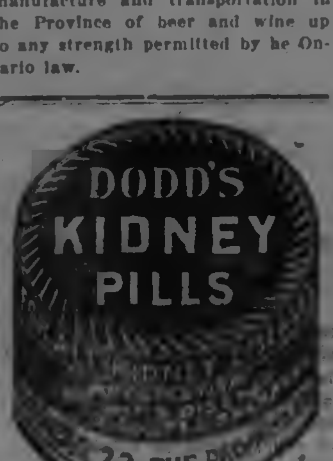
Recognize Provincial Jurisdiction

Before any proposed legislation affecting trade and commerce can be introduced in to Parlaiment it is necessary first to secure the approval of Parallament to a preliminary resolution embodying the principles of the bill. That is why a resolution is now on the order paper. This resolution simply asks that the order in Council against the manufacture, importation and transportation of intoxicating liquors shall be validated with modifications sufficient to make effective all Provincial enactments concerning the sale, but to go no farther.

How It Will Work

For example, the manufacture of native wine will be permitted in Ontario, and its sale as well, according to the provisions of the Ontario Temperance Act, but the wine cannot be exported from Ontario to other Provinces. In like manner the manufacture of beer and wine of the strength prescribed by the Quebec law will be permitted in that Province, but it cannot be exported to other Provinces, just as in the order in Council the importation of intoxicating liquors from foreign countries into Canada is absolutely forbidden until one year after the proclamation of peace. Thus the liquor industry becomes a purely native industry—more than that, a Provincial industry, and one subject to all the changes of law the various provinces may enact.

The Dominion law will be an elastic law providing for accomodating itself to such future legislation as the Provinces may enact. If Ontario decides for wine and beer at the coming referendum then the Dominion law will permit the manufacture and transportation in the Province of beer and wine up to any strength permitted by he Ontario law.



DOCTOR'S PATIENT GAINS 17 POUNDS

Prominent Physician Continues To Use Tanlac in Practice With Surprising Results.

One of the strongest and most convincing evidences of the remarkable results being accomplished by Tanlac throughout the south is the large number of letters that are now being received daily from scores of well-known men and women who have been benefited by its use.

Among the large number that have been received recently none are more interesting than the following letter from Dr. J. T. Edwards, of Fayetteville, Ga. Dr. Edwards, it will be remembered recently gave Tanlac his unqualified indorsement in a public statement, and the testimonial published below was recently given him by one of his patients. His letter follows just as it was written:

Fayetteville, Ga.

Mr. G. F. Willis, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir,—I am enclosing you herewith statement I have just received from Mr T. M. McGough. He has sold out here and is moving to Turin, Ga. He was here this morning and came in to tell me what Tanlac had done for him. He says too much cannot be said about Tanlac. It certainly has cured him.

Respectfully,
J. T. EDWARDS, M.D.

Mr. McGough's statement follows: "I suffered from indigestion and could not eat anything but what would hurt me. Constipation gave me a great deal of trouble also. My symptoms were indigestion, heartburn, and gas on the stomach after eating. My appetite was irregular and my food failed to nourish me. This trouble caused me to get very poor—in fact I got so thin, and weak I was hardly able to go about.

"I bought three bottles of Tanlac on Dr. Edwards' recommendation, and I am now feeling all right again, and am able to attend to business. I gained seventeen pounds in weight and am doing fine. Tanlac did the work.

"I now recommend Tanlac to everyone who is sick like I was, and wished to take something that will help them."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

CHANGE NAME OF PARENTS' CIRCLE

SOCIETY NOW TO BE KNOWN AS HOME AND SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

At the monthly meeting of the Parents' Circle of Queen Mary school held on Friday afternoon, May 9th, in the school, the president, Mrs. S.T. Medd, who had been in Toronto attending a convention of home and school clubs, gave a ver interesting account of the work accomplished there and in other cities by these clubs.

Mrs. Malcolm McCullough read a paper treating on the work and duties of the teacher, from a parent's point of view. The subject was broadly handled and much appreciated by the teachers and parents present.

It was decided to change the name Parents' Circle to the more comprehensive one of "Home and School Association."

At the next monthly meeting to be held on June 13th, Mrs. W. R. Morris will give a paper on "The Woman Voter."

In the report of the meetings in Toronto as published in the local paper, the word provincial was used in two or three cases whereas the proper terms should have been provisional. The error had the effect of representing those who took part as usurping functions that did not properly belong to them.

PLANT POTATOES NOW

Increased Yield Secured by Hilling Them.

Good Combs Beekeeper's Asset—Best Are Always Produced During Heavy Honey Flow—Best of Care Should Be Taken of New Combs

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

EXTENSIVE experimental work, under ordinary conditions, has shown that it is a good plan to use good-sized seed potatoes, and to cut them into pieces of from one to two ounces in weight, and having two, three or four eyes in each piece. It is an excellent plan to throw the freshly-cut pieces in finely ground land plaster or gypsum and to plant the sets immediately after cutting. The best returns have been obtained by planting the sets in rows about 28 inches apart and leaving the sets singly from 12 to 15 inches apart in the rows. In the average of seven years' experiments it was found in planting the potatoes one, three, five and seven inches deep that the highest average results were obtained from planting three inches, and the second highest from planting five inches in depth. Under average conditions it is usually wise to plant about four inches but the depth of planting would, of course, depend considerably upon the quality and the condition of the soil. If the soil is a sandy loam, the depth of planting may be deeper than in the case of a heavy damp soil.

In experiments extending over a period of ten years it has been found that about four bushels per acre increase has been obtained from hilling the potatoes in comparison with level cultivation.—Dr. C. A. Zavitz, O. A. College, Guelph.

Good Combs the Beekeeper's Asset.

An asset to the extracted honey producer is combs, good combs and plenty of combs. It is sometimes a problem to obtain and maintain a sufficient stock, especially if the apiary is being enlarged. Moreover, there are several important problems associated. Fundimentally, good combs are obtainable only when built on full sheets of wire foundation. Such combs will endure; naturally built combs will not stand the wear and tear of repeated honey extraction. Beside being weak and likely to break out of the frames, naturally drawn combs usually contain drone cells to some extent, if not in excess. The presence of drone cells in combs, used either in the brood chamber or in extracting supers, is a source of continued disadvantage. Drone cells in combs are always costly. They may cost swarms; they may dampen the honey storing instincts (bees are adverse to the storing of honey in drone cells, until there is no other space available) if the drone cells are in the super, their presence induces the queen to leave the brood chamber. It is a maxim to have only combs of all worker cells reinforced with wire; to this end, full sheets of foundation are essential and economical.

The best combs are always produced during a honey flow, yes, when there is a surplus coming in; good combs may be produced in the earlier part of the season, just prior to the cropping season; yet, regardless of season, the best of combs are obtainable only on strong colonies.

Conversely, weak colonies, without the stimulation of the honey flow, fail to draw out the foundation evenly and fully: holes may even be gnawed in the foundations, which holes, when built in, will probably be filled with drone cells. With care, frames of full foundation, to be drawn out, may be supplied alternately with combs of brood or honey. Moreover, the tendency is for bees to bulge the old combs, and to correspond, only partially draw out the foundation of the new comb, perhaps leaving the corners open. The best results are usual when several frames with foundation are grouped in one side of the hive, or a full super given. In order to induce the attaching of the comb to the bottom bar, new combs may be drawn out in the super, over a powerful colony and during a honey flow.

Having acquired new combs, good care should be taken of them. If they are intended for extracted honey production, they should be kept apart from the brood nest, not allowing brood to be reared in them. Combs darkened with brood rearing are not considered as wholesome for honey production as are virgin (new) combs. Furthermore it is considered on good evidence that dark combs will darken and hence deteriorate the light grades of honey. One generation of brood in a comb may not injure it for light honey cropping: it is thought by some to toughen and strengthen the comb, yet the more particular producers are equipping with virgin combs for the supers. These choice extracting combs are a valuable asset. Preserved from year to year, they should endure. Although bee labor has not advanced in price, all bee supplies are increasingly costly, hence good combs are to-day a greater asset than ever.—Dr. Burton M. Gates, O. A. College, Guelph.

Extravagant Use of Straw.

The use of at least a limited amount of bedding for beef cattle is advisable, but the extravagant use of straw, coarse hays, etc., for this purpose should be discouraged. All such roughages that are to be used for bedding, either for fattening or breeding animals, should first be offered them in the hay rack and that which is refused used for bedding. If stover is fed the stalks, while somewhat difficult to handle, make satisfactory bedding material and should be used for this purpose rather than burned or otherwise disposed of.

NEW BILL NOT DESIGNED TO EXCLUDE JEWS FROM CANADA

Minister of Immigration Calder Writes in Reply to Protest Recently Sent by Jewish Congregation of This City.

Mr. Norman Sukloff, president of the Hebrewn Congregation of th a city, has received from Minister of Immigration J. A. Calder the following reply to his telegram of recent date protesting against some of the amendments to the Immigration Act:

Dear Sir,—

Your telegram of the 7th instant to Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., dealing with the amendments to the Immigration Act now before the House, has been transmitted to me.

Your representations have been carefully noted, and dealing with the objections set out in your telegram I say:

I recognize that the literacy test alone is not sufficient to determine who are and who are not desirable immigrants. I am quite prepared to admit that energy, ambition and industry are most essential qualities in a new settler. Other sections of the law are drafted with the object of providing for the exclusion of those who while able to read may not be desirable on other grounds. While the bill was in committee the clause dealing with the literacy test was amended giving the minister discretionary powers as to the application of the literacy test to certain persons and classes.

A careful examination of the paragraphs of sub-section 6 of section 3 of the bill will not, I think, show any real ground for difficulty nor yet will these paragraphs of the bill offer ground for ears that Jewish people will be discriminated against. I think it is recognized everywhere that Jewish people living under free institutions are law-abiding and anxious to support the enforcement of law and order in the country of their adoption. The persons whose entry to Canada is prohibited by the paragraphs of sub-section 6 of section 3 of the bill, are those whose revolutionary tendencies would make them dangerous in this country. The United States Government has for some time had in effect very similar clauses, and I think you will not find that Jewish people have been discriminated against by the application of the United States law.

The law as it stands does not differentiate between nationalities or races, but provides authority under which the Governor in Council may exclude immigrants on the ground of nationality or race. I think it would be advisable for you to write me somewhat fully explaining what clauses and in what way you think the bill should be amended providing for special consideration of Jewish people.

Section 13 of the bill has already been adopted, but not exactly as it stands in the printed bill. The words "or religious sect" on line 15 have been eliminated, and some additional words have been added. It is considered necessary that the Governor in Council shall have authority at a time like this to exclude or otherwise, on the ground of nationality, race, occupation, etc. The law as it stands contains a very similar provision in that it mentions "race, class, occupation, or character." Unless we have some such provision it would be impossible to exclude enemy aliens. It is well to remember that section 13 does not in itself prohibit the entry to Canada of any person, but only provides machinery under which regulations may be passed from time to time. These regulations will necessarily be drawn with a view to meeting conditions as they arise.

Under the existing law domicile is lost not after five years, but by leaving Canada with the intention of making one's permanent home outside of Canada. The amendment provides that one who has obtained citizenship in Canada may, by registering with a British Consul from year to year, retain the right of domicile while living outside of Canada. It is surely not unreasonable to hold that a person who remains out of Canada for five years, not for a mere special or temporary purpose, has lost domicile. The amendment is much more favorable to the British subject who has been naturalized in Canada or to the British subject not born in Canada than the existing law.

Your reference to paragraph "K", sub-section 6, of section 3, will be dealt with when the bill has become law by a carefully prepared circular of instructions to our agents. The clause does not refer to specific diseases so much as to a combination of mental and physical conditions which will interfere with an immigrant making his way to this country.

Secton 23 of the bill does not assign officers for duty on vessel, but provides authority by which the minister may place officers on vessels. I do not think that having an officer on duty with the object of observing travellers during the week or more of their ocean voyage, can be regarded as contrary to British fair play. Such officers would not have the power of exclusion. The fact that we have had to deport a considerable number of immigrants in recent years, within a short time after their arrival, leaves room to doubt whether he examination of passengers at Canadian ports has been as thorough as it should be. No doubt observation covering a longer period than the few hours an immigrant may stay at an ocean port, would be useful in weeding out some of the undesirable element that succeeds in passing even most careful inspection we are now able to make.

Fortunately ready assistance was at hand and the man was dug out of his dangerous position before sustaining severe injury.

AT ONE TIME DEAN OF BARRIE—OLDEST R. C. PRIEST IN AMERICA.

The following obituary reference by the Barrie Examiner to the oldest Roman Catholic priest in America, Rev. Father Northgrames, who died in London, on April 25th, will be found of interest to Peterborough members of the deceased's faith:

"Father Northgraves was dean of Barrie in 1873. His sister was an aunt of Mrs. M. Shaney, of this town. A despatch from London to the daily papers gives the following particulars of the life and death of Father Northgraves. Injuries sustained some days ago in a fall resulted this afternoon in the death at St. Joseph's Hospital of the Rev. Fr. George Richard Northgraves, the oldest Roman Catholic priest in America, and a cleric who shared with Cardinal Gibbons the distinction of being the only man in America who in 1869-70 attended the vatican council in Rome at which the doctrine of Papal infallibility was defined. Father Northgraves was the author of "Mistakes of Modern Infidels," written while he was parish priest at Parkhill in 1885, in answer to the teachings of Robert Ingersoll. The work commended itself to persons of all denominations and was known throughout America. He was born at Ottawa, then known as Bytown, on February 23, 1834. In 1852, when St. Michael's College was but two weeks old, he was enrolled as a student. He was ordained at Toronto in 1857, subsequently, until 1860, being a professor on St. Michael's College staff at $80 a year. Thereafter he was rector of St. Michael's, and his contribution to the pre-Confederation discussion of Separate schools attracted great attention. His ability as a theologian resulted in his selection for attendance at the Vatican Council. He was appointed dean at Barrie ni 1873, and in 1874 was removed to London to become rector of St. Peter's Cathedral, where he continued for three years. He was made pastor of Wyoming in 1877. From 1890 till 1910 he was editor of the Catholic Record, and continued as a contributor until infirmities of age compelled him to cease active work in April, 1918. Father Northgraves had the distinction of having witnessed the celebration of mass in 1839 by Bishop MacDonell, of Kingston, the first Roman Catholic bishop of Upper Canada.

London Paper Objects to Criticism in Canada

London, May 12.—The Globe speaking of certain newspaper criticism in Canada of Generals Turner and Currie in the selection of staff officers, says: "We are pleased to be able to give from our own knowledge a flat denial to these suggestions. It is easy for critics sitting in Canada to work up uncalled-for complaints against Canadians who have been doing such splendid service in France, but complaints, to cut any ice at all there, should at least be like stories that are founded on facts."

Following orders from Washington the 165th Regiment is ready for demobilization. Of the command 80 officers and 1,385 men left Camp Mills for Camp Upton where they will be relieved of army service.

KNOWLEDGE MAKES FOR LIFE ETERNAL

THE HIGHER MAN RISES IN THE SCALE OF LIFE THE LONGER HE LIVES.

Rev. R. B. Grobb of All Saints' Church, in the course of a thoughtful sermon on "Eternal Life," last evening said that eternal life should not be regarded as merely the extension of time,(or a continuance in the hereafter of the ordinary functions of life here. On the contrary, it is not a new quantity but a new quality of life which we cannot realize in our present state of existence, and which is the result of knowledge. Eternal life is advancement and the question with man should be how is it to be attained. Much is said of the wonderful results of scientific research, but science, the speaker contended, does not always imply knowledge. While science cannot prove eternal life or apply it, it has laid down conditions under which mankind could live forever. Herbert Spencer taught that the principles governing nature are life and death but conditions for the extension of life never die. Thehigher man rises in the scale of created life the longer life lasts, and conditions for a continuation of existence depend upon a inner capacity to adopt ourselves to conditions above our ordinary surroundings. Scientific research concludes that if there is anything in human nature to meet new conditions beyond those of man's natural life there is no reason why eternal life should not be attained.

The reverend gentleman here went on to say that the Christian religion teaches a capacity within man capable of meeting new environments and gaining life eternal. The permant part of many, he said, is that which has to do with God, the highest knowledge in the world is the knowledge of God, and the more knowledge the more life. Religion is not a sentiment; it takes rival in knowledge, in which the religious man has a mighty creed founded. Science in contradistinction is just something found to the true by experiment. Newton discovered by experiment the law of gravitation, but from that day to this no one can explain just exactly why an apple falls to the ground—no living man has gained that knowlede.. But religion is not an experiment. It is to know God, an dthat brings to fruition all that is best in man. Men fight with doctrines but have no doubt about Christ as an experimental fact

The reverend gentleman concluded by exhorting his hearers to found their religion on a "knowledge" of Christ and it will reveal itself in a hundred ways and prove a well of living waters springing up into eternal life.

NORTHEY—BELL

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bell, "Roxview Farm," Smith Township, Friday evening when their youngest daughter, Alta Mae, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Stanley Melville Northey, second son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Northey of Smith Township.

Promptly at 8 o'clock the bride entered the drawing room on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding march played by Mrs. Clayton Telford of Bridgenorth, who also sang beautifully during the signing of the register.

The bride looked charming in a gown of white duchess satin with old Irish lace panels and chinelle trimmings and wore the customary veil of tulle and orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of carnations and sweet heart roses. Miss Claire Tate of Moosejaw who wore white satin with butterfly drape of tulle and sequins acted as flower girl and the bride's nephew, Master Conrad Tate of Moosejaw, acted as ring bearer.

After the ceremony which was performed by Rev. H. A. Frost of Lakefield, the guests, which were the immediate friends repaired to the dining room, where a dainty luncheon was served. EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

A. H. WOODS PRESENTS
FANNIE WARD IN
"COMMON CLAY"
PATHE SPECIAL FEATURE IN SEVEN PARTS
THE HARVARD PRIZE PLAY WHICH RAN A SOLID YEAR AT THE REPUBLIC THEATRE, NEW YORK

At the Grand today, Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee daily, with an all-star Vaudeville bill.

AT THE GRAND

Looking as natural as if they had just stepped out of Bud Fisher's famous newspaper cartoons, Mutt and Jeff appeared at the Grand for the second time this season, and as usual packed the house, the large audience embracing mirth lovers of all stages of existence, from the grave appearing veteran to the juveniles to whom these famous newspaper pictures are a constant source of amusement. Little Jeff is growing up, not in [illegible] but in the matter of taking care of himself. In the pictures he gets all the worst of it from his big chum. On the stage it is the other way and Mutt dances to the music and otherwise does the bidding of the little favorite.

Richard Freeman takes the part of Mutt, and Jerry Sullivan that of Jeff in the new play that has been prepared for them, and something in the shape of a plot has been provided sufficient at least to hold the interest of the audience right up to the final drop of the curtain. Included in the company are a number of pretty chorus girls, resplendent in grotesque costumes and well drilled in song and dance. One of the best features of the entertainment is the demonstration of the wonderful vocal powers of Mr. Fred Roberts, who can sing in any voice, male or female, in the broken tones of old age or the lisping accents of childhood.

The patriotic demonstration which features every play of the kind was purely Canadian. It was the Union Jack, not the Stars and Stripes, that was carried high in the air by Jeff himself while the rest of the company sang, "The Old Flag Never Touched the Ground." The company set the audience an example in patriotism that was, unfortunately, lost upon the majority, for even before the orchestra started to play the National Anthem at least one-third of those on the lower floor were piling out of the theatre.

Prize Picture At Grand Today Tues. And Wednesday

AND ALL-STAR VAUDEVILLE FOR THE SAME THREE DAYS.

Three souls in the iron grip of modern circumstance—a simple, devoted old woman; a man who has gained worldly eminence, despite "the skeleton in the closet"; and a girl handicapped by adverse circumstances each telling the innermost secret of a bitter experience, and eventually finding a way to face life with renewed courage. Here is chrystallized the big emotional spirit of "Common Clay," A. H. Woods' screen presentation of the Harvard prize play by Cleves Kinkead, and featuring Fannie Ward. And that it is a play with a real punch is attested by the fact that it ran for a solid year on the New York stage and was played for three years following by six companies in every city of the United States and Canada, during which time it is estimated that more than five million persons witnessed it.

"Common Clay" touches upon one of the greatest problems of the big cities—the girl, handicapped by poverty, who is struggling along without proper safeguards. It has been widely discussed in the newspapers, by social welfare and civic organizations, and made the text of discourses from many pulpits. This is so because "Comomn Clay" has to do with stark realities that cannot be overlooked or lightly brushed aside. It deals with souls in travail and good endeavor combatting the evil.

Miss Ward, in this seven-reel Pathe special, has done some of the most appealingly emotional work in her entire career on the stage, and the screen.

The special vaudeville bill will include the famous Burley Bros., comedy acrobats; Harrison and Jarvis, in shooting the chutes, and the Singing Xylophonist, Wendell Hall. The scale of prices that has proved so popular to the patrons will remain the same for this augmented program—matinees 10c and 15c, evenings 15c and 25c. Reserve your seats in advance for the evening performances. Follow the crowd to this popular house of amusement and see a show that can't be duplicated anywhere at this scale of prices.

This bill will be presented on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week.

Many Big Scenes In "Unpardonable Sin"

DISROBING INCIDENT IS DRAMATIC WITHOUT PANDERING TO LOW TASTES.

There are "big scenes" without number in "The Unpardonable Sin," which is to be shown at the Grand Theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday, but the "biggest" in point of in interest and suspense, though, paradoxically, "smallest" in point of characters involved, is the disrobing scene, which has been attracting the attention of the public wherever the tremendous photoplay feature has been exhibited.

In the development of the story, Blanche Sweet, appearing as Dimny Parcot, an aggressive American girl, in company with Matt Moore as Noll Winsor, an American working with the Food Commission in Belgium finds herself entering the military lines and forced to submit to the most careful search of her person for possible hidden documents. Methods used in making these military searches have received sufficient publicity to make the average man familiar with them, and it is pretty generaly known that but little respect was paid to the feelings of modesty, which were natural on the part of women who fell into the toils of those ordered to make the searches.

In "The Unpardonable Sin" Miss Sweet is shown alone in a room with one of the most repulsive characters that has ever been represented on the screen. Article by article, down to the last filmy garment, her clothes are removed, despite her protests and despite her desperate struggles. The scene has been photographed through a diaphragm of silk, and the two characters appear in silhouette. It is remarkable, too, that so realistically as the situation been worked out that there is not even the slightest suggestion that this truly sensational bit has been "dragged in by the heels" to pander to tastes which are low or depraved.

Another exciting incident of the picture, entirely different in its nature, shows the escape of the principals from the clutches of those who would detain them. A regulation automobile supply truck, driven at breakneck speed, crashes through rough and unbroken fields, across little streams and through gulleys and ditches, only a short distance in advance of a powerful military touring car, which finally gives up the ghost when it finds the going too hard. What the little machine accomplishes is wonderful, and the situation is one that makes for progressive and spontaneous cheering on the part of any audience before which the picture is shown.

Torrent and Lakelet.

The stream of modern literature represented by the books and periodicals on the crowded counters is a turbulent and clamorous torrent, dashing along among the rocks of criticism, over the pebbles of the world's daily events; trying to make itself heard and seen amidst the hoarse cries of the politicians and the rumbling wheels of traffic. The classic is a still lakelet, a mountain tarn, fed by springs that never fail, its surface never ruffled by storms—always smiling a welcome to its visitor.—Holmes.

American Newspaper History.

Benjamin Franklin contributed much to the development of journalism in colonial days. An editor at the age of sixteen, and a prolific writer, he was identified at some time or another in his life with many of the newspapers which flourished during this period. The oldest newspaper in the United States, which has been continued without interruption of issue or change of name, is the New Hampshire Gazette. It was first published in Portsmouth, N. H., in 1756.

To Platinize Silver.

Place some platinum in a small quantity of aqua regia or nitro-muriatic acid, and keep it in a warm place a few days; it will dissolve. As soon as it has dissolved, evaporate the liquid at a gentle heat until it is as thick as honey, so as to get rid of the excess of the nitric and muriatic acids. Add a little water, and it is ready for use. A dozen drops of this solution goes a long way in platinizing silver. The operation is performed in a small glass or beaker, covered with a watchglass to keep in the fumes, and placed in a little sand in a saucer, to equalize the heat.

Wild Goose Hides Eggs.

The domestic goose is derived from wild species. The pioneer settlers saw their domestic geese run wild in bushes and almost revert to their primitive state. Now, the goose constructs a very pretentious nest on the ground. The eggs are so large and white that they would attract unfriendly notice at a considerable distance. To avoid this dangerous publicity the eggs are carefully covered over when the owner leaves them even for a short time.

Not a Summer Resort.

Very few Europeans are able to live in Hyderabad, India, during the summer, and the stalwarts who manage to endure the awful heat do not venture out of doors during the middle of the day at all. The white troops stationed there are not allowed out of barracks from nine o'clock in the morning till five o'clock, or later, in the evening, as the scorching sun and desert heat have claimed many victims from sunstroke and heat apoplexy.

Hardy Chinese Ponies.

The Chinese horse is really a pony somewhat after the type of the western broncho. It comes from Mongolia and is known as the Mongolian pony. It is an exceedingly hardy animal, thrives on food on which a western animal would starve, is able to carry heavy loads long distances, and is very useful in many ways. As a racing animal it is characterized by speed and stamina. China exports between 1,500 and 2,000 of these ponies each year.

Putting It Plainly.

A judge, whose personal appearance was as unprepossessing as his legal knowledge was profound, interrupted a female witness. "Humbugged you, my good woman!" said he. "What do you mean by that?" "Well, my lord," said the witness, "I can't explain it exactly, but if a girl called your lordship a handsome man she would be humbugging you!"

Recognition Among Bees.

Naturalists for a long time were at a loss to understand how it was that insects were enabled to so quickly recognize an intruder among their family or settlement. It has been determined that in most cases they recognize each other by smell. Among the bees each distinctive class of workers—the guard, the fanner, the pollen carrier, the waxmaker, the architect, etc.—has its own distinctive odor. And besides each bee has its own separate hive odor, which it its passport into its own particular home.

Gun Barrels.

A rather interesting side light on the question of gun barrel life is a determination of the actual length of time to which a good shotgun barrel is subjected to the force and burning effect of the powder charge during its lifetime. If 100,000 shots are fired from a shotgun the inside of the barrel is actually exposed to the flame of the powder charge for about four minutes.

Hardly an Ideal Citizen.

There is a story told of an ancient dandy in London who, taking one sunny afternoon, his accustomed stroll down Bond street, met an acquaintance hurrying in the direction of Westminster. "Whither away so fast this hot day?" murmured the dandy. "To the house of commons," cried his strenuous friend, brushing past him. "What!" said the dandy, with a yawn, "does that go on still?"—Exchange.

Copper's Great Value.

Next after gold and silver, copper is to us the most interesting of all the metals. Fresh and free of corrosion (as seen in a new-minted cent) it is really more beautiful than gold, having a more colorful and brilliant luster. It is incomparably more useful than gold, serving as it does a vast number of employments for which there is no satisfactory substitute.

Cat's Value Regulated.

There are many legends concerning the Manx cat. One of them tells that, long ago, when the isle was ruled by the Cambrian princes, the value of a cat was set by law. One of these old laws reads as follows: "The price of a kitten before it can see is a penny; after it can see, before it catches a mouse, two pence; and after it catches a mouse, four pence."

Be Your Boy's Comrade.

All little fellows are ambitious to be comrades of the "big boys." Be a big boy yourself and get some fun out of life. And at the same time you will be building a future for your son that will be a more glorious memorial, a more effective monument to yourself than could be raised by all the marble and granite in the hills of the whole world.

First United States Currency.

Immediately after the battle of Bunker Hill $2,000,000 in American currency was issued, and by 1779 the amount had grown to $241,000,000, and the various states had issued nearly as much. In 1792 the mint at Philadelphia was established. Thus the use of American money gradually supplanted the foreign.

Apt Description.

Jimmy's father is a tailor, so he has his own ideas about outline and design. A man came along the other day when Jimmy was out on the front porch and inquired where a certain man lived. "Just in the next block," said Jimmy, "in that real tailored looking stucco house."

JOE JACKSON IS LEADING ALL HARD HITTING STARS

Showing the Way to Players in American League—Ty Cobb Not Up to Usual Form.

Chicago. May 12.—Joe Jackson, slugging outfielder with the White Sox, is blazing the trail for the batters of the American League, according to unofficial figures just released, which give him an average of .467 for the first two weeks of the 1919 season. Jacobson, of St. Louis, tops the list with an average of .615, but he has participated in only five games, while Jackson has taken part in eleven. Bagging twenty-one hits, including five two-base drives, two triples and a brace of home runs, is the remarkable batting performance of the Chicago star.

Cobb Lagging.

Ty Cobb apparently has not found his batting stride, for he is twenty-third in the list. His average is 311 for eleven games. The averages include games of Wednesday.

The leading batters for five or more games are: Jackson, St. Louis, .615; Gedeon, St. Louis, .486; Jackson, Chicago, .467; Grover, Philadelphia, .462; Smith, Cleveland, .452; Witt, Philadelphia, .429; Schang, Boston, .429; Foster, Washington, .404; Heilman, Detroit, .395; Wambsgans, Cleveland, .378.

National League.

Batting honors of the National League are held by Cravath, of Philadelphia, whose average, including games of Wednesday, is .583. Williams, also of Philadelphia, is second with .464. Other leading batters are: Young, New York, .462; Kilduff, Chicago, .444; Griffith, Brooklyn, .426; Doyle, New York, .424; Konetchy, Brooklyn, .410; Sickling, Philadelphia, .400; Miller, Boston, .400; Pick, Chicago, .395.

The International.

The first week in the International shows leaders in batting as follows: Bishop (Bing.), .706; Weinert (Bing.) .500; McInnis (Tor.), .500; Lawrey (Bing.), .476; Miller (New.), 428.

The Toronto men are batting as follows: Purtell, .286; Sandberg 263; Gibson, .250; Whiteman, .242; Holden, .241; Anderson, .241; Justin, 200; Breckenridge, .174; Hubbell, 12'; Peterson, .000; Hersche, .000; Heck, 000; Jones, .000.

Onslow leads the league in base stealing and Hubbell in pitching.

TOM LONGBOAT HOME AGAIN

Welcomed by Mayor Church—One of Many Famous "Tommys."

Toronto, May 12.—Scarcely waiting for the 5.45 troop train bringing the "details" to come to a standstill at Exhibition Camp station, Tom Longboat, the famous Indian Marathon runner, sprang to the platform and found himself grasping the hand of Mayor Church. "Well, well, Tom—welcome home," beamed his Worship. "Why didn't you run all the way? Its good to see you again, boy! Another famous Tommy. We just had Tommy Holmes, V.C., back." Then his Worship enumerated several others of that name who had won distinction. By this time other officials were welcoming the famous Indian, whose face was aglow at his reception. "Did they give you a drink on the way home?" queried Lieut. Spicer, at which the Indian grinned and answered: "No, they wouldn't let the Indians off the train at Montreal."

Longboat expresed delight at being once more in Canada. "Everything has been all right over there with me," he said. "I went away with the Sportsmen's Batt., (180th) and was away three years. Then I was with the Engineers. People were good to us at Halifax. My place—where do I live? In Caledonia," answered Tom.

DEAD HEATS IN HORSE RACES

Is there such a thing as a dead heat in a horse race? There is an argument for you. Many racing authorities and devotees maintain that it is an impossibility for two horses to pass under the wire at the same moment. They insist that a camera would detect a winner in any finish. The photographic reproduction would show one horse leading by a fraction, however small.

What do you think?

Yet others argue, and rightly too, that when one horse passes another there must be a time when they are on exactly even terms, and that it is quite within the range of possibility for that time to come at the same instant the horses pass the wire.

Many famous races have been declared dead heats. The English Derby, French Derby, Grand Prix, Saratoga Cup, Tidal Stakes, and the Metropolitan have one or more tie finishes.

The most famous dead heat was the finish of the Metropolitan Handicap in 1905 at Belmont Park, when the great Sysonby with Shaw up and Race King came in noses even.

Away back in 1875 Springbok and Preakness ran a dead heat in the Saratoga Cup. The year previous Springbok had beaten Preakness a nose in the same race. Salvator and Tembroock ran one at he old Gravesend track 25 years ago that created wild enthusiasm.

Another famous finish was in the notable race between Dobbins and Domino at the old Sheepshead Bay track on Sept. 15, 1894. This was a match race for $10,000 a side between the star three-year-olds of that day.

The English Derby run at Epsom Downs has produced several dead heats, the first in 1828, when Codland and The Colonel finished even, and the last in 1884, when St. Gatien and Harvester tied in that famous race for a $24,000 purse.

The Two Thousand Guineas stake, run at Newmarket, England, ended in a dead heat between Formosa and Moslem in 1868. The purse was $23,250.

Here are some others:

The French Derby—Sea Sick-Quinette, 1908; purse, $38,420. Milton Henry, an American jockey, rode Sea Sick.

Grand Pre de Paris—Fervacques-Patricician, 1867. Fervacques won the run-off and a purse of $25,340 by a nose.

Tidal Stakes, Sheepshead Bay — Joe Cotton-Pardee, 1885.

Travers Stakes, Saratoga—A[illegible] Acrobat, 1874. Attilla won the run-off.

Dead heats are rare in racing—and are becoming more so as the years roll by. There was only one declared in 1917, as compared with two in 1916, six in 1914, four in 1913, five in 1912, and six in 1911. The racing of 1916 was productive of three, as follows:

April 24, at Lexington—Diversion and Diamond.

May 31, at Douglas Park — John, Jun., and Big Fellow.

Sept. 17, at Lexington—Jiffy and Bill Hunley.

Export trade is not a hidden art like witchcraft or fortune-telling. The Canadian Trade Commission believes dozens of firms in Canada could score in the foreign field if they formed "groups of industries."

The Trade Commission is taking up a policy which may be stated as follows: First, to encourage consumption in Canada of Canadian produce and products to a much greater extent; second, to increase the exports, particularly of manufactured articles.

BOARD OF WORKS AGREED ON PLANS FOR NARROW BRIDGE

Edward Conroy's Tender, $251,639.35, Lowest Bid—Concrete Construction Co. Close Second With Excess of $360.65—Recommendation For Awarding Contract to be Made Friday

It may be taken as an assured fact now that a tender for the new high-level bridge will be accepted by the Board of Works Friday night.

Last night the three firms who tendered on a lump sum basis were present and this is how their tenders stand:

Canadian Engineering and Construction Co., Hamilton

For wide bridge with eliminations, $297,770.

For narrow bridge with eliminations, $276,860.

These gentlemen had figured on a basis of 40c an hour and 60c for carpenters.

They also offered to take the work on the cost-plus-fixed-price basis, guaranteeing that the work shall not cost more than their lump sum tender.

Messrs Pauler and McGee for the company were present.

Concrete Construction Co., Hamilton

For a wide bridge with eliminations, $279,000.

For a narrow bridge with eliminations, $252,000.

This firm had also figured on 40c an hour for laborers and 60c for carpenters.

The two Wellers and Mr. McGuire were present for the company, and they pointed out that $8,400 could be saved by eliminating the lamp-posts, terracatter and decorative pannels facing the refuge bags.

While working the approaches this they would concentrate their main efforts on finishing the main structure —the centre arch this year.

Edward Conroy

Wide bridge with eliminations, $271,800.

Narrow bridge bridge with eliminations, $251,639.35.

Conroy had figured on the union scale of wages in Peterborough and said a saving could be effected at anything less.

He also significantly remarked that he cannot get men today at 40c for laborers and 60c for carpenters on a 9 hour day. If the city could guarantee the 40c and 60c rate he could reduce his tender.

Enough Money

With the foregoing tenders before them the city position, financially, stands as follows for a narrow bridge:

People voted	$260,000
Govt. Grant	50,000
	$310,000
Conroy's tender	$251,639
Engineer's Fees	20,000
Estimated damages	30,000
	$301,639

This leaves the city with a margin of $8,361 to play on, but many of the committee hold the view that the land damages will run from $5,000 to $10,000 less than provided for.

The Narrow Bridge

Committee concluded that the wide bridge is out of the question—the city has not sufficient funds guaranteed, and Ald. Edgar and Taylor moved that the narrow bridge be built and the recommendation for a wide bridge rescinded.—Carried.

For Lowest Tender

Ald. McIntyre and Garside moved that Committee recommend that the lowest tender for a narrow bridge, that of Mr. Conroy for $251,639.35 be accepted, provided Mr. Conroy makes a satisfactory settlement of the Romaine street sewer claim according to his offer tonight.

The difference between Conroy and the Concrete Construction Co. is only $360.65 in the former's favor.

Would Adjust Claim

Earlier in the evening Mr. Vincent Eastwood manager of the Royal Bank, had assured the committee that he would guarantee that Mr. Conroy's bonds for the proper fulfillment are satisfactory. He also asked that the disputed $7,000 which the city claims Conroy owes the city in connection with the Romaine street sewer block a fair tender for the bridge, he was authorised to say Conroy agrees that he would abide by any adjustment made by the city solicitor and his solicitor, without the interference of any third party.

VETERANS PREPARE PROGRAM FOR BIG CAMPAIGN NEXT WEEK

Joint Meeting of Citizens and Members of G. W. V. A. Arrange Final Details of Drive to Raise $15,000.

At a representative meeting of the members of the Great War Veterans Association and the citizens of Peterborough held last night in the rooms of the Association plans were made for the campaign next week to raise $15,000 to complete the Veterans' new hall. Mr. R. Denne presided and was assisted by Capt. R. E. Layfield.

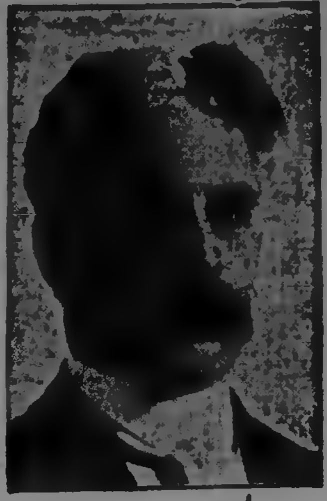
Capt. Layfield addressed the meeting and outlined the work to be done, and also gave an idea of the program for the week. The campaign is to start Monday next and will close on Saturday. Every evening there will be some kind of entertainment, some of which will be free of charge. On Monday night Mayor Duncan will hand the new hall over to the G.W.V.A. and on behalf of the Association Capt. Morrison will accept the gift. Capt. Jenkins Provincial President of the G.W.V.A. will also be present on this ocasion and will give a brief outline of the aims and objects of the G.W.V.A. The band of the local branch will be in attendance and will play during the intervals. Every citizen is invited to be present Monday evening and there will be no admission charge.

The city has been divided into districts in order to facilitate the collecting of the money required and the teams for these districts were chosen last night. A captain is in charge of each team which is composed of an equal number of returned soldiers and civilians. Lists have been made of all the homes in the city and in this way everyone will have an opportunity to contribute to the fund.

Each evening during the week all the teams will meet for dinner at the new hall, when returns will be made and plans for the next days' operations will be discussed. The ladies of the Ladies' Auxiliary have the catering for these dinners in hand.

Mr. W. H. Dunsford has been appointed treasurer for the campaign and all returns will be made to him daily.

The Ladies Auxiliary of the G.W.V.A. also met last night and plans were made for their part in the week's program. Besides being responsible for the evening dinners for the teams, the ladies are giving a dance on Friday night and a number of them are also taking active part in canvassing the city.



SIR ROBERT BORDEN
Canadian Premier, is returning to Canada, according to Reuter's, Limited, because the political situation is said to require his presence. Sir George E. Foster will probably take Sir Robert's place as head of the Canadian delegation.

Seaplanes Still Fail to Get Away

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Trepassey, Nfld., May 13.—Reports of high seas in mid-ocean with easterly winds over the western half of the Transatlantic flight route, made it highly improbable that the seaplanes, N-C 1 and N-C 3, would take the air today for the Azores. In this vicinity the wind and visibility conditions were poor but weather observers declared the prospects for tomorrow both off the coast and at sea were the "best for some time."

Another Vimy Ridge Hero Is Home Again

LANCE CORPORAL JOHN ANDERSON RETURNS FROM OVERSEAS.

Lance-Corporal John Anderson, nephew of Mr. Robert Stuart, President of the Quaker Oats Co., returned home from overseas last evening after being discharged in Toronto yesterday. Corporal Anderson graduated at the P.C.I. this city. He enlisted July 6th, 1919, and sailed with the 5th draft of the Cobourg heavy battery for England on September 30th the same year. He was attached to the 2nd Canadian heavy artillery in France on March 3rd, 1917, since which hime he has seen a full measure of active service against the enemy. He served gallantly at Vimy Ridge, Arras, Amiens and most of the Canadian 1918 "shows," as the Canucks lightly allude to twentieth century battles, and which culminated in British victory.

Corporal Anderson came over the Atlantic on the Muretania."

This is the substance of an order issued today by the Railway Board on the application of the municipalities interested.

CANADIANS NOT SO MANY GEESE

MR. BURNHAM BELIEVES THAT TARIFF IS SAFE FROM ASSAULTERS.

The Bonner-Worth Co., Ltd., have received the following letter from J. H. Burnham, M.P.:

Dear sirs:—I have received a very large petition, numbering some hundreds of names, headed by that of Allan Pilling asking me to help in seeing that Canadian labor is protected.

There is evidently, as in the case of all these petitions—a number of which I have received lately—a fear that tariff reform which is being threatened in some quarters will result in throwing Canada open to cheap foreign labor, or, what is the same thing, to the products of cheap foreign labor.

The temptation to people to look to themselves as consumers often betrays them into courting disaster. It is, in the case of Canada, surely an attempt to kill the goose that lays the golden egg. It will, however, be found I think that I am safe in saying, that the Canadian public is not a goose, and proper control will be maintained in tariff, public ownership and other matters by this Government at any rate, notwithstanding pressure that is being brought to bear upon it even from its own ranks.

You will oblige me by publishing this letter in the local press in order that all the signatories may see that I have received their petition and what my attitude is on the matter.

PEACE TERMS AS GIVEN AUSTRIA

SAME IN ALL PARTICULARS AS THOSE IMPOSED ON HUNS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 13.—In the peace with Austria, now well toward completion a responsibility clause has been inserted identical with that in the German treaty with the exception that the first clause, providing for the trial of former Emperor William is omitted. The remaining clauses make provision for trial of military offenders by the international court martial.

The frontier delimitation of new Austria presents one serious issue in the drawing of a treaty somewhat similar to that of the Sarr Valley in German treaty. This is as regards the lower Tyrol, a section of which is detached from Austria and placed withing the boundaries of Italy. It includes the cities of Bozen and Meran with an estimated German population of about 250,000. The reason for attaching this German-speaking population to Italy is establishment of a strategic frontier giving Italy adequate protection from invasion from the north.

Claims Reward For McCullough's Arrest

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, May 13.—A claimant has appeared for the $1,000 reward offered by the Government for apprehension of Frank McCullough, condemned murder, who escaped from Toronto jail and was recaptured by police last week. It is understood that the informant is of the male persuasion, contrary to many rumors. Many demands for clemency in McCullough's case are going forward to Ottawa. He is said to be despondent.

It is believed German dyes under Chinese labels are being sold in New York at much lower prices than the American article.

SOCIALISTS ISSUE APPEAL FOR SIGNING OF TREATY

Say That Not to Sign Would Involve Masses in Fresh Disaster, Severe as Terms May Be.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, May 13.—"Even if important changes are not made by the negotiations begun at Versailles, there remains no choice but to bow to compulsion and sign the treaty," says an appeal of the central committee of the Independent Socialist party in their party organ, Die Freiheit, this morning.

"Not signing," continues the appeal, "means the retention of our prisoners of war, the occupation of our raw material districts, the tightening of the blockade, unemployment, hunger and death en masse. It is the proletariat that would suffer most terribly from the consequences. Peace, as hard and oppressive as it may be, is the necessary assumption for the possibility of rebuilding our social and economic life in the spirit of the revolutionary proletariat."

The appeal is prefaced by a denunciation of the sevrity of the peace terms. It concludes with a demand that the workmen of all countries unite against capitalism for a world revolution.

HUN GOVERNMENT MAY BE WRECKED

BUT CHANCELLOR SAYS NO ADMINISTRATION COULD FULFILL PEACE TERMS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, May 13.—The possibility of change in the Government of Germany as a result of the presentation of the Allied peace terms was discovered by Philip Scheidemann, the German chancellor at Berlin, today, according to a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from that city. The chancellor denounced the peace terms which, he said, represented a "brutal dictated peace," it is said. The statement was made to foreign journalists in the former chancellor's palace and in part follows:

"It is possible a Government might be formed which would sign the peace terms but it is doubtful whether the Allies would be satisfied with such a Government. A reactionary Government is out of all question and a Communist and Independent Government would be acting for the people of whom they would represent only a small minority. Even if such Government did sign the treaty it would be just as impossible for them to fulfill the conditions as it would be for us."

ITALIAN PROBLEM IS NEAR SOLUTION

PREMIER ORLANDO SEEMS MORE DISPOSED TO MAKE FURTHER CONCESSIONS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 13.—The Italian problem seemed nearer of solution in today's conferences among the representatives here and it was thought probable that a basis of understanding would be reached during the day. The Italian representatives are reported to be evidencing more of a willingness to make concessions.

The discussions of the day began when Premier Orlando called upon colonel E. House, of the American delegation. The Council of Four held no meeting during the morning. No further communications had been received from German representatives at Versailles and experts to whom the last notes from Count Von Brockdorff-Rantzau had been referred had not yet reported. No meeting of the Council being considered necessary therefore, the Allied Premiers devoted the forenoon to individual work.

PLAN COLLUSION WITH AUSTRIANS

GERMANS SEEK CHANCE TO CONFER WITH THEIR FORMER ALLIES.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 13.—It developed this afternoon that Von Brockdorff-Rantzau head of the German peace delegation intends to ask permission to send the Germans delegates to receive the Austrian representatives, according to "Havas Agency." It had previously been announced that the Allies intended to keep the delegations wholly apart.

A Sheriff entered a train in Michigan, bought a drink of whiskey from a porter and then arrested him.

Says Peace Treaty Is Monstrous

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, May 13.—Philip Scheidemann, Chancellor, in his speech before the National Assembly here said that occasion was the turning point in the life of the German people as the assembly was to decide their attitude toward "what our adversaries call peace conditions."

"To keep our nations alive," he said, "and that and nothing else is our duty, we are pursuing nationalistic fusion. No questions of the prestige and no thirst for power have a part in our deliberations. Bare life is what we must have for our land and nation today while everyone feels the throttling hand at his throat.

"Let me speak without tactical considerations. The thing which is at the basis of our discussion is this thick volume in which 100 sentences begin, 'Germany renounces.' This dreadful and murderous volume, by which confession our own unworthiness, our consent to pitiless disruption, our agreement to helotry and slavery are to be extorted, this book must not become the future code of law."

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

TUESDAY, MAY 13, 1919

NO LONGER A NOVELTY.

MAYOR DUNCAN complains that when he and Ald. Phelan visited Ottawa recently on business in connection with a grant for the Hunter street bridge, they were not met at the depot by J. H. Burnham, M.P., but by the Salvation Army. For all of which there may be a reason.

This is the third or fourth time that a civic delegation has gone to Ottawa to secure a more definite promise as to Federal aid in building the Bridge, so that Mr. Burnham may naturally enough have concluded that it has become a habit. Anyway, one delegation seems to get no further ahead than those preceding. The most recent report is that the Government will make a grant of $50,000 if the bridge costs approximately $200,000. This much information was secured by the first delegation that went to the capital for the purpose.

A member of Parliament may weary of repeated visits dealing with matters that could be safely entrusted to his keeping. Whereas, the Salvation Army never gives up so long as the lamp holds on to burn.

JUMPS SHORT AND LONG.

SPEAKING FOR THE WEST, the Lethbridge Herald says that no one expects a drastic change in the tariff in the way of a sudden and long jump from protection to free trade.

There are different kinds of jumps. A succession of short and frequent springs, such as the statesmen represented by the Herald, have in mind, will attain in the end, and with results as nationally disastrous, the same goal as one long and sudden leap toward the same objective.

BUYING OUTSIDE OF CANADA.

SIR ADAM BECK sent to Sweden for supplies required by the Hydro Commission, supplies that could have been made right here in Peterborough by workmen who were then and are now idle. Local manufacturers and Organized Labor protested, but without apparent effect.

Sir Adam Beck proposes to improve the street car service in this city by adding two new cars to the equipment. He had these cars built in Cincinnati by high-priced American labor, while Canadian mechanics were walking the streets. Again Organized Labor in this city protests to Toronto, but Sir Adam Beck seems disposed to hold on his way regardless alike of either protests or criticism. And yet there are those who profess to wonder if Canadian labor shows any signs of unrest or discontent.

The Federal Government announces that home labor will be employed on the national railways and that all the new equipment required will be manufactured in this country. The same policy is to be adopted in the shipbuilding program even though certain members of Parliament advocate the importation of some of the finished material required.

THE FUTURE OF PROTECTION.

WHY SHOULD THE LEADERS in the West be talking free trade when the discussion of fiscal questions has taken an exactly opposite trend both in England and in the United States? Is Canada to stand alone among the nations as an exponent of a theory to promote the selfish interest of a section of the Dominion, who, having eyes, see no great distance into the future?

Under the administration of President Wilson, during his first term in office, backed up as the President was by a favorable majority of both branches of Congress, the United States adopted a measure of free trade. It is incorrect to say that this policy was endorsed by the people when President Wilson was re-elected in 1916. In that election the war overshadowed every other issue. The appeal to the people was not made on the fiscal policy, but the slogan of the Democrats was: "He kept us out of war." The South voted solidly democratic, as usual. The alien electors of the Western States, those whose native affiliations assured the world's enemies of their sympathy, were caught by the peace propaganda and, casting in their lot with the South, made the re-election of Mr. Wilson possible, even though the true American spirit of the nation was steadfastly against him and his neutrality propaganda.

The protectionists of the United States have once more secured the upper hand in Congress, and the old fiscal policy is to be restored. The program is already arranged. This was announced when, speaking before the manufacturers' club of Philadelphia, Senator Primrose, who will be chairman of the finance-tariff committee in the new Republican Senate, said:

> "Once again we must take up the task under new and unprecedented conditions, of framing a protective schedule which will provide adequate protection for American capital and labor, and secure the industrial independence of the United States. A protective tariff which will very largely insure the Mexican market to the American producer, thus enabling us to maintain the high scale of wages required by our living standards, and start the country once more upon a triumphal march of development and progress.
> "We must prepare for it, not as heretofore, against foreign competition from nations which were either free trade or largely had merely a protective tariff, but as against industries of nations aided in every conceivable way by government, subvention, subsidies, contracts, regulations, and tariffs. In other words, a protective tariff system is more vitally necessary to the United States in the immediate future than ever before in its history. Without its proper enactment, distress and perhaps ruin will stare our people in the face. We must proceed in a heroic way."

Canadian statesmen know just what to expect. If the British preference goes through as proposed, the Americans by way of reprisal will build up the tariff wall against this country higher than ever. It is doubtful if even that provision, which makes the admission of Canadian wheat to the markets of the United States conditionally possible, will be retained. Canadian wheat is now allowed that privilege, the reciprocal conditions having been granted by Canadian order-in-Council as a war measure, but that order is now certain to be revoked. The products of the prairie farms in this country must not go to make business for American mills and labor while Canadian mills, labor and railways stand idle. With all but one of the transcontinental transportation lines under State control in this country, the time is certainly inopportune for diverting traffic from them.

Apparently there are differences in statesmen, whether in the national or civic field. Senator Primrose says that the United States must maintain the high scale of wages required by the living standards of the United States. Here is a statesman chosen by his colleagues for the highest committee chairmanship in Congress who would improve the conditions of the workingman by raising his wages. Peterborough aldermen cut the wages of the civic employes, regardless of how they live, and would hold down the pay schedule in other lines with the plea that they cannot compete with the manufacturers of the United States, where everyone knows a higher rate of pay is the rule.

If the Canadian workman, protected as he now is by the same tariff wall that shelters the manufacturer, is idle, how in the name of all that is just will he fare if that tariff is thrown down? But to throw it down would not affect the farmers of the West, and it is little, apparently, that they care what happens the wage-earners of the East, so long as the West has it wilful and selfish way.

But the signs are not right for Western success. Leader McKenzie has declared himself a protectionist, making the statement officially in the House. In this he speaks not only for the Liberals of the Maritime Provinces, but for those of Ontario and Quebec as well. With such a combination against them, British Columbia being lined up in the same rank, the three wheat growing provinces cannot hope to control the nation's tariff policy. The tail in this case, as usual, will be unable to wag the dog. And the new party that is proposed in the West will be equally powerless.

NEARER THE MILLENNIUM.

LEADING LONDON newspapers declared that the millennium is not yet here, even though the League of Nations has been established. Perhaps not, but the millennium is nearer. The nations of the earth have in the past made the mistake of waiting in inactivity for that blissful season to arrive. Now it has occurred to them to arise and meet the millennium half way.

CLEAN-UP WEEK.

(Lethbridge Herald.)

CLEAN-UP WEEK is now upon us, and it is "meet, right, and the bounden duty" of every citizen to clean up his back yard for one week in the year. The city demands it, and Chief Hardy enforces it.

The clean-up week is something of a hoary tradition, much the same as the annual spring cleaning. It has its uses and its value, in the virtue, it is to be presumed, that doing a thing once is better than not doing it at all.

We have nothing to say against the clean-up week, which, in many cases, like the spring housecleaning, is an annual visitation, as most married men have come to regard it. But why the one-week-a-year clean-up? Why should not every week by a clean-up week in the measure that we, let us hope all of us, wash and clean ourselves every day instead of one day in the week or one week in the year? And why should our city fathers consider that the vacant lots and the citizens' backyards should be cleaned up once and not fifty-two times in the year? It may be that, in cleanliness being considered next to godliness, we use a certain week of the year to keep the city clean in the way we keep a certain day of the week to be godly. But that does not get anywhere.

In the interest of a clean city there should be a clean-up every week. The lesson of the clean-up week is keep your backyards and vacant lots as dirty as you like every week in the year but one. This does not encourage the clean-up spirit which should be present in ever city which aspires to be a clean city, and which if it cannot be encouraged should be enforced in the interests of general healthfulness.

Sir Robt. Falconer Approves Picture

The following is what Sir Robt. Falconer, President of the Toronto University, thinks of the picture which is being competed for by the schools:—

"The picture of the visit of the fleets of Britain, France, and the United States to Quebec, in 1908, is both beautiful and highly interesting. It commemorates one of the great incidents of Canadian history the Ter-centenary of the founding of Quebec. It is also a significant indication of the friendship of the three great peoples, which has been cemented in the war, a friendship which we hope will be enduring throughout the coming centuries. In the future there will be many more visits paid to our mighty St. Lawrence by vessels of our friends and Allies, who have endured and accomplished so much in common.

Drinking Fountain In Victoria Park

IS SUGGESTION OF ALDERMAN HAMILTON—PARKS COMMITTEE MEET.

The Council's Railway and Parks Committee met last night

The Peterborough Horticultural Society enquired if the city will purchase the garden tools used in the city's parks now that the city is taking care of these pounds. The Society will be asked to place a valuation on these tools.

Chairman Eld. Edgar reported Victoria Park in very good shape at the present time. Several loads of cinders have been put on the paths and other needed improvements made.

Ald. Hamilton thought it would be a splendid idea to install a drinking fountain in Victoria Park.

The Liberal Leader and the Tariff

The exact words used by Liberal Leader McKenzie in stating his position on the tariff question in Parliament were as follows:

"While I am not a very high protectionist, I am not in favor of the Chinese wall that the member for West Peterborough (Mr. Burnham) would like to be built. I cannot help knowing that in this very steel plate that we are talking about, and in Sydney, N.S., and the market which that steel works has furnished for our coal in the Province of Nova Scotia, and that thousands of men are employed in connection with the coal mines today who would not have been employed were it not for the steel works, that is all brought about by the assistance which the Government in this country gave to the development of the steel and iron industries of the country. If there is to be a further development in connection with the steel industry and the coal industry by the building of plate and the building of ships in the country. I think it is a wise move along the lines of development within our own borders, and I don't think anyone is preaching any political heresy in this country, and making ourselves self-sustaining and independent as much as that can possibly be done."

CABLE PROTEST TO PREMIER

JEWISH CONGRESS OF CANADA ASKS SIR ROBERT TO INTERCEDE ON BEHALF OF RACE

People of the Jewish faith in Toronto crowded the Strand Theatre to the doors Sunday at a mass meeting called by the Canadia Jewish Congress Committee to protest against the atrocities being perpetrated against their race in Poland. Similar meetings were held in every city in Canada yesterday.

A resolution was passed at the meeting appealing to Premier Borden as the representative of Canada at the Peace Conference, in the name of humanity and the ideals for which the allies fought and the 800 000 Jews who bled for the freedom of the world, to intercede with the powers of the Conference to put an end to the inhumanities petretrated against the Jews in Poland, of which information from unimpeachable sources had been received.

Lyon Cohen of Montreal, president of the Jewish Congress Committee presided. On the platform were Father Minehan, H. M. Caiserman, General Secretary of the Jewish Congress Committee, M. Goldstick Lindsay Crawford and E. B. Copp, M. P., for Westmoreland, N. B.

The chairman in a few prefacing remarks observed that the League of Nations would have failed already if it did not give political and religious liberty to every nation and race. By the Jews it had been looked forward to as a supreme goal but it had turned out to be a goal of supreme disappointment. Some of the nations called into being by the League, he said, are imposing conditions on the Jews equal to the worst tyranny they had ever suffered. "The Jews of Poland are being unmercifully persecuted."

Father Minehan told his hearers that he belonged to a race that had known oppression, politically and religiously. The iron had entered his soul and now he hated oppression individually or nationally. The oppression of a race such as the Jews, who had always been a peace loving people and especially when it was considered that the time was the twentieth century, was enough to arouse a tidal wave of indignation throughout the world. This, he said was doubly true when the oppression came from a country which but a few years ago was itself ground into the dust. Father Minehan hoped that the account of 14,000 Jews being massacred in Lemberg was exaggerated, but he was assured that it was only too true.

Lindsay Crawford deplored the fact that the persecution had taken place within the allied camp. Poland was a country set up as a buttress between Bolshevik Russia and unknown Germany, and given its freedom, yet it had covered itself with the blood of fourteen thousand Jews. He appealed for the right of the Jews in Canada as well as in Poland, to live a free life, touching briefly in the Immigration Bill now before the Government. "It is our duty," the speaker said, "in the name of civilization, liberty, justice and Canada to protest against the injustice which would prevent the Jews from living their own individual lives."

E. B. Copp, M.P., said he had come to the conclusion that the right thinking people of Canada were at one with the Jews protesting against the persecutions in Poland.

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING

By Dr. W. A. BRADY

Mr. Micawber would have made a successful physician. As a doctor he could have called anything the patient complained of a "heavy cold" and then enjoyed himself while waiting for something to turn up.

Dr. Osler wrote, some twelve years ago, that "cold has been for years regarded as an important causative factor of pneumonia. The frequent occurrence of an initial chill has been one reason for this widespread belief."

The frequent occurrence of an initial chill in cases of septicaemia (blood poisoning) from infected wounds has caused a similar belief regarding septic infection, by ignorant people.

The frequent occurrence of an initial chill in malaria has been likewise misinterpreted by doctors in times past, when low, damp ground was held responsible for the infection which everybody who knows is carried by the anopholes breed of mosquito.

The frequent occurrence of an initial chill in erysipelas, and in other infectious diseases, has led to the same absurd belief regarding "exposure to cold." The septicaemia or fever (blood poisoning) following childbirth is ascribed usually to "taking cold" if the victim is so unfortunate as to be under the care of a Sairey Gamp.

Dr Osler also wrote, twelve years ago, "there can be no question as to the close association of pneumonia with exposure"—and he meant exposure to cold or inclement weather. But that was twelve years ago. There seems to be a considerable doubt about it now, because our laboratory investigators are carrying on various experiments with a view to determining whether exposure really has any causative relation with the respiratory infections. Thus far their efforts have proved disappointing to the venerable adherents of the catching cold theory. Pneumonia was seldom treated in the open air in the coldest winter weather at the time Dr. Osler wrote, as it is today.

Pneumonia is infectious, like diphtheria. It is contracted in precisely the same way. Its seasonal occurrence and geographic distribution are identical with those of diphtheria. Nobody thinks of "exposure" or inclement weather as important factors of diphtheria. By the time the laboratory investigators shall have wearied of the task of trying to prove a huge mistake we foresee a great scramble among the medical authorities to revise their chapters on this subject, for the exposure myth is nowadays utilized only by the Micawbers of medicine.

Morphine Addiction.

"In our family we have a young woman who is a morphine addict. She acquired the habit in a hospital after an operation on her eyes. She is determined to break it, and we are doing all we can to help her. Will you please give a course to pursue? We have no doctor and hope to avoid confiding in any. She is reducing her daily amount already and we urgently need your assistance.

"F. E. M."

You have already confided in one, but the wrong doctor. Only by placing the young woman under the personal care of a doctor and the constant attendance of a competent nurse can the habit be cured. The wiser plan is to send the patient to a hospital for treatment. It is hardly possible to overcome the morphine habit by a mere tapering off process voluntarily followed.

Suppurating Lymph Node.

"Under my right jaw there is a swelling which the doctor called an infected gland. He lanced it, and ever since then more or less pus comes from it and sometimes it swells up. Please tell me what kind of treatment I should try. J. S."

If the lancing was done more than two months ago probably the infected lymph node should be completely removed.

Freckles.

"You have stated that lotions and other applications to remove freckles are usually caustic and irritating to the skin. Would there be any harm in the careful application to the freckle only (not to the whole skin surface) of a solution of thirty (30) grains of salicylic acid in half an ounce of flexible collodion each night until the freckle comes away? I have a girl friend who tried this for freckles on her cheeks and nose and he obtained excellent results."

The formula is about as nearly harmful as any freckle remover. Use it sparingly and see that it touches only the freckle itself.

A CERTAIN LIVELINESS IN THE BOARD OF WORKS

Prejudice Against Long-Time Servant of the City Charged—Storm Arose Over Question of Engaging Assistant St. Inspector

The question of filling the position vacation by Assistant Commissioner Fitzgerald raised a storm in the Board of Works last evening when the assertion that some members of the Council and the engineer are prejudiced against Martin Neary was freely offered and combatted.

Martin Neary applied for the job and His Worship started the ball by suggesting that under existing condition the city could get along by the engineer appointing a foreman when needed.

Ald. Morrison and Turner moved that Neary's application be received and acted on later if necessary.

Ald. Gainey and McIntyre moved in amendment that Martin Neary be appointed assistant street commissioner in place of Alex. Fitzgerald, resigned and at the same salary, $750 a year.

Deserves Recognition.

Ald. Garside contended that Neary, who had worked faithfully for the city many years on and off, should be given employment, if possible. "He has," he said, "a large family and is helping to support a son back from overseas. He would vote that he receive the appointment as assistant street commissioner."

A Certain Liveliness.

Ald. McIntyre talked strong for the appointment, and complained bitterly of unwarranted prejudice against Neary. And here arose a certain liveliness between Ald. McIntyre and Ald. Morrison as to whether the former was out of order or not.

Mayor Duncan objected to the amendment going through on the ground that it would take from the engineer his authority for hiring vested in him by a previous Council.

Ald. Phelan here turned his guns on the engineer, whom he charged with holding prejudice against Neary, a fully first-class foreman. "The only complaint against him is that he is strict with his men and gets the best out of them. This was his record in Mr. Hay's time, and a good one for the city. I had no hesitancy in asking the engineer, our relationship being pleasant to appoint Neary foreman of sewer work, and felt it a slap in the face when another man was engaged. And I can come to no other conclusion, but that the engineer entertains prejudice against Neary."

The engineer: "I told you in my office I did not consider Neary a good foreman."

Ald. McIntyre was satisfied that were Ald. Turner's resolution put through there would be no vacancies arise for Martin Neary.

His Worship: "The Board has no right to relieve the engineer of his powers to engage or discharge unless the resolution giving him those pow- resolution giving him those powers is ers is rescinded.

Ald. McIntyre: "Then rescind that resolution."

Could Not Understand.

His Worship could not understand the attitude of some of the Board. "The very men," he declared, "who are urging the appointment of an official under the engineer's supervision were previously strong for leaving such appointments in his hands."

Ald Edgar gave a resume of troubles in the past that led up to the Council of 1917, vesting the engineer with absolute authority to engage his men.

More Shots.

Ald. Phelan here again turned his guns on the engineer, and more liveliness arose. He said the engineer makes mistakes as well as any other man. "For instance he engaged a foreman whom on coming up town I would find frequently loafing around the engineer's office instead of being on his job. When the city is paying $5 a day for a foreman he has not right to be loafing around the office in working hours." Preliminary detailed business connected with the work and its requirement concluded the chairman should be arranged and provided for at times other than those when the men would naturally need the coaching and watching of their foreman.

Prejudiced of Course.

Ald. McIntyre here got in a last shot, and reiterated that prejudice against Neary existed. He declared that when foreman he could not get the tools and appliances needed from the engineer, who for three weeks at a time would not go near the work on which Neary was engaged to see how he was getting along or if he needed anything.

The engineer denied this and said he supplied all the tools and material necessary.

At this juncture the motion to just receive Neary's application carried.

Ald. McIntyre: "Another one for the engineer."

Gets 4 Pigeons From Buffulo

Detective Newhall received from Buffalo this morning four young homing pigeons of the best breed. The birds are valued at $10 each. Detective Newhall is a pigeon enthusiast, having owned in the Old Country some 300 homing, or carrier pigeons, which he took delight in flying long distances.

Racing pigeons in England and Europe is now almost as popular as racing horses, and their flights are carefully recorded and timed.

In the war pigeons played an important part in carrying the despatches, and the signallers of every battalion always had a flock for use, in action or out of action.

It was revealed at the aeronautical convention at Atlantic City, N.J., that a 20-year-old youth has completed for the navy a device by which aviators may know their location, even in the dark.

The treaty of peace promulgated by the Allied nations and now in possession of the Germans leaves little to be said for it is explicit and detailed to a degree. The outstanding feature is that the Germany of before the war is obliterated, swept out of existence. In her place the Allied nations propose to the German people to substitute a newer Germany chastened, perhaps, but a better Germany, a Germany with a national conscience unwarped by militarism and worship of brute force.

It is true beyond dispute that the treaty strips Germany of vast territory, of her army and navy, of much of her resources. But in return the Allied nations have given to Germany something far better, the opportunity of returning into the family of nations, of becoming again a civilized nation, with real ideals, worthy aspirations and a better understanding of what constitutes moral obligation.

Germany repentant will prosper as never before, for she will have no vast army and navy to support. Germany unrepentant, will feel the door. Her people can open the door. Opportunity is knocking on Germany's power of the League of Nations. Opportunity to a renewed and a better understanding with the rest of the world. Her people can make or unmake their future.

The United States entered the war in a spirit of altruism, to conserve the freedom of the world, to fight that democracy might survive. We have fought and helped to win the greatest war in all history. We have asked nohing from Germany. We want nothing material. But we do want good behavior on the part of Germany. We want her to live up to the terms of the treaty. And if she does, then the United States will assist her when Germany's sincere repentance and desire for real democracy are shown in acts and deeds and not merely by word of mouth.

And did it so happen that Germany should again fall under baneful influences, then the United States will feel constrained to shoulder the gun again and take up the task where we left off on November 11, 1918. But in all sincerity we hope that Germany has seen the errors of her ways and that she will accept the inevitable with good heart, looking toward a better and a brighter future.

why, if Conroy is indebted to the city to the amount of $7,000 it has not been yaid.

Ald. Phelan replied that as the late T. A. S. Hay, the engineer at the time Romaine street sewer was built, was the only man acquainted with the pros and cons o fthe dispute the city had not aggressively pressed for a settlement.

Board decided to instruct the city solicitor to meet Mr. Conroy's solicitor in order to settle the Romaine street sewer claims in accordance with Mr. Eastwood's offer this evening on behalf of Mr. Conroy.

Decision Postponed

The committee here concluded, with consent of Ald. McIntyre, to withdraw the above resolution and defer action on the tenders till Friday night.

TO WELCOME THE 21st

Preparations by Former Members of the Famous Battalion

A meeting of former members of the famous 21st battalion was held last night in the G.W.V.A. rooms where plans were formulated for the reception by the battalion on its return to Canada.

Army airplanes June 1 will begin patrol of California forests to watch for fires.

WATER STREET TO BE PAVED IN CONCRETE BY DAY LABOR

Teamsters Get Raise of 50c Day in Their Wages —Hope For Another Grant For Bridge—St. Commissioner Given $150 a Year Increase

The city engineer reported to the Board of Works last night the estimated cost of surface drainage at Cricket Place to be $375. This would drain into a ditch on the Quaker Oats property, and Ald. Edgar suggested that this company be consulted before any action is voted.

Chairman Phelan reported that but $2.000 had been appropriated for surface drainage this year and half of that had already been expended.

It was decided to lay 12 inch pipe drains across Driscoll Terrace or Cricket Place to drain this locality into an adjacent ditch.

Grant in Sight?

The Board of Railways Commission wrote that the Board will sit in Ottawa on June 10th when Council's request for a grant toward the cost of charging the crossing grade for the high level bridge will be given consideration.

Met by Salvation Army.

The Mayor in reportin his trip to Ottawa with Ald. Phelan said they were met at the station by the Salvation Army and not by Mr. Burnham. Dr. Reid, Minister of Railways and Canals, had assured the deputation of $50.000 toward the new pridge should its cost reach approximately $300,000.

Peterborough Improvements.

A letter from the Dominion Public Works Department assured the Board that when the supplementary estimates are under consideration in three weeks' time the matter of a new post office and customs house and a dry dock for Peterborough will not be lost sight of by the Hon. Mr. Carvell, Minister of Public Works.

Pavement by Day Labor.

Ald. Turner and Morrison moved that Water street from corner of Charlotte to King and along King to George be paved with concrete, and that the work be done by day labor under the supervision of the Board or Works Department. Carried.

Lavatories at Exhibition.

The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition asked permission to connect the lavatories to be provided on the grounds with the sewer on Lansdowne street. It is the intention to use these grounds for sports four or five months in the year.

Ald. Hamilton and Turner moved that this request be granted.

Ald. Edgar and Garside moved in amendment that the request be referred to the Legal Committee to investigate the legality of granting this request.

The resolution was withdrawn and the amendment carried as a resolution.

Costs Piling Up.

Mayor Duncan and Ald. Taylor moved that Mr. Frank Barber, engineer of new bridge, submit an itemized bill up to date for services rendered. Carried.

Salary Raised.

On motion of Mayor and Ald. Garside Street Commissioner Evans' salary was increased from $1350 to $1500 a year.

Street Drainage.

James Simpson asked the city to lower a ditch opposite his property, 112 James street, where he would lay a drain to keep his cellar free of water. This went to the chairman and engineer with power to act.

A request from Arthur Mitchell for improved drainage at his property, corner Aylmer and Rink streets, went to the engineer to report.

Mr. Morrow's request that a ditch opposite his property on Towsend street between Rubidge and Park, be filled in. Went to the engineer to report.

More Wages for Teamsters.

The city teamsters who are getting $5.50 a day, asked an increase.

Ald. Morrison and Gainey moved a dollar increase.

Ald. Turner and McIntyre moved an amendment that the increase be 50c. This carried, $6 a day to be paid from May 15.

Road Repairs.

On motion by the Mayor and Ald. Morrison the engineer will report on repairs to the road on Benson avenue.

Street Watering.

Complaints were made that the street watering cart on Hunter street stops half way between Bethune and Stewart streets and then turns back.

Street Engineer Evans explained that the cart only went over the tracks to lay the dust thereon, and it must stop somewhere. Should the cart go, say as far as Stewart, before turning back, then some one would be asking for it to go further still.

This explanation will be submitted to complainants.

Street Numbering.

The numbers running north on George start at 0 at Lake street and end at 320 and 321 at Charlotte street and it is the intention in the early future to strike Charlotte street as the centre of the city and re-number the houses therefrom from one northward and from one southward, Charlottee street being the zero point for each direction—north and south. The numbers running south from George to Lake when thus reversed will connect at the latter street in correct rotation as planned for in the above resolution.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat if you feel Backachy or Have Bladder Trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poisons, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

CENTREVILLE FOR GOOD ROADS PLAN

PETITION THAT PETERBOROUGH-PORT HOPE ROAD BE A PROVINCIAL HIGHWAY.

A good roads deputation of Peterborough citizens composed of W. H. Bradburn, chairman, H. O. Fisk, secretary, C. Rogers and R. Denne, met the South Monaghan Township Council last evening at Centreville, regarding the taking over of the Peterborough to Port Hope road as a Provincial Highway. The Council unanimously adopted a resolution petitioning the Ontario Government to take over this road as a Provincial Highway should this scheme go through. They are very enthusiastic in the matter and seemed desirous of getting their share of the Provincial, and Federal monies that are soon to be spent on road improvement.

In conversation with the Clerk of Hope Township he expressed himself as highly pleased with the work that had been done by the Department on that part of the Toronto to Montreal road passing through Hope. The old blacksmith shop as well as some other buildings at Welcome, have been removed to permit an easy curve at this point. The Crown of the hill has also been taken off and the valley on the west side filled up. This previously dangerous point has been completely transformed and beautified.

The Committee were advised that the Highway Improvement in Hope Township for 1918 added one mill to their assessment.

Kingston—Laborers, 25 to 40c; carpenters are asking 70c.

WEALTH THAT IS HIDDEN IN THE ARCTIC CIRCLE

Explorer Steffanson Tells Parliament That Only Fringe of Canada Has Been Developed

Ottawa, May 13.—The striking facts which Mr. Vilhjalmuir Stefansson, the discoverer of the "blonde Eskimo," laid before Parliament with regard to the possibilities of the North land are considered to have an important bearing upon the prospects of the Grand Trunk Pacific.

The Grand Trunk Pacific is the most northerly of Canada's transcontinental lines, and, apart from its through business, the success of the railway will largely be dependent upon the development of the country which it serves, and the development of the great areas to the north.

Many Canadians—probably the majority—have looked upon these great northern territories as being a national asset of little account. Mr. Stefansson, who speaks with the authority of knowledge, says that this view is far from being correct. "Instead of Canada being a country with a vast hinterland of no value," says the explorer, "it is really a great domain with a southern fringe or orchardland and a vast hinterland of valuable grazing country."

Mr. Stefensson estimates that there are 1,000,006 square miles of grazing land to the north of the Grand of the Grand Trunk Pacific, and if the areas covered with forests are included there are 3,000,000 square miles of land available. There has been a persistent undervaluation of the country to the north, Mr. Stefansson thinks, and one of the reasons for this undervaluation has been the mistaken estimate of the climate, and another the undervaluation of the natural resources. There was a similar misapprehension regarding Alaska at the time the United States bought that territory from Russia for $7,200,000. Secretary Seward was attacked for throwing away the nation's money for a "lump of ice." When people realised Alaska had value the first thing they started after was the minerals then the forests, and latterly the fisheries have been utilized. The value of the sock-eye salmon caught last year in the Alaskan waters was $2,000,000 in excess of the value of copper, gold, and silver producod in the territory. Furthermore, the sock-eye salmon caught in those waters last year were worth $2,000,000 in excess of the total purchase price of Alaska.

The raising of reindeer in Alaska will be another great source of revenue, predicts Mr. Stefansson. The United States Government introduced twelve hundred reindeer on the northwest corner of Alaska, and there are now one hundred and seventy thousand, and reindeer meat is being sold extensively in the United States and is about to enter the English market. At the same rate of increase the reindeer herds will increase to 10,000,000 head in twenty years, and Alaska will then produce as much meat as all of Canada is producing today.

Mr. Stefansson believes that we will in the future be as familiar with reindeer meat as we now are with mutton, and it will be a staple article of diet sold on all our markets. Canada can raise fifty reindeer to the square mile in the northern territories and on the 1,000,000 square miles of grazing alluded to the Dominion can produce five times as much meat as it is producing today.

Transportation facilities are necessary in connection with development and there can be no doubt but that the Grand Trunk Pacific will form the main traffic artery in the plan for developing the North land.

MECHANICAL FORCES OF CANADA'S OWN RAILWAYS

How it is Proposed to Operate the New Network of Transportation Lines.

Newspapers and railways are generally coupled together in the mind of "Average Citizen" as utilities which he could run considerable better than they are being run. Moreover, the running of them would not be h's main endeavour in life, but would occupy merely his spare time.

Of course to do this he would not be able to worry about detials! Of course not! He recognizes in a dim way that there are such things as details in connection with the running of railways and newspapers, but—they are for underlings and are not important.

That might be one reason why he is not running a railway or a newspaper. For, it is where "Average Citizen" stops when thining about railways and newspapers, that the real work of running a railway or a newspaper begins—in the details.

Executives of these complicated utilities long ago realized the vital importance of details—the relation of the link to the chain—and although it is not generally recognized, each little "job" dealing with the running of trains, or the turning out of a daily paper is capably foreseen right up to the executive desk in the head office of a railway or newspaper company.

The public are now interested, in an economic sense, in the operation of a network of railways extending from the steel mills at the Sydneys in Cape Breton Island to the pleasant villas overlooking the Palcfic in beautiful Victoria, and having branch lines serving each of the nine provinces as no other system in Canada does. This system—the Canadian National Railways—is being welded together into one homogeneous whole and naturally in that process of welding the mechanical organization occupies an important place. Men from the old Intercolonial, the Transcontinental and Canadian Northern systems, have been promoted to more responsible positions in connection with the operation of the larger organizatin which radiates from the office of the Vice-President in charge of Operation, Maintenance and Construction in Toronto. Mr. M. H. MacLeod and the Assistant Vice-President, Mr. S. J. Hungerford, whose office is also at Toronto.

The next step down, in detail, provides for two Mechanical Superintendent, W. U. Appleton in Moncton and A. H. Eager in Winnipeg. Then there are the two General Master Mechanics, Mr. T. C. Hudson with office at Montreal, and H. G. Reid with office at Winnipeg. And two Master Car Builders, Mr. G. E. McCoy, at Moncton and Mr. A. McCowan at Winnipeg. Below these officers come the mast mechanics of the eight principal divisions and the superintendents of the different large shops, locomotive and car foreman in charge of round houses and car repair yards and the army of employees, from the skilled mechanics down to the newest apprentice. The whole is organized with mechanical precision to guarantee the keeping of the wheels turning throughout the 14,000 miles of the Canadian National Railways system.

The last act of the locomotive engineer in completing his run is to inspect the expensive piece of mechanism under his direction to ascertain if any repairs are needed before it can be utilized again on the rails. If these repairs are of a routine character, the round house foreman accepts the responsibility, and the work is done without any deviation of that locomotive from its regular service. If the defect is more serious, or amounts to a breakdown, the locomotive is sent to a general repair shop for attention.

On the Canadian National railways the large general repair plants are located at Moncton, N.B., St. Malo, Que., (not yet in operation) Leaside Toronto (not yet in operation), Transcona, Man., and Fort Rouge in Winnipeg. General repairs, however, are also made in several smaller shops distributed throughout the great mileage of the Canadian National Railways.

Of course, locomotives and passenger cars, apart from breakdowns and serious defects, go into the general repair shops periodically for general refitting from which they emerge on the rails lookin as good as new.

It is the function of the Mechanical Department to keep the wheels on all rolling stock ready to move, whether it be locomotives, passenger cars, express cars, sleeping cars, dining cars, or freight cars. If a car develops a defect in transit, it is "set out" from the make-up of train and marked for repairs at the most suitable point. Damaged equipment is treated in precisely the same way, and during any year a tremendous amount of work is accomplished on any large railway through the organized efforts of this army which is seldom heard of or considered by the travelling public.

The army includes machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, carpenters, painters, upholsterers, electricians, air-brake men, car inspectors, car repairers, mechanics' helpers, apprentices, hostlers, watchman, stationary engineers and firemen and other skilled and unskilled labor. It is probable that the total of these classes of workers engaged on Canadian National Railways today will be close to 13,000, which number will, of course, be considerably augmented when the shops at St. Malo, Quebec, and at Leaside, near Toronto, are placed in operation.

It would be quite a "safe" estimate if the total pay roll of the working forces of the mechanical department were placed at $15,000,000 for 1919, and it might even exceed that amount. A moment's reflection on the way that money is traded for goods over grocery or butcher's counters, tailor or outfitter, and so on, and the importance of the position of the mechanical department of the Canadian National Railways in the economic life of the country becomes fuickly apparent.

Moreover the Canadian National Railways does not build its new equipment at the present time, and because of this, an army of employees, not on the pay rolls of the railway company, are engaged in work for that railway company, in manufacturing plants, over long periods of time. In this way other vast sums of money are distributed for the construction of equipment to be used on the lines of the Canadian National Railways.

It is the policy of the company to purchase its equipment from Canadian plants operated by Canadian workmen, so, indirectly the railway's requirements of rolling stock spell prosperity for a very large number of workment throughout the Dominion. The wages earned in plants engaged in the manufacturing of motive power and rolling stock like the wages earned directed by employees of the railway, finds its way over tradesmens' counters, into Victory Bonds, or into banks and constitutes a very important factor economically, in the life of the country as a whole.

PRESENTATION TO SEC.-TREAS. PECK

RETIRES AFTER MANY YEARS SERVICE FOR LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY CO.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Little Lake Cemetery Company, yesterday, President T. H. G. Denne, on behalf of the Board of Directors, presented the retiring secretary-treasurer, Mr. E. A. Peck with a handsome carving set in appreciation of his long and efficient services for the company. The set is of unusual value and its design is quite out of the ordinary.

Mr. Peck, in acknowledging the gift replied in fitting terms, and regretted that pressure of business necessitated the severance of his relations with the Board, which relationship had always been of the most pleasant character.

AN IMPORTANT WEEK

During Empire Week members of the G. W. V. A. will call on you to present their proposition regarding their building on Murray Street. $15,000 is necessary to finish and set up the proper means of maintenance of same.

In coming to you they are not seeking charity; theirs will be a clear-cut business proposition. Hence yours will be the privilege of investing in the welfare of the best type of manhood we have in Peterborough.

The G. W. V. A. is not an association who merely want an easy chair club. They have more real and stern questions to face, in helping unfortunate comrades and dependents. And who can do it better or more sympathetically and wisely than the association officers, who are more than brother to the needy ones?

Peterborough is not putting on any "Big Four" drive, asking for millions. All that is needed is $15,000. And after that the G. W. V. A. will be self-sustaining. And as such it will prove itself a tower of strength for the advancement of the right and the upbuilding of Christian citizenship.

Start to figure to-day how much you can give, and have it ready when the time arrives, and thus make it a pleasure for the boys to call on you, having them feel that, although they have been to the other side of the globe and in many places, Peterborough is the greenest spot of al! and the one place they are glad to be back to, to live and be happy in.

GRAND MANAGEMENT CAN TAKE CARE OF THE THRONG

Manager Dahn a Lightning Artist as Ticket Seller and Staff of Ushers is Efficient—Good Bill at Popular Play House.

The theatre-goers of Peterborough appear to be constitutionally behind time. It is next to impossible to start a performance on schedule as at the opening hour even for the best of shows the house is always sparsely filled, and to begin at the hour announced would be an injustice to the few who are punctual, as they would be disturbed by the crowds that come later.

The show at the Grand last night was advertised to begin at 7:30. At that hour there were exactly five persons on the lower floor. But later the patrons came in droves until not one vacant seat was left among the orchestra chairs or in the balcony. But if the patrons did arrive in squads they were not inconvenienced. The management of the house is ready to take care of all emergencies so that there is no vexing delay standing in line. Manager Dahn, when the occasion arises, takes his place in the box office, and if there is a ticket seller in the business who can hand out pasteboards and make change as rapidly as he can the new phenomenon has yet to be heard from.

The white-garbed lady ushers in the theatre are just as efficient in their department, and the patrons are seated without a hitch to the proceedings. A model theatre in every respect is what the visiting companies say of the Grand, the accommodation behind the curtain being in keeping with the rest of the house.

There was an excellent show last night, both as to vaudeville and pictures, the best that is on the circuit. Wendall Hall, the singing Xylophonist, can produce any variety of music on his combination and accompanies himself in an original song, "That Pal of Mine," written in memory of one of Mr. Hall's friends who lost his life while both were fighting in France.

Jarvis and Harris are a married couple who become estranged and separated but who met again and were reconciled under peculiar circumstances.

Curley and Burley, the one a London Cockney, the other a native of Glasgow, quarrel over their respective national characteristics and besides give some of the most amazing acrobatic exhibitions ever witnessed in this city. The Scotchman can tie himself in a knot and is not beholden to the conveniences furnished by the late Duke of Argyle, as he is able to scratch his own back with his foot.

The picture story of "Common Clay" is a moving recital of the life of a young girl, ambitious to make her way, but who is beset on every hand by the snares of the gilded and dangerous youths of New York.

The same bill will be presented tonight and tomorrow night with a matinee each day.

CYRIL MAUDE WAS BARRED FROM ARMY

FAMOUS ACTOR PREVENTED BY HEALTH FROM ADOPTING MILITARY CAREER.

In his new comedy, "The Saving Grace," at the Grand Thursday, May 22nd, which is from the pen of C. Haddon Chambers, Mr. Cyril Maude appears as a good-humored, irresponsible, happy-go-lucky ex-officer of the British army, whose on serious thought is to return to the service from which he is debarred on account of his age. There is a shade of similarity between Mr. Maude's own position and that of the character in the play, for Mr. Maude would have been a soldier had not the circumstances of ill health in his youth prevented him from entering upon a military career.

Mr. Maude comes of a family of soldiers, his father having been General Maude and his uncle an officer who won the V.C. in India. Indeed no fewer than four of Mr. Maude's immediate relations have won that coveted decorated. Major-General Sir Francis Maude, who commanded the British operations in Mesopotamia, was a cousin of the distinguished actor. Mr. Maude was educated at Cambridge University and it was his intention to enter the profession of arms upon his graduation. But his health at that time was so delicate that he was unable to enter the service and took up instead the study of dramatic art under the tutelage of Charles Cartwright and Roma La[illegible] in London. Continued ill health interrupted his training and he was sent by his physician to Colorado. There he regained his strength rapidly and presently joined Daniel Bandsmann's company with which organization he made his first appearance at Denver in 1884.

Naturally Mr. Maude has been extremely interested during all his life in military affairs and since the beginning of the great war he has done splendid service by lecturing on the British cause. He was appointed by the British Government to do propaganda work in America and in an unofficial manner he has made numerous addresses in cities and towns of the United States and Australia on the subject of the work of British women in wartime. Mr. Maude's whole-hearted and practical patriotism has been appreciated by high officials of England and Australia. The King has made several gifts to him, among them a gold cigar case with the King's monogram surmounted by a crown in diamonds and receptions and banquets were given in his honor by the Lord Mayors of Sydney and Melbourne. In view of his strong military inclination and his fine patriotic service Mr. Maude delivers the more serious speeches in "The Saving Grace," with the sincerity of the man rather than the art of the actor.

LIKE A PROBLEM IN GEOMETRY

"TEA FOR THREE" DEALS WITH QUESTION OF ANGLES AND TRIANGLES.

Attention is called to the fact that "Tea for Three", in which Miss Elsa Ryan is appearing in the star part at the Grand, Tuesday, May 26th, is described by the author as "an angle on the triangle," not of the triangle. Miss Ryan as the wife, takes the view that the triangle must be a right angled one. Norman Hackett as the friend and devoted admirer argues that it can be an angle on the square while Hayden Stevenson, as the husband, admits little knowledge of interest in angles of any descriptions.

The comedy by Rol Cooper Megrue, is claimed to be an unusually original and witty piece of work and its long run of 12 bonths at the Maxina Elliott Theatre, New York, tends to corroborate the claim. Selwyn and Company are the producers and have provided elaborate and artistic stage settings.

CRITICS PRAISE PICTURE STORY

EVEN THE CAPTONS ARE PLEASED WITH "THE UNPARDONABLE SIN."

"The Unparadonable Sin," which is to be presented at the Grand theatre for a three-day engagement, beginning Thursday matinee, is a moving picture attraction which Peterborough people who have followed the development of the screen as a medium for the presentation of really big dramatic ideas cannot afford to miss. There have been many unqualified expressions of opinion to the effect that "The Unparadonable Sin" is the greatest photoplay ever produced, and there is no denial of the statement that it ranks with such attractions as "The Birth of a Nation," "Intolerance" and "Hearts of the World", all of which are outstanding successes in the realm of moving pictures.

"The Unpardonable Sin" was completed on the Pacific Coast a few weeks ago at a time when there were assembled in Los Angeles practically all of the big men of the motion picture industry, and it was before an audience composed of these men that the photoplay was first exhibited. The consensus of opinion was that "The Unpardonable Sin" was big in every sense of the word—big in the story told, big in its manner of telling, and big in the work of Blanche Sweet, the star, and the players who support her. This early opinion has been more than confirmed by the reviews of moving picture critics in New York who have recently been afforded the opportunity of passing judgment upon it.

The story is by Major Rubert Hughes and it first appeared in serial form in the Red Book. The complete book was published not long after and at once established itself as a "best seller." While dealing with subject matter related to the recent world war, the picture is in no sense a "war picture" being entirely devoid of battle scenes, etc. The tale is merely one of love and adventure, written in the style which Rupert Hughes, better than any other living American author, nows how to use. Blanche Sweet, appears as a winsome American girl, possessed not only of girlish charm but also of the nerve, temper and aggressiveness which is characteristic of the type that may be met anywhere in the United States. The obstacles these two surmount in their efforts to penetrate a hostile country in search of two defenseless women upon whom has been perpetrated "the unpardonable sin" are pictured to provide a screen story that keeps audiences everywhere on the very edge of their seats.

"The Unpardonable Sin" will be shown two performances daily at the Grand theatre, the matinee starting at 2.30 o'clock and the evening presentations at 8.15.

BRITAIN GETS SHIPS.

Twenty-two Passenger Boats Handed Over By Germany.

London, May 13.—In the House of Commons at question time Mr. Leslie Wilson stated that twenty-two German passenger ships of 168,889 tons, and eighty-nie cargo ships of 663,210 tons, had been handed over to Great Britain.

Hon. Mr. Macnamra stated that at the time of the armistice fifteen German liners of 249,754 tons and 649 cargo ships of 2,251,439 tons were interned abroad. Besides these 290 German vessels of a given tonnage of 91,231 had been captured by the Allies. The figures included ships operated by the Allies.

Action by the Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering, coupled with threats of publicity, caused several New York landlords to compromise their proposed rent increases and stopped many evictions.

SUNDAY BASEBALL PRAISED BY THE PEOPLE OF NEW YORK

First Game Was Attended by an Orderly and Interested Crowd of Over 35,000 Holiday Makers.

Under the caption, "The 'Crime' of Sunday Baseball," Sir Mercer writes in his "All in a Day's Work" column of the New York Globe and Commercial Advertiser concerning the first Sunday baseball held in New York under the recently adopted law as follows:

"Do New Yorkers want Sunday baseball?

"We'll say they do.

"They proved it when thousands were turned away from the Polo grounds, and the Giants played to 35,000 well behaved enthusiasts who had the foresight to make an early start for the ball ground.

"Had there been ample seating accommodations, probably 50.000 persons would have witnessed the game and established a new attendance record.

"New York's hundreds of thousands of pleasure seekers crowded amusement resorts all over the city yesterday, searching out the open spots to enjoy the fresh air and sunshine.

Draws Contrast With Coney.

"Nearly 200-000 men, women and children milled around at Coney Island, where avaricious promoted charged double prices to their attractions, and the rush and roar of pleasure traffic made it anything but a day of rest. There was nothing at Coney to curb the convivial spirit of the holiday throng, and no uplifting influences.

"Thirty-five thousand men and women who have heretofore seldom had an opportunity to see big league baseball except on rare holidays, spent from two to three hours at the Polo rounds amid orderly surroundings and in comfortable seats. They consumed nothing but soft drinks and peanuts, but they soaked up the sunshine and fresh air of a perfect spring day, gave vent to their enthusiasm without annoying anybody, and were dismissed in time for an early dinner.

"We are willing to leave it to representatives of the law and order societies and the Lord's day alliance if this isn't a better way to spend a Sunday afternoon than to seek diversion in some of its questionable forms as New York Sunday crowds have been doing for years.

Dry Time for 35,000.

"Probably never in the history of the city have 35,000 persons been massed anywhere on a Sunday afternoon without a chance to partake freely of hard beverages. Yet that feature of our public gatherings is incidental. The vast majority desires clean amusement and comfortable accommodations. Given that it will subsist on soft drinks indefinitely.

"There were no fights at the Polo grounds yesterday, nor any noisy arguments as that crowd dispersed. There was no mad rush to get away because there was plenty of time to get home to dinner. The elevated carried away the usual quota, but many thousands left by the Speedway entrance, and finished the outing with a ride on the 'bus or trolley.

"Surely this is an argument for Sunday baseball.

Different From Week Day Crowd.

"The Sunday games provide an outlet for the activities of no inconsiderable part of the city's workers who practice sobriety and economy. Baseball reporters, who have seen other large crowds at the Polo grounds, remarked the difference between yesterday's gathering an da large week day attendance. I was a different crowd, one that knows less baseball perhaps, but one which appreciates more keenly the entertainment furnished by the crack professionals.

"The baseball fan who makes a habit of attending the weekday games was conspicuously absent yesterday. Probably because he is a man who has been accustomed to a quiet Sunday at home, and because he doesn't like big crowds. There are many, doubtless, who felt that Sunday at the Polo grounds should be given over to those who have only this one day for baseball. And there were enough of these Sunday fans yesterday to cause the management to stop the sale of grandstand tickets before the game started.

Steady Workers at Game.

"Many of these rooters follow their favorite teams through the newspapers, with only an occasional glimpse of the pastimers. A man who has no opportunity to view a ball game except on Sunday is presumably a man who is chained to his job the other six days. Such men are generally decent citizens. It was this class of fans who spent an enjoyable afternoon at the Polo grounds yesterday and provoked favorable comment because of the splendid behavior.

"For these people it was an afternoon of pleasure at a reasonable expense. Except for movie shows, where the light is artificial and the air is kept moving by fans, there is no place in New York where one can view a high class attraction for three hours at prices ranging from 35 cents to $1.50. Waiters do not importune one to buy their wares except in an impersonal manner, and there are no hat checking privileges at a baseball park.

Ignorant but Happy.

"Yesterday's crowd cheered play that the critical week day fan would accept as a matter of course. Comparatively few knew many of the Giants by sight, and the Phillies were total strangers. And some of them displayed an amazing ignorane of baseball. Others exuded some wonderful misinformation. But everybody was happy.

"Probably many did not know beforehand what team was playing the Giants, and anyhow they didn't care. They did know, however, that the Giants were on view and that it was a nice day. The Phillies as a matter of fact are a drab team. There are no famous stars on that club, which is a second division outfit. They had just two games to the Giants and did not figure to win as they did yesterday. Yet few of that crowd took these things into consideration.

"It was just a nice day and a ball game.

"For three hours at least 35,000 New Yorkers were not exposed to Bolhevik soap box orators, reckless drivers and family entrances.

"New York needs more such Sunday breathing places."

NEW CONDITIONS IN BASEBALL

(By W. A. Collins.)

New York, May 13.—A new condition that augurs well for the future of baseball is seen in the make-up of many minor league combinations, according to Miller Huggins of the Yankees, a close student of everything pertaining to the national game. Huggins sees a new set of players combubbling over with enthusiasm for their work. He contends that the benefits from the new condition of affairs may not be fully realized in the season now under way, but that the seeds now being sown are bound to bear fruit within two or three seasons.

"Those two games we played with Arthur Irwin's Rochester club were eye-openers to me," remarked the manager of the Yankees in propounding his beliefs as to the future of the sport. "Here was a club in a Class A A. league that could almost be called an entirely new combination. Usually when any major league club with which I have been connected was opposed to a club from the top minors, I found many familiar faces; players who had been in the majors and were on their way back. The big minors specialized for years in taking the players who were going back and this kept many a youngster from getting an opening.

New Conditions.

"The world war and the consequent collapse of the minors, brought about new conditions. Now we find the minors filling up with young talent, ambitious fellows who are looking only at the big leagues ahead of them, and not regarding the majors as behind them. Salaries have fallen to such an extent in the minors that they no longer appeal to many of the players who were accustomed to draw down big money for their efforts. Young fellows are stepping in as they did fifteen years ago, ambitious to prove their worth and get the money in the bigger leagues.

"I believe that baseball, at least minor league baseball, is back today where it was fifteen or twenty years ago. It will grow, as it grew them, with salaries improving all the time, and will finally reach the stage that it held along from 1908 to 1913. Minor leaguers were in flourishing condition all along the line in those years and it was an easy matter to pick up star young players. Opportunities were greater then for the young player than they have been since, and many of the great stars of the past five years in the majors were developed during that period.

"From along about 1913 to last season the minors had hard sledding and many of them fell by the wayside. What was the result? The traning field for the young players was restricted and many a "gem of purest ray" wasted his efforts outside the professional ranks instead of getting to a place where he would have been picked up and developed. We must have developing grounds for the players who are one day to shine in the majors, and with that avenue shut out, the big leagues were handicapper.

"During the past two seasons the minor league situation was the worst I have ever seen. Now the improvement is setting in. The young fellows are flocking back to the sport and are finding opportunities awaiting them. They are full of enthusiasm, love to play ball and many of the boys are making their start in professional company and will be drawing cards at major league parks in two or three years. I never saw a team so full of enthusiasm in its work as that Rochester club was in the two games against the Yankees in the south. I have seen better class A A teams, but certainly none that could be called younger or more interested. And there is no denying that youth and enthusiasm are two ingredients which baseball is greatly in need of at this time.

Minors on Sound Basis.

"All along the line the minors are reorganizing and I believe they are in for a big boom. Army life taught the young fellows discipline and that will go far to help baseball, for its discipline in recent seasons had steadily lessened. Many of the young fellows now on the roster of minor league clubs have spent a year or more in the service and they come back to the sport with a new spirit. They will take their work seriously and enthusiastically, likewise with a thorough knowledge in the worth of discipline. The game cannot help but gain under such conditions."

Famous Buildings in Weimar.

Conspicuous public buildings in Weimar are the Wittumspalais, the old ducal dower house, containing Preller's famous mural paintings of the Odyssey; the Goethe-Schiller archive, an imposing edifice on an eminence above the river Ulm, in which are treasured manuscripts by famous German writers; the Liszt museum; a gymnasium; a Realschule, or school for girls, founded by the Grand Duchess Sophia; a grand ducal school of art; technical, commercial and music schools, geographical institute, teachers' seminaries and other institutions of learning.

Almost-Forgotten Author.

"Lambert Lilly, Schoolmaster," was one of the pen names of the Rev. Francis Lister Hawkes, an eminent Episcopalian divine of New York. Dr. Hawkes was born in New Berne, N. C., in 1798, and died in that city in 1806. He also used the pseudonyms of "Frater, a Protestant Episcopalian," and "Uncle Philip." He wrote "The Early History of the Southern States," and had it published under the pen name "Lambert Lilly, Schoolmaster," in 1882.

Standard of Taste.

One of my fellow wage-slaves (relates Louge) is the prond possessor of an exceedingly noisy shirt—white, with wide orange and purple stripes, if you will believe it. One evening, he was calling on some friends who have a five-year-old daughter. The youngster gazed wide-eyed at the screaming combination, then, rubbing her hand over the shirt front, inquired: "What kind of a flag is that?"

Improved Lightship Bell.

A new lightship also has a bell, which is made to ring automatically by means of a highly ingenious device which utilizes the gas as it passes from the tanks to the lantern, to actuate the bell clapper. The light is not interfered with in the slightest degree by the operation of the bell-striking device. It is only set in motion, however, in very foggy weather, when the light cannot be distinguished at any great distance.

Formalin for Ingrowing Toenail.

Suldey advises application of a solution of formaldehyde (formalin) for the relief of ingrowing toenail. A pledget of cotton wet with formalin is swabbed over the granulations once every day. The pain is relieved almost immediately, the inflammation is rapidly reduced and the cure is practically complete in four or five days.—Journal de Medecine et de Chirurgie Practiques.

Lieut.-Col. Reason, D.S.O., commanding officer of number 3, Canadian stationary hospital, France, is expected in Peterborough tomorrow on a visit to Canon Davidson, the chaplain of the hospital in 1916-17. Colonel Reason, a well-known physician in London, offered his services soon after the opening of hostilities, having been major in the 1st Hussars. London In 1915 he was appointed to the command of Shorncliffe Military Hospital with supervision of some thirty small hospitals in the area. From this he was promoted to the command of No. 3, Canadian Stationary on the Somme front which, under his energetic direction, became one of the largest and best equipped hospitals in France. It was close to the scene of the German drive of March, 1918, and during the month of April 30,000 wounded soldiers passed through the big hospital. On May 31st the great fortress in which it was housed was viciously attacked by German airmen one of the four storey barrack buildings being left in ruins with over 100 casualties, including nearly 20 of the staff killed. More extensive damage was prevented by Colonel Reason's coolness and wise generalship. The attention of the King was directed to the remarkable work of this hospital to which His Majesty paid two visit. The matron of the hospital who was twice decorated for efficient work was Miss E. M. Wilson, R.R.C. of Carleton Place, Ont., a cousin of E. G. Patterson, Esq., of this city. Miss Wilson passed through the city last week on her way to an important appointment, the hospital until having reached Canada under Colonel Reason a fortnight ago.

FAIR WAGE CLAUSE IN BRIDGE SPECIFICATIONS IS RESCINDED

This Will Be Recommended by Board of Works —Division Last Night 6 to 4 in Affirmative 60c and 40c For Nine Hours.

The Board of Works, last night, rescinded the fair wage clause in the specifications for the new bridge the following is the motion of rescindation:

Aldermen Turner and Taylor moved that the fair wage clause be rescinded, and that the wages to be paid and the bridge up to May first, 1920, be 60c an hour for carpenters and 40c for laborers, a working day to consist of nine hours. (These prices are to be the maximum scale, the men to be graded according to efficiency.) This motion carried on the following division.

Yeas The Mayor, Aldermen Phelan, Taylor, Turner, Hamilton and Edgar.

Nays—Aldermen Morrison, Garside, Gainey and McIntyre.

An amendment by Ald. Morrison that the union scale be paid was lost on the same division which obtains no all similar labor questions these days.

In the original specifications two provisions governing this vexed question had been embodied. One that "in all cases of employment of labor preference shall be given to residents of Peterborough, all things being equal," the other that "the union or prevailing rate of wages in Peterborough shall be paid."

Apply to Union

Ald. McIntyre contended that the contractors should apply to the union for their help as that organization knows the qualifications of their members, and just whom to send for the class of work required. Talking to Ald. Turner's resolution Ald Garside said "you are going to have trouble right there."

Ald. Turner — "Then we won't build the bridge."

The Mayor—"I don't see how we can unless the 40 and 60c resolution is adopted."

Ald Turner thought the men would be better off with a nine hour day. Enough time for home needs is good, but too much time on one's hands induces spending of money. He was fully satisfied that a nine hour day is a desirable economic measure.

Union All Right

Ald. Hamilton opined that there is no guarantee of what the prevailing wages will be.

Ald. Morrison—"They'll be union all right."

Ald. Gainey contended that it was absolutely unfair to rescind the fair wage scale, with one labor seat on the Council vacant. Ald. Murray, resigned by reason of poor health, would have voted for the fair wage clause now as he did before. In any event the question should not be settled until the vacant seat has been filled by a labor man or otherwise.

OMEMEE PRESBYTERIANS TAKE GRACEFUL LEAVE OF REV. J. P. MacINNIS.

(Special to The Review.)

Omemee May 14.—On Friday evening last a farewell social was held in the Presbyterian Church when the congregation met to spend another social evening with their minister, Rev. J. P. MacInnis, and his estimable wife and daughter who leave this week for their new home in the west.

A short and interesting program was rendered and many speeches of appreciation of the wonderful work and help which Mrs. MacInnis has given to the church were made by prominent members. A presentation followed when Mrs. MacInnis was presented with a purse of gold, Miss Marie a handsome ouyx and pearl ring, and the Rev. Mr. MacInnis was given a gold headed cane.

Mr. and Mrs. MacInnis, though taken by surprise thanked their friends for the tangible tokens of love and esteem. Rrefreshments were served and a long to be remembered evening spent by the congregation.

Guelph Laborites First to Have It Eliminated.

Guelph, May 14.—The Labor members of the Board of Education endeavored to put through a resolution opposing military training in the public schools of the city. COMMISSION TO DEAL WITH HUNS' COUNTER PROPOSALS

Each of Five Great Powers Has One Member—Italian Controversy Tends Toward an Adjustment—Dividing Germany's Mercantile Fleet Among the Allies.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 14.—The Council of Four of the Peace Conference appointed this afternoon a sub-commission comprising one member from each of five great powers, Great Britain, France Italy, the United States and Japan to deal with the objections and the proposals from the German peace plenipotentiaries.

The Italian delegates to the Peace Conference are no longer insisting upon the fulfillment of the secret treaty of London and this part of the controversy relative to the territory on the eastern shore of the Adriatic is tending toward an adjustment according to those who have taken part in the recent conferences. The status of Flume is still being discussed as the plan to mape it a free city similar to danzig has not proved acceptable.

Renewed efforts are being made by British delegation to secure an agreement calling for the pooling of former German mechant vessels and their distribution on a basis of tonnage loss during the war instead of the plan of United States retaining those ships interned in America prior to that country entering war. Poland is laying claim to some of the warships surrendered by ersany. She presented her claims to the Council of foreign ministers this afternoon.

PELTED SPOTTERS WITH STALE EGGS

YOUNG MEN IN CAMPBELLFORD WRECK VENGENCE ON WHISKEY DETECTIVES.

One of the coaches on the Grand Trunk train that arrived here from the East last nigth was splashed with the contents of eggs that had been hurled against it with a daring disregard for expense considering the price of that article of diet. Thereby hangs a tale.

Blute Bros., hotelkeepers at Campbellford, were arrested on two charges of violating the Ontario Temperance Act. They were defended by Mr. J. A. O'Brien of the firm of Gordon & O'Brien, this city, and, while they were acquitted in one case they were convicted in the other and were fined $200 and costs.

The cases against the hotelkeepers were worked up not by the local officers, but by two "spotters" sent o Campbellford for that purpose, and it was on their testimony that the conviction was based.

When the court adjourned and the "spotters" were on their way to entrain for other fields, a gang of Campbellford's young men gave chase and pelted them with eggs, the only drawback to the hilarity of the occasion being doubt as to whether all the hen fruit was really unfit for human consumption. Anywyy, the amateur sleuths had a rough time of it, and the coach in which they took refuge did not escape the fusilade.

OFFICERS ASKED THAT IRISH PRIEST BE DENIED ENTRANCE

Brother Rapilly Said to Have Talked Sinn Fein Doctrine While Coming to This Country on Royal George.

(Canadian Press Despatch

Halifax, May 14.—Heated arguments on Irish affairs on board the Royal George during her trip from Liverpool to this port caused a number of Canadian officers to demand that Rev. Brother Thomas a rapilly of Cork, Ireland be not admitted to Canada. This morning when the ship docked the officers protested against Brother Rapilly's presence in Canada and stated he rendered himself generally obnoxious throughoat the trip. On one occasion, they said, in the heat of an argument in the smoking saloon, he announced that he was coming to Canada for the purpose of spreading Sinn Fein doctrines among the French Canadian population and also refused to sing the National Anthem.

Brother Rapilly told the Canadian Press that he was coming to Canada by way of the United States on educational and private business. He said that his business had nothing whatever to do with the spread of Sinn Fein ideas. Brother Rapilly said he had founded schools in Montreal and elsewhere in Canada in 1911 at the earnest request of the French Canadian people who felt that there were not sufficient facilities in the country for the teaching of their children in the French language.

PREMIER BORDEN STARTS FOR HOME

LEAVES PARIS ACCOMPANIED BY HON. ARTHUR SIFTON—NEEDED AT OTTAWA.

(Cable from Leon Trepanier.)

Paris, May 14.—In view of the fact that the principles have been settled upon which peace is to be established Sir Robert Borden and Hon. Arthur Sifton left Paris this morning for London and will proceed to Canada by the first available boat. They have been absent from Canada more than six months, far beyond the period anticipated when Mr. Lloyd George called them to London in November last.

The date at which peace will eventually be signed is a matter of conjecture, but the questions of importance awaiting consideration in Canada necessitate the Premier's return. Sir George Foster and M. Doherty will remain in Paris for the presetnt. The Prime Minister and Mr Sifton may return to their duties in Paris at the end of the present session if required.

Order In Council To Be Permanent

FEDERAL PUBLICATION TO BE RETAINED IN ITS PRESENT FORM.

Toronto, May 14.—The temperance question was discussed in Parliament on a resolution introduced by Sir Thomas White to ratify and confirm the order in Council enforcing prohibition as a war measure. The Acting Premier said this was still a war year and there was urgent need for thrift and efficiency therefore the bars and liquor shops should remain closed and the manufacture of alcoholic beverages should be kept down to the minimum. He promised an amendment to permit the importation of light wines from France into the Province of Quebec and intimated that the Dominion Government would allow the people of any Province in Canada to have their favorite drinks. If Ontario, for example favors stronger beer than 2½ per cent, the Dominion Government will not stand i nthe way. The Acting Premier explained that after the new law is passed Quebec breweries will be able to produce a beer with a kick up to five per cent. proof spirits.

GOLD MEDAL GIVEN FERRAN STEVENS

MEMBERS OF CENTRAL SCHOOL CADETS MADE RECORD IN SHOOTING.

Col. Gillespie inspected the Cadet Corps at the Central and South Central Schools this morning and in the afternoon continued his inspection of the calets at the King Edward and Queen Mary. The Collegiate Cadets will be inspected tomorrow afternoon at Central Park.

The inspection this morning was highly satisfactory. Five of the boys at the Central were awarded medals for records in shooting. Ferran Stevens with a score of 67½ points out of a possible 70 will get a gold medal besides a silver medal. A silver medal was also awarded Bert Graham, and each of these boys was awarded a bronze medal in addition. Bronze medals were also given to David Gray, Alex. Roberts, Gregg Roberts, Harry Allen and Russel Biggs. All of these had records of 60 or better out of a possible 70.

Col. Gillespie bestowed high praise upon the work of the corps, commending especially their efficiency in signalling, and every word of his encomium was an indirect compliment to the splendid training given the boys by Mr L. J. Collings, their instructor by virtue of his position as vice-principal of the school. The corps at South Central, of which Mr. F. E Kerr is instructor, also made an excellent showing.

At the inspection the School Board was represented by Chairman R. Denne and G. O. Cameron. It was impossible to give the schools a half-holiday, as is usual following an inspection, on account of the hours at which the work was carried on. It is announced, however, that next year all the inspections will be held in the morning, and a half holiday declared for all the schools by way of celebrating the auspicious event in the lives of the cadets.

Must Keep Off School Property

CHAIRMAN FOWLER REPORTS CASES OF TRESPASS TO THE BOARD.

At the special meeting of the Board of Education last night Mr A A Fowler, chairman of the Property committee, said that some action must be taken to stop boys and in some cases grown up ones at that making of themselves a nuisance on school properties Sundays and nights. Last Sunday night, he said two windows were broken. In the Central school, its a common occurrence to find the steps of the East City building smothered in tobacco spit and other filth and the King Edward school had been broken into this spring and two or three times last year. He wondered if the pasting of warnings that trespassers would be prosecuted would prove a preventative.

It was decided to ask Chief Thompson for police protection, and no doubt he will take effective steps to catch any one big or little, trespassing or destroying school property. The Board is determined to prosecute to the utmost extent of the law.

MAY TRY OVERSEAS FLIGHT IN A DIRIGIBLE BALLOON

Start Made This, Morning For Newfoundland From Naval Yards at Montauk Points at a Speed of Fifty Miles an Hour—May Cross Ocean Directly.

WEATHER FORECASTS.

Montauk Point, N. Y., May 14.—The navy dirigible C-5 left here today on a flight to St. John's, Nfld., which may be followed by an attempt to fly acros sthe Atlantic. The balloon took the air at 8 a.m. and promptly stepped into her maximum cruiser speed of fifty miles an hour, which was expected to drive the big bag over the 1,200 miles course to Newfoundland in twenty-four hours.

In command of Lieut. Commander Emery W. Coil, the C.-M. took the northeast course expected to carry her over the naval air staion at Chatham, Mass., and then continue along the New England and Canadian coasts.

At St John's "lighter than air" experts put ashore from the cruiser Chicago with spare parts, tools, and supplies of inflation gas and fuel, await the balloon ready to assist in preparing her for a possible 2,000 mile non-stop cruise to the British Isles.

There was a possibility also, the naval officers said, that the route of the N.-C. hevier tha nair machine via the Azores might be followed, reducing the longest jump approximately 1,300 miles by making a stop at Punta del Gado. The adoption of this route would give the dirigible the benefit of the warship patrol established for seaplanes, the plan being to start the C.-5 on her eastward passage after the N.C. exhibition has reached Europe, or at least has completed the Newfoundland-Azores leg of its course.

The Board of Education has concluded an agreement with the Chamberlain Estate for the purchase of five acres at the corner of the Monaghan Road and Sherbrooke street, on which to erect a new school. The Estate originally asked $12,500 for the five acres, or rather $2,500 an acre for six acres, but have now offered to accept $11,00 for the 5 acres selected by the Board.

The following report submitted last night by Mr. E. G. Patterson, chairman of the Building Committee, to the Board of Education in special session, covers progress so far:

On motion of Mr. E. G. Patterson seconded by Mr. J. M. Greene, the above agreement was adopted unanimously.

His fees including work already rendered by him, are to be a sum equivalent to three per cent of the cost of the building.

Interview Council

Messrs Patterson, Fowler, Gordon and Chairman Roland Denne were named a committee to wait on the City Council in support of a motion authorizing a by-law to provide for the issue of debentures to raise the sum of $11,000 for the purchase of the school site in question.

PRESIDENT EBERT SAYS GOVERNMENT HAS NO INTENTION OF RESIGNING.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, May 14.—Declaring that the terms of peace presented by Allied and associated Governments to Germany contemplate the physical, moral and intellectual paralysis of the German people, that the Germans were "hypnotized by the statements made vy President Wilson, and that he himself, is looking forward to the future with the gravest apprehensions." President Ebert said, "and he still hoped that the American democracy would not accept the treaty framed at the Peace Conference."

He rejected with disdain the suggestion that the present German Government would resign rather than accept refuse to accept the terms. Saying that the Government would hold out to the end President Ebert closed his statement by declaring the present Government would hold to the last and scouted the idea that it would make room for others to deal with the treaty.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

WEDNESDAY, MAY 14, 1919

THE COUNCIL OF THE "BIG SIX."

SOME TIME AGO the City Council adopted a resolution making it compulsory upon the contractor who would be fortunate enough to get the contract for the Hunter street bridge to pay the union rate of wages All those who tenderd for the work were supposed to govern themselves accordingly, the scale for laborers and carpenters having been announced.

At the meeting of the Board of Works Monday night the resolution was rescinded, the aldermen dividing along the lines that are now to be expected when all such questions come before them for final decision. No one questions the right of the aldermen to take this action. But they should have stopped at that and not gone the length of assuming to set the scale of wages that shall be paid to his men by an employer who, whether he holds a contract from the city or not, has authority to run his business to suit himself so long as he lives up to his obligations. In a word, the aldermen have no more right to take such a course than they have to dictate to the merchants on George Street and to set the wages that these merchants shall pay to the members of their staffs. What the contractor who builds the Hunter street bridge agrees to pay his men, the number of hours that they shall work, is peculiarly a matter between the two parties interested. The aldermen have certainly in this matter mistaken their prerogativa, and the six who supported the measure have evidently an exaggerated idea of their official functions.

Short hours, say the "Big Six," tend to develop habits of idleness and extravagance. Let a workingman quit his daily labors at 5 o'clock and the chances are that he may take his family on a trip around the city on a "ride-for-one-hour-for-five-cents" street car, or he may spend an hour or so in one of the public parks that he is unable to reach on Sundays. The "Big Six's" remedy for such extravagant tendencies is excessive labor.

Only the other day it was announced that one of the leading mercantile firms on George Street had voluntarily shortened the hours of work for their employes without asking them to submit to a cut in wages. The "Big Six," judging from their action the other night, will be opposed to this innovation and solicitous for the financial well being of those benefited. But it is not a case which calls for aldermanic dictation or even for an official expression of opinion. Still no one need be surprised if the aldermen's idea of their authority would induce them to pass judgment on this matter. They have at least as much right to do so as to set the wages that a contractor shall pay his carpenters and laborers.

Originally the aldermen planned to have the bridge built by workmen who set their own wages. Finding the cost of the structure would exceed the sum set aside for the purpose, the aldermen set out to economize by having the workmen agree to a reduction. They offered to meet the Laborers' Union half way, and when the workmen accepted the offer and traversed their proportion of the gap, the aldermen stood their ground and demanded that the others come all the distance. If the aldermen had not taken this stand, the carpenters would have reduced their scale, and the rate would have stood at 45 cents for laborers and 65 cents for the others. But the beans were spilled when the aldermen set the wages of the city laborers and carpenters.

That they had a perfect right to do this if they deemed it public policy, no one doubts. But setting wages outside their jurisdiction is another matter entirely.

In their program the aldermen have reversed the usual order of things by setting a maximum instead of a minimum scale of wages, the pay to be graded downward according to efficiency. No union would accept such conditions It has been found that such an agreement makes it possible for an employer to violate the spirit of his contract by paying the minimum to one or two men and giving the others what he chooses. The main idea is to set a minimum and to demand of every man who receives it service in keeping with his compensation.

AS A THEOLOGIAN SEES IT.

REV DR. DYDE, principal of one of the leading theological institutions in the country, preaching in this city Sunday, declared that unless something was done to abolish the warfare among sects and denominations on earth, the same trouble would spring up in the other world. There were, he said, still those who believed that salvation was for the Gentiles only, and that while this spirit prevailed there would be a noticeable lack of spiritual progress among the people. If there is to be toleration in heaven, then the best way to prepare for it is to practice that principle on earth.

Coming from a denominational teacher, this utterance is peculiarly significant. The world certainly moves. The living can easily recall that when a man holding the position of Dr. Dyde spoke to his own people, rather than say what the learned professor said Sunday he would be more apt to uphold the doctrines set forth in his creed and to claim the scriptural interpretation embraced by his denomination as the only right one.

But as in the days of the Nazarene, the ambition to hold prominent place still possesses the people. There are Johns and Jameses today who fall into the same error as did the disciples of old and who cannot look beyond the confines of the kingdom which they hape to see established on earth. Both wanted the position of honor, the one at the right and the other on the left hand of the Master Whom they believed was to set up a temporary principality, the one aspiring to be what is now known as premier, the other to be secretary of state. The rebuke which these disciples received is still on the record, but, unfortunately, the lesson has to a great extent been lost.

There is need for more religions teachers of the stamp of Dr. Dyde, whose every sentence is replete with practical religion and whose message burns with the sentiment of Christian charity. There is need especially for such teachers in Canada. While he was speaking in St. Andrew's Church there was a meeting held in the city of Toronto occasioned by the very conditions to which the doctor referred. Those at that meeting felt constrained to memorialize the Premier of Canada to intervene on behalf of a certain race to save them from religious persecution by the people of an avowedly Christian nation in Europe.

But there was another issue raised, one that brings this matter right to our own doors. One of the outstanding leaders in a religious denomination that is supposed to enjoy liberty of worship according to conscience declared that he could sympathize with those of the race whose brethren are suffering so far away. This particular speaker knew by experience what religious persecution meant both as to individuals and nationally. And this persecution was not several thousand miles away, but right here in Canada.

SHALL M'CULLOUGH HANG?

THIS IS A QUESTION that is being discussed by some of the newspapers of Ontario. The London Advertiser believes that in this case capital punishment would not be justified, taking the ground that McCullough is a mental defective and a moral degenerate. The Toronto Times, that is supposed to stand for every British institution, social, political or economic, believes that life imprisonment rather than execution would fit the crime for which McCullough was condemned to die.

It is rather remarkable that a newspaper that has all along advocated the retention of capital punishment should in this instance modify its views. This remark does not apply to the London Advertiser, which has always advocated the abolition of this relic of barbarism. But so long as there is a law for hanging, what reason can be urged for leniency in the case of McCullough?

The man who planned and effected his escape as he did can hardly be regarded as a mental defective. If he is a moral degenerate, that is another question. But it is idle to argue that he shot the detective who attemptd to arrest him, on the spur of he moment. McCullough had murder as well as burglary in his heart when he set out on his thieving expedition with a revolver as part of his equipment. Even in the United States his crime would be listed as first degree murder. His deed is vastly different from that of the hitherto reputable individual who in the heat of passion takes the life of another. And it is not unusual to hang such offenders.

Capital punishment is a relic of barbarism, as already stated, but law is law. Sentimental considerations should not figure in the case of a man who aroused public sympathy by enlisting the aid of a woman in breaking jail.

A BULWARK OF SAFETY.

SOME TIME AGO, when Peterborough was threatened with a race riot and the police were called upon to protect the property of certain citizens, the Veterans volunteered their assistance to Chief Thompson and a large force of returned soldiers were held in reserve in the G. W. V. A. rooms until all signs of the impending trouble had disappeared. If anything like disorderly conduct had broken out on that occasion, the Veterans would have taken an active part in quelling the disturbance.

Canada's returned soldiers are the nation's one best safeguard now that the war is over, just as they were while hostilities were in progress. They did not risk their lives to preserve the institutions of their native land, in the defence of the rights of the weak as against the strong, only to permit a lawless mob to undo the work the men in khaki completed after four years of strenuous effort. They kept the flag of the Empira flying in the face of the foe. They are not likely to submit quietly if an attempt is ever made now to replace that banner with the red rag that is the symbol of anarchy.

In the Armories the best type of Canadian citizenship and patriotism was cradled before the war. It was the graduates of that institution who first answered the call to service. The new home of the G. W. V. A. on Brock street will be an expansion of the Armories, the place where the veterans will take a post-graduate course in national duties and responsibilities. It will be a college in very truth.

It is to complete and firml establish that institution that the Veterans have planned the drive for next week to raise $15,000. Aside altogether from the purely sentimental reasons that could be urged in favor of the campaign, pleading the debt of gratitude which beyond all question the city owes its gallant heroes, the investment commends itself to the practical as a sound business enterprise. It is not alone the returned soldiers who will share the benefits of a Veterans' home. Indirectly every man, woman and child in the city will profit by an establishment that will make for the preservation of domestic peace and justice in no less measure than did the sacrifices of these devoted heroes overseas.

ENGLISH AS SHE IS SPOKE

(St. Thomas Times-Journal.)

Some time ago a correspondent took us to task for occasionally introducing colloquialisms or possibly slang into these columns. We have been reminded of this circumstances by a recent explosion on the part of Dr. Bliss Perry of Harvard, whose particular complaint lay against newspaper reporters, "who rudely coin words when writing in a somnolent state in the small hours of the morning." It would be impossible to deny that some or many of the industrious fraternity who track elusive news to its lair and finally retrieve it, do indulge in the joy of exercising creatve energy in the coinage of collocatons of letters unknown to the pages of lexicographers. But these excursions into the fields of invention can scarcely be attributed to expositons of sleep, but are due rather to a vivid imagination working on imperfect assimilation or false analogies. Not impossibly, however, where a real onomatopeia is accidentally produced of some particularly happy and expressive combination attained, the incomer falling on a receptive soil, may ultimately blossom into the full honors of the dictionary.

Some author, Lewis Carroll (Charles Lutwidge Dodgson), for example, possessed a perfect genius for word invention. One of his vintage, by the way, "chortle" compounded apparently out of "chickle" and "snort", and meaning to sing or shout exultantly, now accepted as filling a vacant niche in the English language was among the words to which our correspondent took exception. Apart from these deliberate coinages, words and expressions creesp into ordinary colloquial usage and thence worm themselves into literature in queer and devious ways. This has always been the case and always will be. What is even more curious is that not a few words generally classed as slang have quite a respectable, even classic origin. Of such is "skedaddle," anything but classical in sound and appearance, yet a variant of the Greek skedanumi with the identical meaning.

English is a living and growing language. It levies toll from every race and lanuage with which it comes into contact and accepts impartially whatever seems necessary or appropriate. Purists there are who endeavor to create a pale of accepted vocables and to regulate all others to outer darkness and disgrace This effort is foredoomed to failure. English is the tongue of the great adventuring, fighting and organising peoples who have carried their civilization far and wide into every corner of the earth. Now as ever literature must draw from and form itself on the spoken language. Any and every literature that refuses to do this isolates itself, restricts its following to a select few and loses most of its influence Newspapers especially must keep in touch with the language of the time since they supply largely the reading of the masses. In slang, colloquialisms and phrases that come red hot from the lips of men engaged in the prosecution of great causes or in the turmoil of political conflicts newspapers find what they often require. The late Theodore Roosevelt was a distinguished Harvard graduate, yet he ripped out such ear-arresting and picturesque phrases as "a bully good time," "whipped to a frazzle," "the big stick, "fossilized courts," "weasel words," and many more of similar pungency. This war has added many words that will undoubtedly become embedded in the English language.

(London Advertiser.)

They will take him out and hang him one of these days—this man McCullough——because he killed another man. He killed this other man either in passion or because something was wrong with his moral sense. This moral sense had wasted away, or perverted or was missing altogether Before he dies it would be interesting to have him tell what he thinks is wrong with himself. He had been told what is the right path by having sentence passed to indicate that his way means death, violent and horrible. A psychologist should not let such a chance escape to search this man's heart and mind and to ascertain what made him press a revolver to another man's side and shoot.

Society has been discussing the problem of the killer for a long time It takes up the question spasmodically and then drops it again, not knowing which is the right thing to do. The final or the easiest solution seems to be to say "It is law," and not to go deeper. When that is said, we vote for the complete responsibility of the individual for his actions. We simply find evidence to prove the crime was committed by the accused. The immediate motive also makes interesting reading, but seldom does a murder trial reveal what made the man that made the crime.

If your Bertillon expert can show the criminal tendencies unmistakably charted and in the case of McCullough the experts have said he has the fixed marks of weak mentality, how much has the criminal to do with his crime? If he was shaped for crime could he avoid the logical conclusion? Or, to reverse conditions, if a man who is incapable of crime, who is temperamentally unfit to shoot another human being, is to be charted on the white side of the ledger, what made him so typically non-criminal? It may be that the students of the problem will never clear it up; but they may learn to study the characters concerned before they are lost as clinical material. McCullough in the dissecting-room of some medical college may be an interesting exhibit; but McCullough the live man, about to be hanged, with a crowded life of some kind behind him, is worth a great deal more to society as a study. Is he a product of modern civilization or of unusual environment? He shot a man, it is true, but how many other men of his type, with the same viciousness of face and habit, are walking about, are being born or shaped every day? McCullough no doubt could tell of the tangled pathway that leads to a death cell. It may be drink, or he may never have had a drink; he does not crave cocaine, apparently; it may be the looseness of domestic surroundings or it may not be. But something made him what he is. It is worth far more to the nation and to the world to ascertain what made McCullough tha merely to destroy his life. Ninety-nine per cent. of the people might vote tomorrow to save his life, but that is not so much the question as the prospect that the world is each year growing crops from the same seed, nourished by the same impure streams, harvested for no sane purpose, allowed to blow on the winds of chance until the perish in a storm of cold official wrath. Life was worth nothing to McCullough if it be lived to die on a gallows. Nor was his life anything but a harmful thing for the society of which he is one kind of fungus outgrowth. We exterminate the man, but we do not cure the disease by any means with our executional machinery In dealing with social problems we have not yet learned to look for the contamination at the source as we have learned with epidemics of physical disease such as typhoid fever We think we have a cure in the isolation of death; we have not begun develop a science of moral preventives

A. BRADY

When I began medical practice it was in a small town. I had two assets, namely, faith in people and the stimulation of honest competition for country doctors, take them by and large, are on a plane about eight notches higher than city doctors. Out of these assets, after a reasonable time, which seemed very unreasonable then, I presently acquired a horse and carriage, and it was no ordinary turnout, either. My horse was a sorrel with a face and disposition that went a long way to neutralize the chilling effect of my own. I loved the horse and she loved me. But it used to make me tired to have the good farmers whom we served look us over appraisingly and remark: "Do you drive only one horse, doctor?" That was competition you see they fancied a doctor ought to run a small livery stable of his own. When I moved to the city I brought my horse along but, alas, the atmosphere proved deleterious, and with a heavy heart I had to let her go in favor of a gasoline wagon In the city I soon lost my child like faith in people and discovered that doctors are only too human. In the city people rarely ask a doctor if he drives only one car. Now, why is that?

The only child undoubtedly deserves much sympathy from the world that he doesn't get and gets much sympathy from his parents that spoils him. He learns not how to endure self-denial, but how to get the most out of selfishness. All the love and petting of the family comes to him and handicaps him in his preparation for his battle and unsympathetic world. Mind, the only child is not necessarily selfish, pampered, humored, undisciplined and spoiled but it is infinitely more difficult to spoil a child who has one or more brothers or sisters to divide the pleasures and responsibilities of childhood with him.

There is a physical cause for "one child sterility" in far too many instances, a cause of which the mother is tragically innocent. There is a moral cause in as many instances but one remove from the soulless institution of an intentionally childless union.

The only child is accustomed to having had his ways made smooth, and he cannot stand the rough road of life. In childhood he is more difficult to get along with than are children blessed with brothers and sisters; he wants to dominate everybody and when he finds he can't do so he whines and howls and seeks support from his parents, who unreasonably assume that he is being unfairly treated.

A boy came whimpering to his father, complaining that a playmate had chased him out of the yard and knocked hom down. The boy's mother favored measures of reprisal But the father went out and called the playmate, who explained that the boy had three times kicked over a sand fort his young sister had constructed, so the only thing to do was to drive the bully away. The father complimented the playmate for insisting on fair play and sent the whimpering bully off to bed for the rest of the day. He asked my opinion of thetreatment. I thought it was all right but a prophylactic would have been beter. The youngster needed a brother or sisted to share things with him.

How to Keep a Stomach In

"I am 14 years of age and I have a rather full stomach. My mother insists that I should wear a corset. but I don't want to because you have saidthat corsets do girls more harm than good. Can you sugget anythink else I can do to keep my stomach in . A.F.L."

Mother and I do not agree very well, it seems. Physical training will enable you to keep your stomach in. If your mother gives no physical education, write me again. inclosing the essential S.A.E. and repeating your question I will tell you how to prove to mother that a girl's appearance, as well as her health, is to be improved without the use of abdominal splints or braces.

APSLEY

(Special Correspondence.)

Apsley, May 14.—A grand reception for the returned soldiers was given at the Union Hotel by Mr. Benjamin Coones on Friday evening, May 9th. As well as the returned soldiers about two hundred guests were present, and a most enjoyable evening was spent by all. When all were assembled the old familiar and beautiful song of "Home Sweet Home" was sung. Then Mrs. W. Staples was called upon to read an address of welcome to Ptes. Wm. Robert Scott and John Coones the former being presented with chinaware and the two latter with fountain pens, the presentation being made by Mrs. A. Jones. Presentations had been made to other soldiers previously. The following was the address:

To Ptes. Wm. and Robert Scott and John Coones:

Dear Friends,—We the people of Apsley and surrounding country, have assembled here tonight for the purpose of welcoming you home and to congratulate you on your safe return to the spot of all the earth most dear to you.

We are proud of the part you have played for it was no selfish ideal nor glory of conquest that called you to exchange the comforts of civil life for the sufferings of war and risk of death. among their most cherished traditions the story of your going forth of your daring and doing, of your sufferings and of the glorious victory that has crowned your efforts.

Your labors in the arduous role of soldiers is now ended and you are here this evening safe and sound in the midst of friends who rejoice over your return.

We know that this community counts among its sons men who have proved themselves to be the peers of mankind. some of whom have paid the supreme sacrifice and others have come back to us laden with honors manifest in the scars of wounds and in the splendid distinguished service order.

There is nothing we can do that would adequately indicate our feeling of the debt we owe to you for what you have done and suffered in our cause. We have reason to thank you among our Allied soldiers that our homes are protected, our liberties secure and our fears quelled.

We ask you to accept these gifts as a slight token of our welcome home and friends and hope that your future lives may be crowned with happiness and prosperity.

"For every cloud, a silvery light;
God wills it so.
For every vale, a shining height;
A glorious morn for every night;
And birth for labors throe.
For snows white wing, a verdant field:
A gain for loss.
For buried seed the harvest yield;
For pain a strength, a joy revealed,
A crown for every cross."

Signed on behalf of your friends.

A most suitable reply was made by Pte. Robert Scott on behalf of himself and the other returned heroes. Three cheers were then called for by Rev. C. A. Spence. Anglican clergyman. Then all joined in singing "O, Canada."

Music and singing was rendered by Rev. J. H. and Mrs. Beck and Rev. C. A. Spence which was much appreciated.

Y. W. C. A. CLOSE ANOTHER VERY SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Gratifying Reports Read by Officials at Annual Meeting Held Last Evening—the Wonderful Growth of the Institution—Presentation to Miss Parker.

Over one hundred and twenty people gathered in the Green Room of the Y. W. C. A. last evening the occasion being the annual meeting of that institution. Mrs. W. D. Scott, occupied the chair and presided over the meeting.

Rev. J. R. Webb conducted the opening part of the program with scripture and prayer. The reports of the various departments were read, showing marked advance in the work of the "Y" along many lines. Miss Ida Lynn and Miss Laura Logan provided the musical part of the program.

Miss Parker was called upon by the President to announce the Girls' Summer Camp, which is to be opened in connection with the Y. W. C. A. on Stoney Lake from June 15 to September 15.

The announcement of the camp was received with enthusiasm by the girls present.

At the conclusion of the business part of the evening a play pageant "The Wayside Piper" was presented by about twenty girls including members of the Expression Class and club girls. Miss Murray Played the part of the Piper. The little play was well presented and much talent was shown among that who took part.

An unexpected item on the program was a presentation to Miss Parker of a beautiful bouquet of roses and a pearl pen, a graceful testimony of the appreciation and love of the girls of the "Y"

The meeting concluded with the National Anthem.

Following are the reports:

Board of Management

The events of the year have been wonderful, a year never to be forgotten. "The year the war ended" will be the marker o ftime for many decades. It seems fitting that your Board of Management should be able to report that the year of the great victory has been in many respects the banner year of the Association.

The first important event was the formal opening of the swimming pool by W. G. Morrow, Esq., who with other members of the Advisory Board had given fully of their time and attention to this work during the building of the same. Miss Littlefield delighted the onlookeds by performing many clever feats, and also conducted charming folk dances on the lawn in connection with the garden party. which was held the same evening.

During the first month that the pool was in operation there were sixty one members gained to the Association. Though it was deemed wise, owing to the fuel situation to close the pool at the end of the summer, the exhibition as given at the "Closing" was a most creditable showing and many applicants are anxiously awaiting the opening of the nineteen nineteen season.

I spite of the serious handicap at the commencement of the year, due to the influenza scourge, the size and work of Miss Littlefield's Gymnasium Classes have been unparalled in this city. All who witness the closing last week could not but appreciate the splendid success of Miss Littlefield's work

In speaking of the flu epidemic, it may be stated tha tMrs. Morrison, who is recognized by all conversant with the workings of the House as a mos tcapable superintendent, won fresh laurels acting in the capacity of nurse, caring for some twenty cases all of whom recovered.

Several young ladies attended the Girls' Summer Conference at Longford and brought back to the September rally inspiring reports. Our General Secretary, Miss Parker, has been active amongst the girlhood of the city both in the Association and outside of that. Much time has been given to Industrial and Extension Work, making regular visits to the different factories at the noon hour where interesting little programs and talks have been given.

Club work, Open House on New Year's Day, Valentine teas, Masquerades, Junior Parties, Saturday afternoon story hour, little group teas given by Mrs. Morrison, have each contributed their share in making the social phase of the work prominent. Miss Murray of Ingersoll who was engaged in January to take over the duties of the Assistant Secretary has been not only an acquisition to the office, but through her musical attainments has served in that capacity as well.

Early in February a banquet was tendered to the young women of Peterdborough by the ladies of the Board this being preparatory to the launching of the membership campaign, which brought the Association membership up to seven hundred and fifty one.

A grant of seventy five dollars was made to the Foreign work and fifty dollars was sent to the Domininon Council. The Board is indebted to the Estate of Robert Innes for a bequest of three hundred dollars.

Ot will be interesting to many girls to know that a Committee of the Board is, at the suggestion of Miss Parker endeavoring o arrange for a summer camp at Stoney Lake.

The Board has regretted the enforced absence of our President. Miss Dickson, for the greater part of the year. Miss Dickson has always been indefatigable in her efforts to further the interests of the Association, and we sincerely trust that she may very soon be with us again. Mrs. W. D. Scott first Vice President has taken charge of the work in a most whole hearted manned during the absence of the President.

Reference has been made to the physical, industrial and social returns of the Association work. Its finel yield is something infinitely finer and more valuable than these—young women whose eyes have been opened to the purpose and meaning of life, whose hearts have been kindled to its joys, whose hands have been trained to minister to others' needs whose wills have been keyed to service, whose spirits are alive with energy, an Institution whose product is this type of womanhood is surely entitled to the hearty support of Peterborough citizens.

F. DAISY CRUIKSHANKS,
Secretary.

Secretary's Report

"The purpose of this organization shall be to lead young women into personal loyalty to Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord, and to associate them in an organized effort to promote their spiritual, intellectual, social and physical well being and thus make the association in co-operation with the church, a social factor in the Kingdom of God."

Such is the purpose of the Young Women's Christian Association of Canada and it is by measuring the work according to this standard that it may be know whether or not our mission is being fulfilled

This organization exists for the g.i. of Peterborough and all the departments are open to all girls. The interests of the Association are wider than its own doors and greater than its own membership, and the aim of the Association will not be attained until its influence is felt and its ideals recognized throughout the city in the lives of the girls.

The Association presents this year a report showing marked advance and

STRENGTH FOR YOUNG MOTHERS

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restores Health and Strength.

Lansing, Mich.—"After the birth of my child I was not able to stand on my feet. I was so weak I could not get up. I suffered such pains in my back I could not work or hardly take care of my baby. One of my neighbors recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, and I got better right away and was soon a new woman and could work hard, and I can recommend these remedies to other young mothers who are weak and ailing as I was."—Mrs. ORA O. BOWERS, 621 S. Hosmer Street, Lansing, Mich.

Women who are in Mrs. Bowers' condition should not continue to suffer from weakness and pain—but profit from her experience and give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial.

For suggestions in regard to your condition write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of their 40 years' experience is at your service.

You Are the Very Chap Who Said It

Just two years ago you were full of patriotic thrills as you read the first fragments of that immortal story of Candian valor at Vimy Ridge. You were proud to be a Canadian; you were proud because you knew intimately so many of the boys who took part in that battle. You waited anxiously for the casualty lists, and

You Said: "Nothing Is Too Good For Those Boys"

You know you did—and you meant what you said. Do you mean it now? The boys who have come back have made of you a very simple request. They believed what you have been saying for nearly five years—they took you at your word, and they thought they had only to ask.

But How Much Will You Give the G. W. V. A.?

The boys want a home of their own. They have asked Peterborough for $15,000, and it is up to the citizens of Peterborough to see to it that it does not lag behind in assisting the Veterans in their enterprise.

Gallager's Blood Purifier

And why will it do all this? Listen:

SCIENTIST HAVE LEARNED FROM THE GREAT WAR

that there are certain ingredients found only in the vegetable world which are necessary to keep the body in continuous good health, and without this vegetable diet sooner or later, the system becomes deranged; the organs refuse to do their work properly and headaches, stomach trouble, liver trouble follows. Now, ingredients of these kinds are found in excess in certain vegetation: and plants of this type called medicinal herbs. These have been scientifically selected, combined and compounded in "Gallagher's Blood Purifier" to put into the blood the necessary salts to cause the stomach, bowels and liver to act in a natural healthy manner, thus removing the cause and effecting a cure in a natural way.

Unlike Mineral Drugs it is Digested and Assimilated by the Digestive System

just as food is, and this is why it may be taken for years without losing its effects.

Laxatives composed of Mineral Drugs merely irritate the alimentary canal thus causing the stomach and bowels to set to work to violently expel them as quickly as possible. This of course carries with it the waste matter, which is preferable to leaving it there, but each time this happens the irritation becomes less and less until sooner or later the dose has to be increased or the medicine changed. Do you not believe with us that herbal remedis are safe, natural and sure and do not leave sediments in the system to clog it, but nature's way to heal and cure.

For those of sedentary habits whose liver and bowels are prone to inactivity, this laxative above all others will incite them to natural action and will leave the impression that something helpful to the whole system has been taken. Families in this county have used it for over thirty years and it still remains a first favorite. Put up in large bottles for 50 cents.

Other Herbal Remedies put up by this firm and equally good in their own way are:—"Life Drops," a liniment for internal or external use. "Golden Drops," the greatest healing agent known to science. "Kidney Cure," a safe ad sure remedy for any kidney troubles. "Gallagher's Vermifugue," for children or adults. "Cough Syrup," purely vegetable and contains no opiate.

All these remedies are put up in pale blue cartons and labels. Watch for them. A list of Dealers where these medicine may be had will be given in next weeks issue.

Although these patents have been used as household remedies in East Peterborough County for forty years, they are now for the first time being advertised and put on the general market. Read the story of the origin of them, found in a wrapper around each bottle.

BEGIN HOT WATER DRINKING IF YOU DON'T FEEL RIGHT

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.

If you wake up with a bad taste bad breath and tongue is coated; if your head is dull or aching; if what you eat sours and forms gas and acid in stomach, or you are billious, constipated, nervous, sallow and can't get feeling just right, begin inside bathing. Drink before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will flush the poisons and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels and cleanse, sweeten and purifying the entire alimentary tract. Do your inside bathing immediately upon arising in the morning to wash out of the system all the previous day's poisonous waste, gases and sour bile before putting more food into the stomach.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became loaded with body impurities, get from your pharmacist a quarter pound of limestone phosphate which is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.

Just as soap and water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Men and women who are usually constipated, bilious, headachy or have any stomach disorder should begin this inside bathing before breakfast. They are assured they will become real cranks or the subject shortly.

EDITOR'S MAIL

THE RIGHTS OF INDIANS

Editor Review:

Sir.—Ever since the beginning of the war in 1914 I have read of how the Indians of North America have proved their loyalty to the Allied cause. They have contributed money for relief work, they have enlisted in Canada and even when the United States entered the war they also enlisted under the Stars and Stripes, notwithstanding the barborous treatment which they received in times past from the hands of officials.

Since the approach of peace a Montreal paper has mention the settling of returned soldiers on farms and suggested the appropriating of Indian lands for the purpose.

If Canada is so crowded, why is she so congenial to the immigrants? Why does she harbor so many Germans living on the fat of the land?

Again, who owned North America in the first place, if not the Indian? Is this the way to pay a people for what they have given in life and money to the great cause? Is it just that we should lay hands on all we desire, regardless of smaller people's rights? Are we to encourage immigrats of every type and in a general way exercise our own sweet will on every occasion and in all places giving no consideration to the wishes and requirements of these more dependent ones we have amongst us? We cry down the German creed with on voice, yet is there not Kaiserism in this?

It has always been my belief that Canada at least, if not the United States, has treated the Indians fairly but from my reading of late of the letters of the three Cree chiefs in the Montreal paper for instance, I have arrived at thes conclusion that our Government is going wrong on this point. If Great Britain should break her treaty with the Indians would she be any better in a moral sense than eGrmany with her broken treaties?

For the sake of your Indian reserves, knowing that I sympathize with them, I would be glad if this letter could be published.

P. S.—British Columbia, while administratered by the Hudson Bay Company, was claimed by Spain, until Vancouver adjusted matters in our favor several years after King George's proclamation was issued. The province has never allowed that the proclamation affected its relationships to those Indians who were there, as the British found, to their cost when they settled on the Pacific. It is of course, not certain that tthese were the aboriginal occupants of that country and it must be remembered that this letter comes from the United States, where the Indians have received different treatment from that accorded to those in Canada.

Summertime Hats, Enchanting In Their Beauty

And "Flowers gayly bloom on ladies' hats." Large hats, summery and drooping, or small round turbans, all succumb alike to the vogue of flowers. And a pretty fashion it is, too, which deftly turns each model into a thing of beauty.

There's a pattern hat that is almost "too lovely for words." A medium large shape with a dust color georgette brim, slit at one side, and a crown of dust color Batavia cloth. Trimmed with wheat and poppies, in shades of sand, Nile green and Victory rose. The price is $16.00

For sports wear we are showing a stunning little hat, somewhat on the jockey shape, made of white corded ribbon with under brim of white silk straw. Trimmed with white wool flowers and green wool leaves. Priced at $10.00

A very attractive matron's hat is a small shape with a deep roll side, made with a Milan straw crown and Miline, braid trimmed brim. Trimmed with a deep glycerined Ostrich mount. The price $11.00

You cannot overlook the charm of the new Watteau Hats, as artistic as their inspiration. And there are countless other hats—in all the new transparencies and braids, just ready to blossom out into the summer sunshine.

Irresistibly lovely. One could safely say that about a large drooping hat. The crown is made of all-over black lace and protrudes in points out into the brim of leghorn. There are tiny rosebuds in pastel shades around the crown and pipings and streamers of French blue ribbon. Price .. $15.00

Another pattern model comes in a novelty shape with a white silk braid facing on the brim which turns directly over at one side to hold white wings in place. The crown and top of brim are of jade green taffeta. Priced at $13.50

White Miline straw trimmed with white Ostrich is used to fashion a very pretty little poke hat. It is moderately priced at $9.50

New Originations In Frocks and Wraps

Just the daintiest frocks imaginable. Combining a smart appearance with cool comfort, are late arrivals, in plain and printed georgettes, foulard and georgette combinations, trim taffetas, crepe de chines and fetching little muslin gowns. Tunics, embroideries, sashes, flare sleeves, short sleeves, are employed to fashionable advantage. Some have lines and others are the most lineless dresses that have ever been seen.

Decidedly new and altogether lovely is a little model of combination white georgette and figured georgette in rose shading. Made in a Russian blouse style, with narrow roll collar of white organdy and short frill sleeves. At the neck, waist and sleeves there are bandings and bows of turquoise blue velvet ribbon. Price $60.00

Rajah promises to be very popular this season. One style is in pongee shade and made in coat fashion. Plain narrow skirt, with coatee bodice with tailored sleeves and vest of self material trimmed with rows of rose silk wool embroidery. Priced at ... $33.00

Charmingly simple is a dress of white jersey. Round collarless neck, narrow belt, and wide bands of white silk braiding around bodice, sleeves and skirt. The price .. $19.00

In a very few words one might state the way of the mode in wraps—coats of cape lines, coats short and jaunty for sport wear, and capes in a diversity of graceful, clever developments.
that we are showing is a distinct achievement in grace and practicability combined. Lengths vary from three-quarter to full lengths. Drapes play a fashionably important part.

Picturesque, yet eminently serviceable withal, is a Dolman wrap of elegant quality charmeuse, in wisteria shade. It is lined throughout with white satin. A large shawl collar is gathered into the front lapels. Fastened with a tie sash edged with fringe. Price $67.00

Dust color tricotine, of fine quality, is used in the making of an exceedingly smart cape coat. Lined throughout with blue plaid silk. It has a cape collar and an over-collar of navy charmeuse. About the feet it is gracefully drawn in and trimmed with buttons. Belt fastening in front. Priced at $85.00

In Blue Devil shade comes another Dolman cloak, of lovely soft French velours; panel effect in the back, with two rows of large grey buttons at the bottom; over-collar of quaker grey velours. The price $19.00

Millbrook, May 14.—Mr. L. E. Soden son of Mr. R. J. Soden of Peterborough was in town last week on business. He has just returned from overseas where he was with the Cobourg Heavy Battery.

Messrs Frank Whitehouse and son Sam, of Peterborough were in town on Friday, the former taking part in the concert in the Town Hall, again delighting a Millbrook audience with his excellent violin selections.

Mrs. R. Mitchell and daughter, Miss Dela, have returned to Toronto after a pleasant visit with friends and relatives in Millbrook and Cavan. Her son Mr. Norman Mitchell has a flourishing shoe repair shop on Gerard street and Miss Lillie Mitchell has a good position in a clothing store.

Mrs. Cyrus Trick of Kingston, was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. James Trick last week.

Miss Rosy Brown of Kingston is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. James Trick.

Rev. S. T. Tucker, B.A., B.D. of Deseronto has accepted the call to Millbrook Methodist Church

Pte. Herbert Trick arrived home from overseas on May 1st. He enlisted with the 1st Eastern ~~Ontario~~ Ontario Depot Bn., at Kingston, went to England February 15, 1918, to France June 10th and was transferred to the 38th Bn., 4th Division. He was wounded in the head September 29th last. He was in hospital three weeks and again returned to the fighting zone. He returned on the Belgic. He is glad to be home. He is to be married next month to the young lady to whom he was engaged before going overseas. We are pleased to welcome him home.

Gunner Milton Carr, son of Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Carr, Cavan, has returned from overseas. He enlisted in Jan. 1916, went to England in September 1916, went to England in September and to France, November 15, the same year. He was with the 87th Grenadier Guards of Montreal. He was wounded in the shoulder on April 11, 1917, at Vimy Ridge. He was in Hospital and convalescent camp until July 13, 1917, was transferred to the 48th Bn., and returned to the lines. He was in much fighting but escaped further injury. He sailed for home on the 14th of April, on the Olympic, having a good trip and arriving on April 24th. He went over on the S. S. Corsican. We are all pleased to welcome him home.

Mother's Day was fittingly observed by all the churches in the district last Sunday. Special and eloquent sermons were delivered by the minister and appropriate music was rendered.

Special services were held in the Methodist Church last Sunday. Eloquent sermons were delivered by Rev. W. H. Higgs, morning and evening, and those who have not held their mothers in the high esteem and respect that they should, would be well advised if they weighed fully the inspiring words of the preacher, along these lines. Every man, woman and child has reason to be proud of a good mother. The hand that that rocks the cradle rules the world is an old but true saying. When you think that you are forsaken, the dear old mother, if she is still living will cling to you. The services were made still more interesting by several splendid selections by the men's choir of twenty five voices.

Mrs. David Henry has probably made a record with her 120 egg incubator, which produced 105 chickens from one setting. She attributed her success to raising the mosture pan and having cooled the eggs under a woolen shawl. Can any chick raiser beat this record? We congratulate Mrs. Henry on her success.

The annual meeting of the Epworth League was held on Monday, May 12, Reports were given and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year.

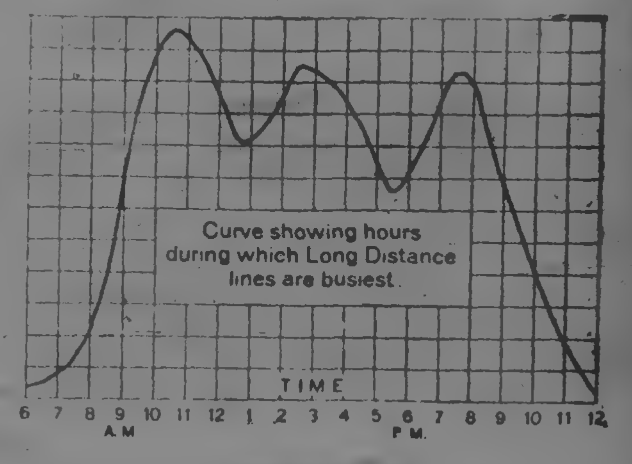
Peak Loads



IN practically all public services there are what are known as peak load hours—hours during which the demands for service are greater than at other hours of the day. A striking example of this is seen in the case of the street railway rush in the period just preceding and following the business day.

The accompanying curve shows the distribution of Long Distance business over the various hours of the day. It is evident that to make use of the service at hours other than those in which the peak loads are being carried, means that you obtain a more prompt and satisfactory service.

We suggest that where possible, you place your Long Distance Calls so as to avoid the hours of peak loads.

BREAD SHOULD BE WRAPPED AS A SANITARY MEASURE?

This is the Opinion of Dr. Amys, M. O. H.—Two Bakers Are Willing.

The local Board of Health met in regular monthly session last evening with Chairman W. H. Buller presiding. The other members present were James Murty, H. P. Morgan and Dr. Amys, M. O. H.

The report of the Queen Mary Hospital for April giving the expenditures for April as $498.85, was adopted as satisfactory.

On motion of Messrs. Morgan and Murty, the city solicitor will be asked to advise the Board as to the city's liability regarding persons, including indigents, suffering from venereal disease requiring a diagnosis and medical treatment.

A batch of accounts were ordered to be paid.

Wrapping of Bread.

Dr. Amys strongly urged the adoption of a resolution requesting the wrapping of bread as a sanitary measure. It appears that two leading local bakers have intimated that if requested by the Board of Health to wrap their bread they will comply. The doctor submitted a newspaper clipping from a Toronto paper showing that there is considerable agitation in that city for the adoption of a bylaw to enforce the wrapping of the staff of life.

The other members of the Board could not see the question through the M. O. H.'s eyes and took the stand that the bakers willing to wrap bread can do so without a request from the Board to do so. There is nothing to prevent them taking such a course.

Despite the proclamation of Major Hammond of Chatham requesting citizens to revert to standard time business in the city moved on much the same as usual yesterday, few clocks being changed to the old time, with the exception of the city clock.

John Taylor, Wabash locomotive engineer of St. Thomas, is suffering from some injuries to his head and face, which he sustained this morning when he jumped from his rapidly moving engine to escape being scalded when a flue burst in his engine.

Vivian Martin And The Trouble Buster

Mike, the shaggy Irish terrier who appears with Vivian Martin in "Molly Entangled" at the Empire Theatre, today and tomorrow comes in for a great deal of attention at the Paramount studio. Indeed, he might be said to be the spoiled darling of that institution, for his owner, Miss Martin is a thorough believer in the saying "love me love my dog" and the surest way to her smiles is to bestow a pat or a candy upon Mike. Some confusion was caused during the filming of "The Trouble Buster" which was Miss Martin's previous picture and in which she was affectionately known as "Mike," for, whenever she was called, the dog would come bounding in regardless of whether he was entering a "set" or not. In fact, he seemed to know when the cameraman was grinding, and to try to get "into pictures." His efforts are rewarded in "Molly Entangled," in which he is given a rather prominent part which he carries off with credit.

MAKE-UP WORKED ONLY TOO WELL

WALLACE BERRY NEEDED A SCAR IN "THE UNPARDONABLE SIN"

Wallace Beery, the well known motion picture actor who appears in "The Unpardonable Sin" prominent in the support of Blanche Sweet, will remember his engagement in the big Harry Garson picture for a long time —and for very practical reasons.

In order that he might "look the part" he was called upon to play. Mr. Beery found it advisable to manufacture a scar about six inches long on his left cheek. The "manufacturing" was done with the aid of the homely first-aid preparation known as Nu-Skin, the cheek being pulled into a "pucker" to represent the scar, and held in that position by the quick collodion substance which dries tightly enouhg to resemble liquid glue.

The scar was a wonderful success from the standpoint of the director, and Beery screened perfectly for the part. It so happened, however, that the filming of the Beery scene required such a long time that when the actor tried to get back to his normal cast of countenance he found it—and is still finding it —extremely difficult. For days at a time Mr. Beery slept with the Nu-Skin on his face, finding it easier to keep the make-up on than to put it on a-fresh each morning and when the time came when he wanted to be without a scar to secure another engagement where a comely face would fit better than a disfigured one the "scar" had been so well wrinkled in that it refused to come out. As recently as a week ago Mr. Beery was making daily trips to a beauty specialist, a la Lillian Russell, to "have his beauty ironed."

The performance given by Mr. Beery—entirely aside from the scar —is one of the big artistic touches of the play. Given a thankless role, and one which inspires anything but sympathy, he is conceded to have handled it in a masterly fashion. It is a step onward in the career of a splendid screen actor.

The encouragement which Marshal Neilan, director of the picture, has given to all of the principals in his cast, has had much to do with the superior merit of the picture throughout. While Blanche Sweet is the star and always remains the centre of attraction, not only because of the prominence of her part, but also because of the splendid manner in which she interprets it, there has been none of the customary "playing down" of other characters in order that the star might profit by comparison. There are half a dozen "bits" in the screen play that will be remember fully as long as will be the performances given by the principals.

Theatregoers in Peterborough are fortunate in being afforded this early opportunity of seeing "The Unpardonable Sin." The production has just been finished and is now being shown in the important theatres in the East. The engagement in Peterborough is scheduled for the Grand where two performances will be given daily, from Thursday to Saturday, inclusive, with matinees at 2.30 o'clock and night shows at 8.15.

Sporting Gossip

What was the greatest batting records ever hung up by an individual player in a single game? Most baseball authorities give the credit to Ed Delehanty and Bobby Lowe, but neither of these major league home-run kings quite equaled the mark set up just 24 hours ago today May 12, 1895, by a minor leaguer who answered to the name of Billy Bottenus. On the date in question Billy was wearing the uniform of the Buffalo club in the Eastern League. The Bisons were playing Wilkesbarre and during the course of the pastime Bottenus got four home runs and a double.

The previous year Bobby Lowe of the Boston Nationals had connected with Pitcher Chamberlain of the Reds for four home runs and a single. This stands as the major league records, although it was equaled in 1896 by Ed Delehanty, of the Phillies, whose victim was Pitcher Terry of the Chicago Nationals. The nearest approach to this record was made by old Dan Brouthers, while with Detroit, Dennis getting four home runs in one game.

Billy Bottenus made another great Eastern League record in 1893 when he was playing with Springfield against Binghamton. He led off in one inning with a home run, came to bat a second time in the same chapter and pulled off another homer, and in the succeeding inning got another drive for the complete circuit. The best batting record for one inning in the majors was that of Fred Merkle, of the Giants just eight years ago tomorrow. In a game with the Cardinals, Harmon and Loudermilk twirling, Merkle made a home run and a double in one inning, scoring twice and bringing home five additional runs in one chapter.

The only modern swatter to equal the old record of four homes and a single in one game was Jackley, a backstop of the Ironton club of the Ohio State League, in 1913. Nash of Hamilton, Ohio, was the twirler whose delivery was so soft for Jackley.

Dan Morgan apparently is not a person to permit his personal feelings to interfere with his judgment. Morgan has no reason to feel pleasantly toward Dempsey, for that boxer stopped Battling Levinsky in three rounds. Following this defeat of the Battler considerable friction developed between Morgan and Jack Kearns. Notwithstanding all this, Morgan declares that in his sober judgment Dempsey will stop Willard within ten rounds. Morgan insists that Willard's long absence from actual ring contests cannot fail to reduce his effectiveness as a fighter. Morgan points out that Dempsey, who is at the height of his form, has been fighting steadily for two or three years.

The Willard-Dempsey contest will entail an expenditure of $3150 a minute for the boxers, providing the match goes the full twelve rounds. Willard will receive a fraction more than $2387 a minute, while Dempsey's reward will be a fraction more than $763 a minute.

POSTMAN STUART LEAVES SERVICE

PRESENTED WITH CLUB BAG AND COMPLIMENTRY ADDRESS BY ASSOCIATES.

When the letter carriers assembled in their rooms at the post office at noon today Carrie William Stuart who has resigned his position to remove to Toronto, where he will enter business, was presidented with a handsome club bag and the following address was read by Postmaster Edgar:

Dear Friend and Fellow Worker:

We, the members of branch No. 22, Federeration of A. L. C., have learned with regret, that you have decided to leave the service after havіny served the public so well and faithfully for the past eleven years.

We who have been so closely identified with you in our joint work wish to hereby testify to your sterling qualities of character. You have ever been a conscientious worker, faithful to your duties and courteous to your fellowmen generally. The public will lose a valuable servant and citizen, but we, your fellow workers, will bear he loss most.

As a slight token of our appreciation of your friendship, we respectully request you to accept this club bag and trust that you may often use it in coming back to the city where you may be sure you will find a royal welcome especially from your old friends, the letter carriers.

Wishing you and yours every success and prosperity in your new home, we remain.

Yours very sincerely,
J. EDGAR, Postmaster.

Mr Stuart, who delivered most in the central part of the city, was one of the most popular carriers on the force. He had been in the service ever since the street delivery system was introduced here eleven years ago, the only "first original" now left being Carrier Charles Stenton.

SHORTAGE OF STAR PLAYERS IN BIG BASEBALL LEAGUES

Pitchers Especially Are Scarce and Managers Say There is no Remedy for Situation.

Baseball is facing its greatest player shortage in years. Even with the great majority of players returned from the service and with all the shipyarders and steel leaguers back, the big show still is lacking woefully in talent.

Baseball is experiencing a remarkable revival. The return of peace, Sunday baseball in the East, and the love of America for the sport, are bound to make big league baseball a still greater institution than it has been in the past. And yet there are so few real players!

Even during the Federal League days few ball clubs masqueraded around the country with such a woeful pitching staff as the Philadelphia National League club now possesses. There isn't a pitcher among them who might be depended on to win fifteen or eighteen games a season. Jacobs, Watson, Oeschger, Prendergast, Packard, Woodward, Flagstaff—what a pitching staff!

If Philadelphia were alone in such a situation it would not be so bad, but it is a state of affairs that prevails with most National League clubs with the xception of Brooklyn and Chicago. Others are not quite as bad as the Phillies. Boston has one top-liner in Nehf, Pittsburg a good man in Copper, and St. Louis a promising youngster in Goodwin.

On the whole the pitching situation is better in the American League, though the Browns have a feeble pitching staff, and Connie Mack has little in Philadelphia outside of Scott Perry.

In other departments the grade of players does not run as high as it did half a dozen years back. Take the Boston National outfield, Kelly, Riggert and Powell, a taio of minor leaguers, with little chance of improvement. Though it is a strong pennant contender, Cleveland is obliged to play the veteran Doc Johnston on first base for want of a better man, while the St. Louis Browns can find no better thirdbaseman than Bronkie, a minor league veteran, who never hit more than .215 in the big leagues, if he hits that.

Even in the old days, no minor league team would feel well fortified with such battery material as the Phillies now possess, or with an outfield like the Brave trio.

Baseball managers will tell you there is no remedy for the situation. They say the minor leagues have no young stars roming along. It's too bad.

KING'S PLATERS GETTING READY

FAST TIME MADE BY HORSES TRAINING ON HEAVY TRACK.

Toronto, May 14—With the first shiny morning that has shown around here for the past few days a good crowd of railbirds was at the Woodbine track to see the King's Platers put through their paces. The track was heavy and holding.

Trainer Joe Doane was the first to start things rolling when he sent the Beardmore mare, Ladder o'Light, the Plate journey in the fractional time of 1-4 in .26. ⅜ in .41 3-5, ½ in .55 4-5. ¾ in 1.25, mile in 1.51. 2-5, and mile and a quarter in 2.21 2-5, well in hand.

Trainer George Walker then sent the Dyment filly, May Bloom, a mile and an eight in: 1-4 in .26 2-5, ⅜ in .3' 4-5, ½ in .55 2-5. ⅝ in 1.07, ¾ in 1.21 2-5, mile in 1.4' 3-5 and the 1⅛ miles in 2.04. A real nice move, considering track conditions.

The Guelph candidate, Master Fox was given a mile in 1.53 2-5.

The hope of the west, Cemas, the big chestnut from London, was given a mile by Trainer John Nixon in: 1-4 in .27½. ⅜ in .41 3-5. ½ in .55 4-5, ¾ in 1.23 4-5 and the mile in 1.57, tiring on end.

Jockey Willie Gibson who has just been discharged from the C.E.F. is now evercising for Trainer McNaught. This is the boy who rode with success around the half-mile circuits.

Jockey McDermott, who rode around here with success several seasons ago and who has just returned from France, was also at the track and will start getting into condition right away. This boy was set down by the judges before going overseas, and will try and get back into the good graces of the C.R.A.

The Plat candidate, Uncle John, who started at Pimlico and finished last, was not such a bad performer, he being up with the running in the early part, but tiring. Ammunition, the Geo. Hendrie colt, started at Louisville in the last race Saturday and finished last. This colt is the most favored for the Guineas this year, but on this performance he will have to improve.

Other works of the morning were:

Old Pope, mile in 1.53 1-5.
Ravencourt, ⅝ in 1.10 3-5.
Cullaghbaun and Lorane, 1-4 in 1.27.
Mahamoet and Player, ½ in .56 2-5.
Forward On, 1-4 in .26 2-5.
Sallnmore, ⅜ in .39 1-5.
Modock, ½ in .58.
Harwood, 1-4 in .28½.
Velma Polly and Plymouth Rock, 1-4 in .26 4-5.
Cora W., 1-4 in .27 1-5.

PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS TO COST OVER EIGHT MILLIONS

This is Exclusive of Furniture,--New House For Members a Perfect Paradise of Modern Comforts.

Ottawa, May 14. The new Parliament Buildings, which are to be ready to accommodate Canada's legislators next session are to be a veritable modern palace of wonders. Not even the thriftiest member from the Maritime Provinces winced last night in the House of Commons, when Hon. F. B. Carvell said that the total cost exclusive of furniture would be at least $8,000,000.

There is to be a private room for every member who wishes it, furnished with a lounge, carpet, hot and cold water, and other adornments. There are to be ten elevators the swellest of restaurants; heat comes from a plant a quarter of a mile away; everything in the way of luxury, beauty, and health that money, science and art can give.

May be Gymnasium

And in addition there may be a gymnasium. H. B. Morphy, Dr. J. W. Edwards, Dr. R. J. Manion, and others advocated it and Mr. Carvell favored it and is even inclining to have a committee consider the proposal.

"We need systematic exercise," declared Edwards of Frontenac. "Ours is not an eight hour day, but one of twelve, fifteen, or eighteen hours." Mr. Carvell promised a cure for flabbiness in the new buildings. There will at least be an indoor promenade there may be a gymnasium.

The House voted $2,000,000 towards the building without the flicker of an eyelid, although there was considerable discussion, practically none of it critically, but mostly by way of suggestion from members who sought increased facilities for health or [illegible] exercise.

Haven't Got Good Value

Mr. Carvell confessed to great disappointment at the progress of the work. "We have not got value received for the money spent," he declared." There seems to be a feeling that it is easy Government money and that it would be a mistake to get things done too soon."

Barring srikes the building should be in such shape by January next that it can be occupied. The House of Commons chamber will be completed but the Senate will not. However, some of the commodious rest or reading rooms can be converted into a temporary home for the Senators. There will still remain in addition to the finishing of the Upper Chamber, a great deal of interior decoration work to be finished. Eighty-four rooms for members are now completed.

The building is going to cost a great deal more than was anticipated warned Mr. Carvell. The original estimate was $5,000,000 but the cost of material has gone up, wages have soared and that amount has been more than spent already. It is estimated that $2,000,000 more will be spent this year. "And then it will be nowhere completeed," added the Minister. He though $8,000,000 would be a fair estimate. Waste paper baskets and other furniture will have to be added to that.

BEST CATCHER FOR BASEBALL

"KID" GLEASON GIVES THAT PLACE OF HONOR TO SCHALK.

Cleveland, May 14—Praise is a boost, indeed, emanating from Manager Kid Gleason of the White Sox, a "pan" artist who knows how to "lay on" better than any manager in the big sho when occasion demands. The Kid says Ray Schalk is the greatest catcher in the world and that Bill Killefer of the Chicago Cubs runs him a close second. It was an off day here yesterday and Gleason was in several fanning bees. "He's the greatest catcher in the business," piped the Kid, referring to Schalk. Being a wise old owl, the Kid isn't going to divulge all the secrets that make this player the greatest ever behind the plate. It might be said right here that Schalk has grown in experience since joining the White Sox seven years ago. He has gained a knowledge of batsmen in the American league that is invaluable. Smartness is one of the characteristics that stamp Schalk as a super catcher in the opinion of the [illegible]dy and watchful Gleason.

Catchers Make Pitchers

"The Cubs and White Sox have some wonderful pitchers," said Gleason, "but they are made more wonderful by their catchers. You know who does the signing don't you?" A fan who was present ventured the opinion that the pitcher did the signing.

"He does nothing of the kind," said Gleason. "The catcher does the signing. Schalk signals for nearly every ball that is thrown. So does Killefer on the Cubs. I tell you those fellows are the smartest catchers in the business. Cicotte is having a great year, but don't overlook the little fellow who is down there at the receiving end. Let some mediocre catcher get back there and see what might happen.

"Cicotte and Williams have been [illegible]ng our opponents but Schalk is back there receiving and telling them what to throw."

Schalk tell what to throw and then Cicotte heaves it in there almost to a fracion of an inch where the little fellow wants it. Eddie has passed only two men in sixty-six innings, includink games of the exhibition trip, a wonderful show of control.

"Cicotte's control was so near perfect in his last game—the one here," said Schalk, himself, "that I believe he could have hit a half dollar piece."

GOLD WATCHES FOR VETERANS

WESTWOOD DOES HONOR TO THREE MORE OF ITS HEROES.

The town hall at Westwood was the scene of a very interesting event on Tuesday evening of last week when the citizens turned out in large numbers to welcome home three returned veterans, Pte. Thos. Long, Sergt. Gordon Manley and Pte. Thos. Drummond. Miss Everett read the address of welcome in behalf of the young lady workers of the Patriotic Club, and presented each of the boys with a gold watch, which she asked them to accept as a small expression of the gratitude and esteem which the citizens of their home town feel for them.

Each of the boys replied in fitting terms and thanked the club for their generosity, particularly as manifested by the large number of gifts they received while overseas.

Mr. Wm. Knox, president of the Westwood Patriotic Club, presided, while Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., and Rev. Mr. Horwood spoke at length to an interested and attentive audience.

It is worthy of note that each returned veteran is presented with a gold watch, ten alread. having been presented, the money being raised by private subscription. In this way the citizens of Westwood have set an example for other municipalities.

SIX MEN FORM BALLOON CREW

Five men, in addition to Lieut. Commander Coil, comprised the C-5's crew. A south wind was blowing at 15 miles an hour when it toop the air.

In addition to dirigible C-5 from Chatham, Mass., to join No. 1 and N-C 3 now at Trepassey Bay, Nfld. The United States, therefore now has three hydro airplanes and one dirigible prospective starters in Transatlantic air contest.

increase in several of its departments but while it is gratifying to know that earnest effort has been crowned with some degree of success, the field is so wide and the work is so great that such success may only be taken as encouragement to yet greater undertaking, and more faithful efforts.

While the work of such an organization as this cannot all be tabulated or related, some idea of the activities of the Association during the past year may be given.

Membership

A year ago our membership numbered four hundred. During the year it has almost doubled, and the total number of members now is 751, divided as follows:

Sustaining	90
Associate	222
Active	439

Of the active members those enrolled in the swimming classes

	215
In the Gymnasium	289
In the Club Classes	89
In Expression Classes	14

The increase in the membership is due cheifly to the opening of the Swimming Pool, during the four summer months, and to the successful membership campaign, conducted during the winter.

Physical Department

Without question the foundation of the Association work is the physical Department. The City of Peterborouhg is fortunate to possess the fine swimming pool which was opened last summer and the Association has been most fortunate in having the services of Miss Littlefield as both Swimming Instructor and Gymnasium teacher. The numbers in the classes and the results obtained from the pupils testify alike to the popularity of the teacher and the excelency of her work.

Swimming

The Pool, which was opened last summer was a popular place all through the season. Two hundred and fifteen pupils entered the classes and anumber came in for single swims. The Swimming Season was closed with a splendid exhibition of pupils' work and it is expected that when the pool is opened again, a greater number than even last year will be enrolled.

Gymnasium

Owing to the epidemic in the fall the gymnasium classes were discontinued for a month, so that the work was much broken into. But in spite of this the past year has been perhaps the most successful in the history of the Association. Fourteen classes, including three club classes, have been held weekly, with an enrolment of three hundred and seventy-eight. The largest class in numbers is the smallest class in the size of its members—juniors from four to eight number 67.

In the:

4 Junior Classes, the enrolment is	118
3 School Girl Classes	92
3 Senior Classes	55
2 Ladies' Classes	26
3 Club classes	89

The number of classes held during the season was 303.

As usual the Gymnasium Closing was an unqualified success, the culmination of a season's interesting and faithful work on the part of both teacher and pupil. Two hundred and fifteen pupils took part in the exhibition and did great credit to their training.

Club and Extension Work

The Work of the Junior Club has been carried along quietly this year. The number of members in this class has decreased, many children having entered the regular gymnasium Classes. Since January Miss Murray has been conducting a Story Hour with this class after their gymnasium work.

The Senior Clubs have not been standing still. The membership in ng the membership campaign The the classes was much increased during. Athena and Silver Link Clubs have been meeting regularly on Tuesday evenings during this season, under the direction of Miss Pryce and Mrs. Rogers and the members of these clubs have participated in the Gymnasium Closing, and as usual have been enthusiastic workers in the special undertakings of the Association. A new club "Merry Maids" has been formed during the season.

Co-operating with the Honeywell Evangelistic party the Y.W.C.A. gained an entrance into the factories at the noon hour, but his part of the work was seriously broken into in the fall, and for a while had to be dropped. However, noon hour visits are made two of the large factories, a brief program being given, a little music, a short talk and personal chat with the girls. These visits are much appreciated and eagerly looked for. During the year Saturday evenings have been reserved for basket ball and games in the Gymnasium. A number of Club girls with others, enjoyed these Saturday evening frolics which usually ended with refreshments.

Immigration

Recently with the opening of transportation, since the end of the war, reports have been sent from the Y.W.C.A. Immigration Secretary at the ports of St. John and Halifax of young women coming to Peterborough. A number of calls have been made on those whose names have been received. In most cases they were found to be soldiers' wives and they were glad to be greeted by the Young Women's Christian Association in this new land

Religious Work

The Religious Work Committee outlined a programme which was sadly interfered with by the break in the fall. The World's Week of Prayer coming when all was at a standstill, was not observed in the usual way this year Three group Bible study classes have been conducted by the Secretary.

BELL COMPANY CAN RAISE RATES

RAILWAY COMMITTEE DECIDES THAT THE PROPOSED INCREASE IS JUSTIFIED.

Ottawa, May 14.—Finding that an emergency situation exists, the burden of which should be divided between the Bell Telephone Company and the public, the railway committee in a judgment handed down today grants in part the application of the company for an increase in rates. The company asked for 20 per cent. increase in exchange rates, but the commission finds a 10 per cent. increase adequate to meet the situation. The long distance rates as filed were not objected to, and the judgment states that they may be allowed. These rates together with the 10 per cent. increase in exchange rates, will be sufficient to provide the sum of $1,100,000 required by the company to put it on a sound financial basis. The judgment states that the company since October 1908, has been earning on its outstanding securities less than four per cent., while there is an admitted need of an expenditure of 7,000,000 for replacements and new construction.

Why EDDY'S Matches are Better

THERE are two big reasons why Eddy's Matches are better than others. The first is wood, and the second is machinery. Matches require soft, smooth-fibred pine. Other wood does not make a perfect product. The House of Eddy can use only perfect blocks for matches because the rest of the wood can be used for paper or indurated fibreware.

The perfect match is the machine-made match. Absolute uniformity can be obtained in no other way. But match-making machinery is expensive to install and to operate. It requires a tremendous output to make its use profitable. No small manufacturer can afford to use it. 70,000,000 matches a day enable the House of Eddy to maintain automatic machines which would be impossible with a small output.

Think of this when you buy matches. Eddy's matches represent no waste—no use of poor material—no variations from standard. In these days when the tax on matches more than doubles their cost to you, it is worth while to consider the subject a little more closely.

When you buy matches see that Eddy's name is on the box. It is your best guarantee of satisfaction.

LONDONERS PAY TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF EDITH CAVELL

Funeral Service Held in Westminster Abbey Over Body of Martyred Nurse.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, May 15.—Great Britain paid tribue to Edith Cavell, the English nurse executed by the Germans at Brussels on October 12, 1915, here today, when her body, en route from Brussels to her native city of Norwich, was taken to Westminster Abbey for an impressive memorial service. It was a public funeral, in which it seemed every resident of the great metropolis endeavored to participate. The streets through which the cortege moved were congested with crowds, and every inch of standing room in the neighborhood of the abbey was occupied by a densely massed multitude which was eager to do reverent homage to "that brave woman," as the Bishop of London described her, "who deserves a great deal from the British Empire."

The congregation at the abbey included high officials of the Government, representatives of foreign countries, and men prominent in many walks of life. King George was represented by the Earl of Athlone, brother of Queen Mary.

Will Not Receive Irish Delegates

LLOYD GEORGE RECALLS INVITATION EXTENDED VISITORS FROM UNITED STATES.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, May 15.—Andrew Bonar Law told the Commons yesterday that Premier Lloyd George had asked Frank P. Walsh, Edward Dunne and Michael F. Ryan, representing Irish societies in the United States, to call upon him. He had planned to lay before them the British case and have it widely reported in America, where it is insufficiently understood, Mr. Bonar Law said. The Premier has withdrawn the invitation, the Government leader said, because, while he is willing to receive the Americans, he is unwilling to receive those who come to Ireland and not only take part in the politics of Ireland, but also in rebellious movements.

CAUSE OF DELAY IN POWER PROBLEM AT LAKEFIELD

Dickson Company Have Not Yet Named the Price of Their Dam to Hydro Commission

Mr. Burnham, M.P., for West Peterborough, has furnished for publication the following letters dealing with the power question at Lakefield and which accounts for the delay of which that village complains. The letters explain themselves.

Mr. Burnham's Letter.

Editor Review: As it is a matter of the greatest importance to the prosperity of Lakefield and the surrounding country, I forward you for publication copies of letters received by me from Hydro re Lakefield dam. It will be seen that the matter is progressing but I have written to Hydro further it would be well for Lakefield to do likewise.

The Delay Explained.

April 29th, 1919.

W. Sherine, Esq.,
Clerk and Treasurer,
Lakefield, Ont.

Dear Sir,—Referring to your recent request for estimates of cost of power delivered at Lakefield from the development of the Dickson dam.

We regret to advise that there has been a delay in this matter which has been beyond the control of the commission. Mr. Goodwill, who is acting in the interest of the Dickson Company, has found it impossible to get his people together to name a price to the Commission on the Dickson Company's holdings and as it is not possible for us to proceed with our estimates until a definite quotation on the company's properties is received, the Commission thinks it well that you should be advsed as to the cause of the delay.

Mr. Goodwill promised a day or so ago that he would make every endeavour to have the information in our hands in about two weeks time and on receipt of this the Commission will have the required estimates proceeded with as expeditiously as possible.

Trusting that the delay is not causing any serious inconvenience and hoping that it may be possible to place the requisite information in your hands at an early date.

Yours very truly,
HYDRO ELECTRIC POWER COMMISSION OF ONTARIO. (Sgd.)
F. A. CABY, Chef Engineer.

GENERAL STRIKE IN WINNIPEG PARALYZES EVERY INDUSTRY

Twenty-Seven Thousand Workmen Walk Out at Eleven O'clock This Morning, Including Clerks, Bookkeepers and Stenographers—Provision Made to Preserve Order.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Winnipeg, Man., May 15—Precisely at 11 o'clock this forenoon a general strike was launched and approximately 27,000 unionists left their work, street cars were taken to the barns, building elevators stopped running, postal employes went home, all deliveries of milk, bread and other fodstuffs ceased, and about three thousand clerks, bookkeepers and stenographers struck. Except for a specialy organised life saving crew, all the firemen walked out.

Policemen have been ordered by the strike committee to remain on duty, although they have voted solidly to strike, and some strikers have been delegated by the committee to offer their services in the interests of maintaining order. The water supply and hospital service have been arranged for by the strike committee. A citizens' committee of one thousand is being employed to maintain order.

The final conference, at which it was hoped to avert a general strike, ended late yesterday. No settlement was reached. Mayor Charles Gray said all his efforts had been exhausted to bring the contending parties into harmony, but without result.

James Winning, president of the Trades Council, said on coming from the meeting: "This means that the strike will become effective at 11 o'clock Thursday morning. We are at an absolute deadlock, and no further conferences haev been arrauged for."

To Be No Exceptions.

Winnipeg consequently faces one of the most serious strikes in its history. The city is confronted with the prospect of having all public utilities tied up. According to Labor leaders

GREAT WAR VETERANS' DRIVE

When the canvassers begin their work in the War Veterans' drive next week there are several questions that they will, no doubt, have put to them and it is well to clear up these matters and give the public the information that they are entitled to in regard to the Association:

Q.—What is the objects of the Association?

A.—Aims and objects of the Great War Veterans' Association of Canada:

(a) To perpetuate the close and kindly ties of mutual service in the great war, the recollections and associations of that experience, and to maintain proper standards of dignity and honor between all returned soldiers.

(b) To preserve the memory and records of those who suffered and died for the nation. To see to the erection of monuments to their valor; the provision of suitable burial places; and the establishment of an annual memorial day.

(c) To ensure that proper provision is made for the due care of the sick, wounded and needy among those who have served; including reasonable pensions, employment for such as are capable, soldiers' homes, medical care and equitable provision for dependent families of enlisted men.

(d) To constantly inculcate loyalty to Canada and the Empire and unstinted service in their interests.

(e) To guard carefully the good name, interests and the standing of our comrades still overseas, and to which they should be entitled upon their return.

(f) To impress upon its members, that they are to continue in their service to Canada as citizens, the same spirit of sacrifice and loyalty which they have shown to Canada and the Empire as soldiers, and to remain as members of the Association, non-sectarian and non-partisan.

(g) To establish, maintain and operate clubs, club-rooms, hospitals, employment and information bureaus, industrial and other schools and institutios, libraries and establishments for the benefit, promotion and advancement generally of the interests of soldiers, and to furnish, stock and equip the same in such manner as the Association may determine.

Q.—What protection has the public in dealing with the Association?

A.—The G.W.V.A. are incorporated by and subject to the Company's Act of the Dominion Parliament. They are compelled to make periodical returns to the Government for all their transactions, and are subject to audit by the Government. The real property that may by law be held or acquired by any local branch is held by a Board of Trustees, duly appointed and they are subject to Section 69-A of the Company's Act. The real property of a branch shall, through its Trustees, be liable only for the debt of any other branch or Provincial and Dominion commands.

Q.—What is to become of the building in a few years from now when the present members have passed away?

A.—Attention is drawn to the fact that the large proportion of the Veterans of this war are young men who are now returning. The greater number are between 18 and 25 years of age. It will be 35 or 40 years before the disposal of these rooms will have to take place. In the United States the Veterans of the Civil war of 1860 still have their quarters and they are used. The members' wives daughters, sisters and other fellow's sisters are already affilinted with us in the Ladies' Auxiliary. Steps are now being taken that in the near future our sons will be organised into an adjunt of the Association. This junior association will keep alive the spirit of the boys of 1914-19, which will be a benefit to themselves and the country at large. When the present Veterans' days of activity are over there will be a large amount of relief to carry on, and it is our sons and our young boys of today who will have to take the burden of this care, and this club-house will always be headquarters for work of this nature and for communial work for all classes in the city.

The agreement between the Great War Veterans and the city reads, that, if the Association should become defunct they, the Association, would defund back to the city the amount of the grant. This gives the city a hold on the Association when the disposal of the assets takes place some 40 or 50 years hence.

As stated in a previous answer, the Association is incorporated and works under a Dominion charter. The members could not distribute the assets among themselves and when the day comes where their work is over, there, no doubt, will be Dominion Acts of Parliament to deal with this subject. It would be impossible for members today to command the future.

Q.—Why should the returned soldiers have a home of their own?

A.—Returned soldiers feel that they ought to have a place where they can get together and discuss affairs which are of vital interest of themselves, and consider ways and means for the betterment of themselves in particular and the country in general. There is also the spirit of comradeship which has been so grafted into them by the mud, noise and cooties of Flanders, that they feel entitled to continue this comradeship without the three inconveniences mentioned.

Q.—Will not the club rooms develop into an organized band of grouchers?

A.—As in the army life, the Veterans recognize no creed, race or affiliation, excepting that of good citizenship to Canada. Bolshevsm has been condemned by the G.W.V.A. from coast to coast. The red flag will never fly as long as the Great War Veterans' Association exists. Already in this city a contemplated riot in which there might have been ten times the amount of damage done than the amount oft he grant asked for, was stopped by the G.W.V.A. and the officials of the Association volunteered to the police, the assistance of a large body of veterans to quell any such work. This illustrates the law abiding spirit that is in the Association.

Pleaded Guilty To Theft of Liqnor

MINIMUM PUNSHMENT POSSIBLE —$20 AND $9.10 COSTS.

Two local young men pleaded guilty in the police court this morning to having on May 11th, carried away from a citizen's cellar, liquor valued at $7. The man had access to the cellar in the course of their everyday occupation.

The accused were jointly fined $20 and $9.10 costs, to be paid in three days, or in default of payment three months in jail with hard labor."

The men both enjoy an exceptionally clean record, and both Magistrate Dumble and Prosecuting Attorney Hatton did the best they could for them in arriving at a minimum punishment allowed by the law.

Mr. Hatton remarked that the liquor was abstracted on the same principle under which one appropriates to ones own use another's umbrella on a wet day.

His Worship in passing sentence said he was stretching his authority a good deal, but he could not look upon the men as house-breakers. He advised them in future to be true to themselves, to their manhood, and to live clean and not engage in any act that would give them the conscience that they were really thieves at heart.

The fine will be paid.

B., May 15.— A telephone message from the village of Rexton, Kent County, reports Robert Childs, alias McIntosh apparently insane, armed with three revolvers, hiding in the woods near there after wounding his sister-in-law and her son and two men named Herbert, father and son. Two of the victims are in a serious condition. Childs came to Rexton last night and proceeded to the ol dhomestead of which he claims part ownership, but is in the possession of John Childs, his brother. He set fire to the barn and when Mrs. Childs and son attempted to save the live stock he shot both. The Herberts who live nearby, also attempted to save the cattle and both received bullet wounds.

SOCIAL JUSTICE FOR THE WORKERS

ALLIES REFUSE TO CONSIDER GERMANY'S NOTE ON LABOR LEGISLATION.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, May 15.—The Council of Four has declined to consider the note from Count Von Brockdorff-Rantzau, chief of the German peace mission, relative to international labor legislation. In the note sent to the German delegation, Clemenceau says the allied and associated governments are of the opinion that their decisions gave satisfaction to the anxiety which the German delegates profess for social justice and insure the realization of reforms which the working classes have more than ever a right to expect after the cruel trial to which they have been subject during the last five years.

BRITISH RISKED HUNGER TO BRING OVER TROOPS

More Than One Million American Soldiers Were Transported in English Ships—More State Secrets Disclosed.

London, May 15.—Some idea of the sacrifice made by Britain in order to render possible the transport of America's army to France was given by Sir Joseph Maclay, the shipping controller, in a statement to the American Associated Press.

Ships were gathered from every possible source, he explained, with the result that in the six months, April-September 850,000 American troops, or 60 per cent. of the total number carried, were transported in British ships.

In all, of the two million odd American troops transported to France, well over 1,000,000 were carried in British ships. The whole of these were escorted through the United Kingdom danger zones by British warships.

Perilous Situation.

British shipping at that time was in a perilous situation, but in order to further the movement of American troops we were prepared to make every sacrifice. From South Africa we removed every passenger steamer, and for the time being practically killed trade with that country.

From India and Australia we removed all fast passenger steamers plying to and between those two countries, said Sir Joseph.

We made very dangerous sacrifices of meat supplies, endangering even those of the British army, by transferring ships to the North Atlantic, thus wasting refrigerator space, as meat was not available for export from North American ports.

Essential Food Sacrificed.

Our loss of essential imports, owing to the outfitting of ships for the carriage of American troops, amounted to well over 1,000,000 tons. That sacrifice was made at a time when our total imports had been reduced to 32,000,000 tons a year, of which 14,000,000 were munitions and 13,000,000 essential foodstuffs, as compared with the peace figures of 54,000,000 tons.

AOne hundred and seventy-five vessels, totalling over 1,500,000 tons deadweight, were put to service carrying American troops, and we even fitted up fighting ships for that purpose.

While the sacrifice to Great Britain was heavy, the practical isolation for the time being of overseas dominions involved very serious hardships to those dominions—hardships which were borne without complaint, the dominions recognising the vital necessity of the measures taken.

U. S. Navy Secretary's Tribute.

In his annual report, Mr. Joseph Daniels, U. S. Navy Secretary, says: "The transport of 2,00,000 Americans to Europe without the loss of a single eastbound ship is another result of the happy co-operation with the British navy. The actual number of Americans transported in British ships is over 1,000,000. It was an invaluable and timely service, and is typical of Great Britain's generous contribution to her great shipping facilities for the common cause."

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

THURSDAY, MAY 15 1919

EDITH CAVELL, MARTYR.

THE POSTHUMOUS LETTER of Edith Cavell, addressed to her associates in the profession which she followed, and which has just been given to the world, should be regarded as one of the classics in literature, both for the lessons which it teaches and the manner in which its precepts are expressed. It is in every way a remarkable document. It was written by a woman who was facing a tragic death on the morrow, and yet with eye undimmed and courage unshaken she looked calmly into her open grave. There was no thought of herself in what she wrote, no plea for the mercy of man, no claim that her sentence was unjust. Her one care was for her associates, and her words of counsel have peculiar interest because uttered by one who spoke from the threshold of the other world.

Edith Cavell's remains have been removed to England and buried with military honors, a graceful tribute from a grateful nation. But let no admirer of the martyred nurse detract from her glory by setting up a claim that she herself would have rejected. Edith Cavell died according to the merciless rules of war. The fact that she was a woman was her sole claim to mercy, and, heroic as she was, this would have been the very last reason she would have pleaded or would have asked friends of hers to urge. Taking a chance in the interests of humanity to aid the helpless and unfortunate, she accepted the penalty without a murmur. Her death is therefore all the more an illustrious example of what the truly brave may achieve.

Charlotte Corday took the life of Marat, believing as she did that his death would restore peace and safety to France. Convinced that in this she was right, the assurance upheld her through all the dark days of her trial and sent her to the guillotine without a tremor or a complaint. Never for a moment did she consider herself worthy of human mercy, not once did she ask for it.

Edith Cavell nursed the Allied prisoners back to health and then helped them to escape. Even the so-called civilized rules of war provide the death penalty for such a procedure. She knew the risk she ran, but gladly gave her own life for others. Charlotte Corday did not face death with greater undaunted fortitude than did the English nurse.

It was truly an awful end for a woman whose offence was inspired by the same love for humanity which she manifested in the exalted precepts, in the wise counsel contained in the letter she wrote just before she faced the firing squad. But it was after all military law, and Edith Cavell never urged either ignorance nor consideration for her sex in palliation of what she had done. Other lives no less illustrious have been offered up for the good of others, and human-made statutes have been broken by those who made the vicarious sacrifice. Edith Cavell truly did what she could. To say, as so many do, that there was no real justification for her execution, barbarous as it was, is to rob her deeds of kindness to the unfortunate of a measure of their glory. Let her name live with those of countless patriots who have given their lives that hmanity might be saved. The very magnitude of the task which she undertook, the intensity of her patriotism and her love for humanity, brought her to an untimely end.

THE TARIFF AND EDUCATION.

THE GUELPH HERALD proposes an educational campaign with the tariff issue as the topic.

If the people of Canada do not understand that problem after a campaign of instruction covering the past forty years or more, then indeed is their case hopeless. But Canadians are not lacking in this regard. They understand the subject already and have given frequent evidence of that fact. Their real difficulty is in following the devious course of the Liberal party, who are protectionists or free traders according to the direction taken by the jumping feline.

ANOTHER REASON.

HERE IS ANOTHER practical reason why the people of Peterbroough should subscribe to the $15,000 fund which the Veterans propose to raise in the big drive next week, the money to be used for completing their new club house on Murray street.

The officials at the head of the G. W. V. A. are practical business men. They have demonstrated this by perfecting one of the best organizations in the city, a work which demanded executive ability of a high order. They have expended large sums of money wisely and well, the results being the one best testimony as to the efficiency of the men entrusted with the task. The meetings of the G. W. V. A. are conducted with an exemplary observance of parliamentary law. The association is a school for every man who belongs to it and attends the sessions. Here the members receive an excellent preparatory training for public life in which beyond all question many of them will be called upon to serve in the not very distant future.

There has always been a belief that men have been thrust into public office without preparation and with no clear understanding of what is required of them. This defect in our social system no longer exists. The G. W. V. A. is not a secret organization where plots dangerous to the peace and safety of the community and nation are hatched. In the G. W. V. A. rooms the men who fought to save their country will not see it menaced now by either those who are openly hostile or who are merely indifferent. The cause that is to be laid before the people next week is worthy of generous support both on sentimental grounds, although that reason is the least the Veterans are disposed to plead, and as a good business investment for the city. Churches are maintained by private contribution, and the G. W. V. A. has its mission no less than have the churches.

The Veterans have gone through an experience of which the rest of us can only dream. They have seen a world upon which the eyes of the civilian have never opened. They have been taught in a school others have never entered. The benefit of this training is now available as a national and civic asset.

PLAIN ENGLISH.

THE TORONTO STAR finds comfort in the fact that the voluminous treaty of peace is written in plain English that ordinary mortals can understand and "not in that traditional jargon of the law with which attorneys mystify the minds of men and hide the truth so that lawsuits are needed to find it—or to lose it forever."

The plain English which the Star prizes is coming more and more into its own, and it has no better exponent than the Toronto paper in question. The editorials of the Star are written with a clarity that to a great extent accounts for their popularity. This is a style vastly different from that in favor with some of its metropolitan contemporaries, those involved sentences that make it necessary for the reader to pause and figure out what the writer is driving at. The English language is designed for the expression of ideas, not for hiding them under a mass of rhetorical piffle. Happy is the man who makes the English language his servant instead of being bound hand and foot by rules formulated by theorists who have a weakness for constructing grammars.

THE ASSURANCE OF THE "BIG SIX."

WHY SHOULD the "Big Six" in the City Council attempt to nullify the good work that the leading statesmen of the world have been engaged in for the past six months at Paris and which they now seem to have brought to a successful issue?

Why should the "Big Six" in their own limited sphere deny to the workingmen of this city the right of self-determination in the matter of setting a wage scale while that right has been guaranteed all the nations of the earth in the broader field of shaping their own destiny?

MAY LEAD TO REPRISAL.

> We can understand the development of a deadlock over wage scales or time scales. Such troubles are bound to occur, although they can be obviated generally by free and open discussion. But a quarrel over the recognition of a union which exists, which has international federation, and which has properly appointed officers is an offence against the community in general.—Toronto Times.

THIS IS THE AGE of reprisals. If employers persist in refusing to recognise Labor unions, the time may come when the latter will take the same course with regard to the manufacturers' association and refuse to work for any man who belongs to that organization.

PROGRESSING BACKWARD.

AN EXCHANGE says that the feet of the Liberal party are stuck fast in the muck of tradition and old-time Toryism.

The simile is scarcely apt. The Liberal party is not stationary by any means, but is slowly and surely moving in a rearward direction, so slowly and surely that the new leader has found it necessary to part company with his following on the tariff issue.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

CLEAN-UP WEEK for Peterborough, clean-up year for Germany.

• • • • •

THERE ARE SIX OF THEM by actual count, every man set firmly on his economic fallacies.

• • • • •

WITH THE "BIG SIX" the idea seems to prevail that a cut in wages is most effective when made at both ends.

• • • • •

SINCE LEADER M'KENZIE bolted on the tariff issue the Liberals may now be described as a party of the first and second part.

• • • • •

ALD. PHELAN'S labor statistics are less than complete, lacking as they do a column showing the cost of living in each municipality cited.

• • • • •

ON ITS WAR RECORD alone, not to speak of its many attractions, Peterborough is entitled to the 1920 convention of the Ontario Veterans.

• • • • •

GERMANY DEMANDS that the members of the Entente responsible for the war shall be brought to trial but, in those famous words, "there ain't no sich person."

• • • • •

"GERMAN PEOPLE are at last being told the truth," says an exchange. Then who can marvel if the German people have lost all respect for each other or for their country?

• • • • •

THE OLD TIME sailing vessel that carried our ancestors to the New World may have been slow, but it could navigate the Atlantic with more speed than any yet shown by those airships.

• • • • •

THE "BIG SIX" are original in parliamentary procedure as well as in industrial legislation. Rescinding in committee a resolution adopted in regular session of Council looks like a new one.

• • • • •

IT IS SAID that Mr. McKenzie's utterance on the tariff question has lost him the permanent leadership of his party. It is indeed a poor man who is not willing to make a sacrifice for a principle.

• • • • •

OPPOSITION LEADER McKenzie is still beckoning the wanderers to return, but the so-called prodigals hesitate afar off, nursing a suspicion that Mr. McKenzie keeps a knife up his sleeve, not for the fatted calf, but for themselves.

C.P.R. ASKS CHARTER FOR ROUTE THROUGH THE AIR

Vice-President Hall Says Time Has Come to Prepare For Aerial Transportation.

"The application of the Canadian Pacific for an air charter," said Mr. Grant Hall, vice-president of the C. P. R., "is only natural when one considers that we are approaching a new epoch in air transport as applied to commerce. Even before the war a dirigible airship maintained a regular passenger service between Frankfurt and Berlin for two years, and during the war the progress in aerial transit has been phenomenal. Much of that progress has been due to the skill and daring of Canadian fliers. General Seeley in the British House of Commons recently acknowledged the indebtedness of the Allies to Canada in securing aerial supremacy. 'Canada,' he said, 'gave the largest contribution in numbers, and of her services, those who know what Canadian airmen did need not be reminded—they were second to none.'

"The British Government has allowed no less than three hundred million dollars in the estimates for the coming year for air service, of which ten million dollars has been set aside for experimental research and civil aviation. Bonar Law owns his own aeroplane, which is used for his frequent visits to Paris, and there is a regular daily service of a seventeen-passenger Handley-Page machine between London and Paris. Although at present aerial transport is a distinctly expensive matter, the progress being made both in aeroplanes and dirigibles is so rapid that it is quite in order for a company such as the Canadian Pacific to be ready to enter the field as soon as air transportation comes within the range of practical politics.

Western Conditions Good.

"Although there are areas in Canada which will for a long time present difficulties, particularly to aeroplanists, there are other areas which conform to the requirements of the experts. Take, for instance, the western prairies, which offer the conditions described by General Seeley as vital, namely, that they are regions 'where there are wide spaces with almost complete absence of the airman's real enemy—mist and fog—not wind.' It is there where air travelling might be made profitable.

"There are, however, many costly features about an air service by means of aeroplanes which will militate against any hope of very low rates, particularly the necessity of suitable landing spaces at frequent intervals in case of engine trouble. Orville Wright maintains that to make flying reasonably safe, 'good landing places should be provided at ten, or at most fifteen, miles interval. A landing space must be about a quarter section in size, and the surface must be of level, smooth, hard sod. Then, in the case of airships, the cost of sheds is a very considerable item. Thus, for instance, a shed to house two of the new rigid R-80 British dirigibles is about $2,000,000; so that anyone who is under the impression that air transportation in the near future will reduce either rail or steamship rates is likely to be disappointed.

"In a word, the future of commercial air transportation is bound up in the question of cost, but we are of the opinion that with the engineering and operating resources which the Canadian Pacific has always been able to command, we should be able to enter the field with confidence when the time seems ripe."

WIT AND WISDOM

Magistrate—Am I to understand that this man struck you in the execution of your duty?

P. C. 49—Well, not exactly; 'twas more in the pit of me stummick, like.

Naturally.

"Why do people speak of easy jobs as velvet?"

"You can see for yourself that when they strike a soft thing they make a pile on it."

A Difference.

"Do you know if it is true that Jones' son became an actor?"

"No, I don't. All I do know is that he went on the stage."

Well Trained.

"What splendid manners that man has."

"Yes, but he ought to have. He has three grown daughters to train him."

Tip for Pate and Knox.

"You say you have made money out of poetry, girlie?"

"Yes."

"Nonsense."

"No nonsense about it. Papa has paid me not to write any more."

Mooning.

A Voice—Mary, what are you doing out there?

Mary—I'm looking at the moon, mother.

Voice—Well, tell the moon to go home, and come in off that porch. It's half-past eleven.

The Reason.

"John, you really need a new suit of clothes."

"Do you think so?"

"I do. The one you're wearing now is so shabby ou won't be fit to be seen with me when I get into the new outfit I've just ordered."

A Charmed Life.

"And so you're really back!" murmured a girl from the midst of a brotherly embrace at the station the other day, "and you didn't get killed or married or anything?"

FEMININE LOGIC

SMALL CHANCE NOW FOR RECIPROCITY

PACT OF 1911 NO LONGER IN FAVOR AMONG AMERICANS.

While the Canadian Council of Agriculture is urging the acceptance of the reciprocity agreement of 1911 there is no indication that the agreement is now acceptable to the United States. Indeed, there is strong American opposition to it.

In a special article in the Manitoba Free Press Mr. J. A. Aiken, writing from Washington, says: "The reciprocity pact of 1911 is regarded as obsolete and not to be considered as going into force by consent from Ottawa."

Mr. Wm. S. Culbertson, of the U. S. Ttariff Commission, believes there will be a tariff revision upwards after the next Presidential election. He is interested in closer trade relations with Canada, but declares they cannot be established on the basis of the reciprocity agreement. While technically the offer is still open, he contends that the United States is not under any moral obligation. "We cannot sacrifice the interests of our Middle West in favor of the Canadian West. Any reciprocity agreement must rather take the form of concessions in non-agricultural products."

Mr. Frank Lyon Polk, counsellor for the Department of State, says the reciprocity agreement would have to be reviewed by both governments before any action could be taken to put it in force.

Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio, a former lieutenant-governor of the State and chairman of the Republican National Convention of 1916, recalls the strong reaction, especially in the border states, against the agreement in the United States after it had been rejected by the people of Canada, and is confident that Congress would never consent to that agreement.

Senator Francis E. Warren of Wyoming, who is likely to be chairman of the Senate Committee on Committees, says: "We are ready to consider a new trade arrangement, but we consider that of 1911 as behind us and not to be put in force."

Live And Let Live

A. J. Bolwell, President of the Trades and Labor Council, and who acts as local correspondent of the Typographical Journal, has the following in the latest issue of that publication:

"A branch of the independent labor party was formed here a couple of months ago, with Peter MacArthur president of the machinists' union at the helm. It has shown a healthy growth since its inception, and with wise leadership and a sane and judicious policy we see no reason why it should not flourish and become a big factor in the political life and labor movement in this section of Ontario. Peterborough is quite an important industrial center, with many factories employing large forces of workers in normal times. There is no denying the fact that, in the main, the toilers are about through with the old parties. They have at last awakened to the fact that their only hope for a square deal is o be found within their own ranks. We don't try to picture the seats of the mighty at Ottawa or the provincial capitals all occupied by union men. Not at all. The writer is a lover of healthy and just reforms not a radical. The other fellow has a right to live, but many of them have yet to learn how to let live. They have been given long enough time in which to make good, but no workingman will have the temerity to say they have proved a huge success. We are not proud of them. What labor wants is a fair sprinkling of its own representatives in parliament— call it balance of power if you will, but men enough in the legislative halls to wield an influence in the management of their business. We notice the movement now under way among the farmers. They intend to hoe their own row, and who can blame them? It is for the workers in the industrial field to get together, forget all petty differences and jealousies, and focus their atteniton and energies upon the great objective the attainment of which can be brought about only by unity of purpose.

HENRY FORD'S BIG LIBEL SUIT OPENS

JUDGE AND LAWYERS CONFER ON $1,000,000 CLAIM AGAINST NEWSPAPER.

Mount Clemens, Mich., May 15.—The $1,000,000 libel suit of Henry Ford against the Chicago Daily Tribune opened here with a conference of the lawyers with Judge James G. Tucker as to hours of work and other details of the daily program to be followed. Decision as to court hours was left to Judge Tucker.

Counsel for the Solomon News company, newspaper distributors, who for technical reasons were made co-defendants in the suit, have notice of a motion for a change of plea. Judge Tucker announced he would hear it later. After the conference with the lawyers adjournment was taken until afternoon.

Interest in the case was intensified by the statement of counsel for Mr. Ford that the Detroit manufacturer would be in court and probably would attend all sessions. Mr. Ford arrived before the hearing began. He was told by Alfred Lucking, one of his attorneys, that it would be some time before the jury panel was brought in and that he would not be needed.

Ford Comes to Court.

"Well, the Tribune subpoenaed me and I thought I would come," said Mr. Ford, "but there is a delegation from Ohio wants to see me today, and if its all right I'll go back and meet them."

Mr. Lucking reassured him and the manufacturer who the Tribune in the midst of a heated campaign for preparedness three years ago called an "anarchist" and was sued in consequence, departed.

The Ford forces are housed in a hotel on the outskirts of the city where they took more than twenty-five rooms. At the opposite end of the city the equally numerous Tribune forces occupy a wing of a prominent hotel.

To Shut Out Preparedness Issue.

The brief of the chief defendant asserts that evidence bearing on the Tribune's fight for preparedness is not material to the case. It has to do only with the alleged libelous article, standing by itself, the brief holds.

Counsel for the Tribune have prepared an immense amount of evidence designed to prove the necessity for preparedness, involving what is practically a history of the foreign relations of the government for several years. Should the court sustain the Ford contention it would, it is said, greatly shorten the trial. The preliminary battle will be fought out over this issue. If the ruling of the court favors the Tribune the jury will, it is predicted, listen for weeks to the most exhaustive analysis of the subjects of preparedness and nonpreparedness in the history of the country.

Give some agitators free lunch and they will manage to get along for a time without free speech.

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING

By Dr. W.A. BRADY

When readers propound queries too difficult for the massive intellect of the conductor of this column he sneaks around and finds a better qualified colleaue somewhere who consents to supply the desired information. A skillful dentist, whose work is chiefly extraction and X-ray work done for patients referred to him by medical men and specialists, has answered several important questions for today's talk. Incidentally, the aforesaid massive intellect is beholden to a thousand colleagues willy-nilly for the substance of these health talks, although it is terribly embarrassing to confess the debt.

1. Should nerves be killed in teeth before crowning the teeth?

"By no means. Dead things decay. It is about the roots of dead teeth that 'silent' abscesses develop. Nowadays the vitality of a tooth can be retained by means of new inlays. I have in my own mouth two of the best made bridges, but no devitalized teeth."

"All biscupids and malars having abscesses should be removed. Front teeth with abscesses may be treated by the dentist after X-ray plates have been made and root amputation shoulder crown attachments and the done. However, if any systemic condition possibly dependent on the mouth infection is present, not only all teeth showing abscesses, but all merely dead teeth should be extracted."

3. Should impacted teeth be removed—such as impacted or unerupted wisdom teeth or impacted eye teeth?

"Yes, by all means. An impacted tooth is often found to be the cause of neuritis, headache or earache."

4. Now, then, doctor, just between colleagues, with all your experience in making X-ray pictures of the teeth in the search for a focus of infection, as the cause of valvular heart lesions, neuritis, headaches, appendicitis, duodenal and gastric ulcer, so called "rheumatism," bronchial troubles, asthma, etc., as your voluminous records show don't you regret having done much of the work?

"Regret it? You don't mean that seriously? Why, of course, the discovery and eradication of a septic focus does not insure a cure in every case, so certain patients are bound to be disappointed. But there is always the satisfation of knowing that a tooth with an abscess at its root should be removed, even if the patient were in perfect health. If it has not already caused trouble it is very likely to cause trouble of some kind in the future. That is a surgical principle which stands by the contrary. In this work one sees so many happy results that the work is a constant inspiration."

To Relieve Belching After Meals.

"Kindly tell me what is good to relieve belching and fullness and loginess after meals. R. O. C."

Six rolls before breakfast. Fletcherize.

Enlarged Oil Glands

"Some time ago you printed a recipe for enlarged oil glands on the face. Will you kindly reprint that recipe? M. B."

Apply each night after a vigorous scrubbing with hot water and soap (preferably a stimulating soap such as "tincture of green soap") and repeated rinsings to remove all soap, this lotion:

Sublimed sulphur.
Alcohol.
Compound tincture of levender.
Glycerin.
Camphor water; equal parts of the five ingredients.

Allow this to remain on the skin overnight, washing it off next morning.

Our Cure For Warts.

"Will you please send me your cure for warts, as I am bothered with many of them? C. S."

The best cure I know is the scalpel. Your doctor has one that will do the work.

H. B. P.

"Wil you kindly tell me what high blood pressure is, its cause, symptoms and results? ALICE M."

The blood in the arteries is under a certain pressure, like the water in city water pipes, necessary to keep it circulating. In various disease conditions the pressure may become too high and sometimes so high as to be in itself a source of danger. I do not feel free to publish symptoms. They are misleading to any but a physician.

Ivory Mats.

There are but three mats of ivory in existence. The largest one measures 8 by 4 feet; and, although made in the north of India, has a Greek design for a border. It is used only on state occasions, like the signing of important state documents. The cost of this precious mat was almost incalculable, for more than 6,000 pounds of pure ivory were used in its construction. Only the finest and most flexible strips of the material could be used and the mat is like the finest woven fabric.

World's Debt to the East.

Civilization was born in the East. For ages letters, art, religion flowed westward from Asia. When Europe was a wilderness, peopled only with savage, wandering tribes, learning and government flourished beyond the Dardanelles. From Armenia, Syria and Persia came both the Jewish and the Christian religions, the alphabet and much of science. Long since the tide turned. Civilization among these eastern peoples began to ebb, and they have slipped far back toward their pastoral days.

HOW WOMEN DRESS IN WASHINGTON

ABSENCE OF PRESIDENT AND OTHER NOTABLES RESPONSIBLE FOR QUIETNESS IN SOCIAL CIRCLES.

Washington, D. C., May 15.—With official entertaining reduced to its lowest terms by reason of the absence of the president and many important personages who in ordinary times are the bright particular stars in the capital's social firmament, the sky is by no means starless with a strong personal note in each and every entertainment from an informal tea at the new Cafe St. Mark's to the most elegantly appointed dinner party. Furthermore everybody has new clothes and ample opportunity for wearing the same from 11 o'clock in the morning until the early hours of the next day.

Although officers of the army, navy and marine corps are still in service uniforms, maids and matrons of smart society have abandoned all sign of war-time simplicity.

Mrs. Larz Anderson, who as Miss Isabel Perkins of Boston was a few years ago the greatest heiress Washington ever knew, occasionally appears in the veil gown in which she served as Red Cross helper in Belgium, but this is only when assisting in a victory loan rally or some other patriotic endeavor. Mrs. Anderson's uniform, it may be mentioned, is most becoming, with a full round skirt nine inches off the ground, with close fitting round waist, deep cuffs, but rather narrow collar of sheerest organdie. The material of the very individual uniform is apparently fine wool in dark blue suggestive of the old fashioned nun's veiling.

At the dinner dance which she gave recently for that much entertained debutante, Miss Jane Story, Mrs. Anderson's gown was mauve satin embroidered in silver and crystals.

Miss Story's gown on this occasion was literally what one of her slangy admirers called it, "just peachy," a draped model of peach color chiffon over foundation slip of the new shade known as Folh blue—a girdle of the same blue in satin marks the normal waist line. The gown is an inch or more longer than the average debutante frock of even three months ago and is sleeveless.

There is great latitude in the length of the skirt as Washington sees the new fashions anr as usual the best gowned women of the capital are following the conservative wing of Dame Fashion, who has not been successful in banishing the skirt nine inches from the floor—from street or drawing room.

Mme. Riano, wife of the Spanish ambassador, and Mrs. Breckenridge Long, wife of the assistant secretary of state, who were among the notably smart matrons at the Larz Andersons' dance, wore gowns to the ankles. Mme. Riano wore a charming creation of black net spangled in silver, the silver being in very fine articles closely applied to a perfectly round skirt and closely draped bodice. Mrs. Long's gown was becoming as well as smart, being of French blue brocaded in silver, draped in particularly graceful lines.

Mrs. Candler Anderson of New York and Washington was another young matron present who wore black and gold brocade in close draped lines admirably suited to the slender wearer, who was before her marriage Mrs Harriet Ward, an acknowledged belle in residential circles of the capital.

Mrs. McMillan Gibson, who is just laying aside her mourning for her grandmother, the late Mrs. James McMillan of Detroit, and much in demand as a dinner guest, is wearing a smart gown of gray tulle on a foundation of silver lace, which has the skirt almost to the ankles. The top is cut with square neck, with bands of silver lace covering the shoulders, and has long flowing sleeves of the tulle.

Mrs. William Crozier, wife of the former chief of ordnance, and for years recognized as one of the best gowned and handsomest of Washington leaders, wore when entertaining the countess of Reading at a farewell luncheon at the Chevy Chase club a gown obviously just arrived in new silhouette, but with the skirt just four inches from the floor. The gown was a one piece, closely fitted model, such as Mrs. Crozier wears habitually, with its embellishment in small embroidered figures in Roman floss, the bodice was cut in surplice and the sleeves, which were heavily embroidered, were plain and ended midway between wrist and elbow. Mrs. Crozier topped this with a very smart small hat of blue ostrich.

The vogue of beads and embroidery is, if possible, on the increase, as shown in the newest street suits of tricotine or the finest serge. Miss Alice Requa of California, who made her debut during her parents' residence in Washington and is now among the sping visitors, is wearing one of the smartest costumes of this kind for afternoon teas and dances. The gown is dark blue, very narrow at the hem, which is turner up on the skirt and finisher with a row of silver gray soutache sotted with red beads hardly larger than the head of an ordinary pin. The straight blouse, coming to the knees, has narrow side panels of the gray braid over white cloth, while the neck and sleeves are finished in several rows of braid and beads. A string of red coral beads large enough to assert their color and quality was also worn, with two coral topped hatpins holding a silver gray tulle turban.

Quite a number of vivid red hats have been brought out by the cool spring days, which made this color note an acceptable variation to a cloth suit. Mrs. George Barnett wears a broad brimmed sailor of rough straw wreathed in field flowers and Mrs. Aksel Witchfield a toque entirely of plumage arranged in compact upstanding lines, with each crimson feather cut in a sharp point.

Young Mrs. John Gregory Hope, a bride of a year ago, whose British husband is still on duty in Washington, wore to one of last week's weddings a very becoming red hat with a gray gown.

Mrs. Sherman Miles, who is passing the spring with her mother, Mrs. William Nelden Noble, at the latter's N street home, is wearing one of the smartest of blue suits with coat shaped over dress showing a broad vestee of gray silk. The latter is self-embroidered in selfcolored silk and finished by a long fall of silk fringe. This is tooped by a small blue straw hat wits narrow banding of deep red velvet about the base of the high crown and cluster of flowers toward the front.

Liquor Issue in France Has Become Complicated With Other Movements

ALMOST exactly three years ago, M. Ribot, then Minister of Finance, speaking at the annual meeting of the five academies at the Institut de France, declared that the evil that had progressed most rapidly and was the most serious of the century was undoubtedly intemperance. Its invasion had been permitted to extend throughout France, and he expressed the earnest hope that, when the question came up for the decision of the Chamber, the representatives of the country would find themselves able to rise above all those petty considerations which had so often prevented them from serving the general interests of the country, and that their resolution would be firm as the peril was great.

Again and again, since that time, the liquor question has come before the French Chamber. M. Ribot himself introduced a bill providing for the most drastic reforms, but it was steadily opposed by the liquor interests and the measure failed to pass. Then the Ligue Nationale, Contre l'Alcoolisme has been carrying on a vigorous and untiring campaign up and down the country in the effort to arouse public opinion to a recognition of the menace presented in existing conditions, whilst many prominent men of different political creeds have called earnestly for reform; all, however, to no purpose, as far as any political action was concerned. Whenever the matter has been brought up in the Chamber, means have been found of preventing any action until the question has become a byword, and it is openly stated that the Chamber takes up the subject only "when it has nothing else to do," and then five or six deputies who have specialized in the liquor question take charge of the debate, which always comes to nothing.

M. RIBOT.

Now there is need for very straight speaking on this subject. No one can make any study of the liquor question in France without discovering, very quickly, where lies the wrong which is rendering all efforts for reform seemingly abortive. A great number of those who are earnestly advocating liquor reforms, far from being actuated by any really enlightened purpose, are simply actuated by some form of selfish interest. This becomes at once apparent when investigation is made into that campaign, perhaps the most vigorous of all the liquor restriction campaigns, the campaign against the existence of the bouilliers de cru. This term is applied to all owners of land producing certain fruits, chiefly plums, cherries, apples, or grapes, who are entitled to distill from these fruits, and produce alcohol for their own personal use, duty free. This privilege has gradually been illegally extended until, to-day, it has assumed enormous proportions. Small owners convert their fruit to alcohol, and dispose of it to innkeepers and others through well-known channels, at a cost which renders it available to everybody in almost unlimited quantity.

Against this widespread and ruinous practice of the bouilleurs de cru there is a strong and growing movement, but when this movement comes to be analyzed its animus is found to be, in far too many cases, not a recognition of the evils of intemperance and a desire to have an end put to them at all costs, and as soon as possible, but simply a desire to put an end to "a shameful monopoly," which is robbing the state of revenue. This support of a righteous cause or condemnation of an unrighteous action from inferior, if not wholly wrong, motives is almost characteristic of the French movement against alcohol. Thus the present proposal by which the liquor traffic would become a state monopoly has been roundly denounced by one of the great Paris papers, but one looks in vain for signs of the smallest recognition of the real issues at stake. The immorality of the drink traffic or of drink indulgence, a recognition of which alone can bring true reform, is never so much as hinted at. The plan is denounced because it would place in the hands of the state a vast portion of French agriculture. The Chamber is warned against abandoning itself to "the wind of Socialism" and against suffering the introduction into France of the German evil, "the subordination of the individual to the state." And so it goes on.

In the early days of the war, when the French authorities, by an energetic action, effectually banished absinthe from France, it was very generally hoped that it would not be long before the country would suppress the liquor traffic altogether. Such hopes were quickly disappointed. And the reason is only now becoming fully apparent. Marcel Sembat, the eminent French Socialist, speaking in the great hall of the Paris University, some time ago, on the liquor evil, put his finger, with quite unerring precision, on the weak place. "If you wish," he said, "seriously to uproot this evil, and not merely to confine yourselves to joining an anti-alcohol league, you will have to go a great deal further than you think. Let us examine our conscience. Is our temperance due entirely to our virtuous austerity? It cannot be, since it does not prevent us from other kinds of intemperance." In other words, the only effective warfare against intemperance must be based on a recognition that all conduct must be governed by Principle.

AHEAD OF HIS TIME.

Swedish Tailor Invented Caterpillar Tractor.

To have evolved the idea of the caterpillar tractor and see visions of millions as a result of the invention, and then experience the oft repeated fate of the inventor who came upon the scene too soon and die obscure and unknown, was the lot of J. E. Bergsten, a Swedish tailor who operated a small shop in Colfax, Ill., in 1837.

While plying his needle, making and repairing men's garments, he pictured a vehicle which would make its own track and be independent of roads or horses. Twenty years or more later, his idea, developed into the great "tanks," helped mightily to win the great war. Bergsten was poor and friendless. He was a native of Sweden and came to this continent when a youth to make his fortune. He was a great admirer of John Ericcson, the inventor of the monitor, and hoped to achieve the fame of his countryman by his invention of the tractor, now known as the "caterpillar" and which has realized millions for the companies manufacturing them and which were sent to Europe by the thousands during the four-year war recently concluded.

Ericcson produced his invention at the psycological moment and when it was needed the most, and became famous in a day. Bergsten was twenty years ahead of his time and his invention was hooted, his model disintegrated and he and his idea all but forgotten. The accidental discovery a few days ago of a photograph of Bergsten propelling his extraordinary contrivance along the streets of Colfax recalled the story and the older inhabitants jogged their memories. As they recollected the invention of Bergsten, it was operated by means of treadles, something like a bicycle. He termed it the "Self Track-Laying Road Carriage." The track was composed of ten jointed sections, moving around the propelling force. As the machine advanced, the track was laid ahead, picked up at the rear, carried along over the head of the operator and then laid again. Reels at the front and rear, carried the track. The forward reel was hung on a pivot so that the machine could turn a corner if desired.

Bergsten hoped to install a motor which would operate the machine but when he endeavored to interest the moneyed men of the community, they jeered at him and declined to advance him a nickel. His device became the laughing stock of the community and the derision was so pronounced that the inventor, bitterly disappointed, left the town and was heard from no more. It required the success of the automobile to attract attention to tractors and trucks and Bergsten's idea, twenty years later, was developed into practical form, and the millions that Bergsten hoped to realise went to others of a succeeding generation.

Tracer Bullets In Air.

One fact about aerial fighting which has never been mentioned is that, after the first sight has been obtained, the pilot never uses his sight at all. He watches the bullets—literally! That is, he watches the tracer ammunition. One in every three shots is a tracer — a bullet which trails a little path of smoke; and it is much more interesting to watch the tracers than it is to keep the eye on the sights.

Most pilots would like to use all tracers if they could, for they kill as readily as the regular bullets. But, unfortunately, tracer ammunition is dirty, and will soon choke the bore of the gun. As it is, a great many pilots load their magazines and belts with every other one a tracer, though it is strictly against the rules. The temptation, though, is too great to be resisted.

The tracer is made the same as the ordinary bullet, except that, in the end, is a small quantity of magnesium which ignites. It is not quite accurate, as it is lighter and drops a little in its flight, but it serves its purpose wonderfully.

There is a fortune waiting for the man who can devise a tracer that will not foul the bore, and which will accordingly permit the aviator, or indeed any machine gunner operating at short range, to employ it exclusively.—Scientific American.

A Golden Throne.

The Maharajah of Mysore has a throne made of solid gold, beautifully chased and set with precious stones, and resting on four huge lions, also of solid gold. Above the throne, which is covered with a thick cushion of cloth of gold with pearl tassels is a gold umbrella shimmering with pearls and precious stones, on top of which is a golden peacock encrusted with diamonds and emeralds holding in its beak a large emerald pendant. Silver steps lead up to the seat.

Differing Fears.

When it is a man getting a set of false teeth, he is afraid he is not going to be able to eat with them; if it is a woman, she is afraid she will not be able to talk.

"Out of the Mouths of Babes."

Willie, to talkative caller—"Well, now that you've come, I suppose I shall have to go for the doctor." Talkative Caller—"Why, Willie?" Willie—"Father says you always make him ill!"

Dream Tears.

Far better to dream of crying than of laughter, for tears in a dream mean joy and merriment in real life; while laughter, when it is dream laughter, presages difficult circumstances.

Awful to Think Of.

The whale is said to yield a barrel of milk at a milking. But what happens to the milker if she gets careless with her tail?

Are you Looking For

a laxative which, no matter how long you use it, you do not have to increase the dose, that will right your stomach trouble whether due to dyspepsia, indigestion or acidity; that will restore your liver to a natural healthy action and at the same time purify your blood, then just try

Gallager's Blood Purifier

And why will it do all this? Listen:

SCIENTIST HAVE LEARNE FROM THE GREAT WAR

that there are certain ingredients found only in the vegetable world which are necessary to keep the body in continuous good health, and without this vegetable diet sooner or later, the system becomes deranged; the organs refuse to do their work properly and headaches, stomach trouble, liver trouble follows. Now, ingredients of these kinds are found in excess in certain vegetation: and plants of this type called medicinal herbs. These have been scientifically selected, combined and compounded in "Gallagher's Blood Purifier" to put into the blood the necessary salts to cause the stomach, bowels and liver to act in a natural healthy manner, thus removing the cause and effecting a cure in a natural way.

Unlike Mineral Drugs it is Digested and Assimilated by the Digestive System

just as food is, and this is why it may be taken for years without losing its effects.

Laxatives composed of Mineral Drugs merely irritate the alimentary canal thus causing the stomach and bowels to set to work to violently expel them as quickly as possible. This of course carries with it the waste matter, which is preferable to leaving it there, but each time this happens the irritation becomes less and less until sooner or later the dose has to be increased or the medicine changed. Do you not believe with us that herbal remedis are safe, natural and sure and do not leave sediments in the system to clog it, but nature's way to heal and cure.

For those of sedentary habits whose liver and bowels are prone to inactivity, this laxative above all others will incite them to natural action and will leave the impression that something helpful to the whole system has been taken. Families in this county have used it for over thirty years and it still remains a first favorite, Put up in large bottles for 50 cents.

Other Herbal Remedies put up by this firm and equally good in their own way are: "Life Drops," a liniment for internal or external use. "Golden Drops," the greatest healing agent known to science. "Kidney Cure," a safe ad sure remedy for any kidney troubles. "Gallagher's Vermifugue," for children or adults. "Cough Syrup," purely vegetable and contains no opiate.

All these remedies are put up in pale blue cartons and labels. Watch for them. A list of Dealers where these medicine may be had will be given in next weeks issue.

Although these patents have been used as household remedies in East Peterborough County for forty years, they are now for the first time being advertised and put on the general market. Read the story of the origin of them, found in a wrapper around each bottle.

CHICAGO JUDGES DECIDE TO WEAR GOWNS IN COURT

Innovation Adds to Dignity of Jurists and Raises Them in Estimation of Those in the Court Room.

Chicago, May 15—The proof of the rob is in the wearing.

Opponents of the move of Chicago judges to wear black gowns upon the bench let fly a string of objections when the ruling was passed by the unanimous vote of Superior court judges and a majority of Circuit court judges. "Fuss and feathers" they said and "a blow at democratic institutions."

But the jurists who adopted the robes insisted that their wearing would increase respect for the bench. Witnesses would hesitate ebfore venturing to stretch the truth. Visitors would tread softly and whisper not at all. Lawyers and litigants would shade their tones and never drop the "your honor" when they addressed the court. The question was would they? They would—and did, says Judge Denis E Sullivan, Superior court judge.

Impressed by Judge in Robes.

"Most of the people who come into the courtroom, either as visitors or participants in legal action—all, in fact except the attorneys—fail to thoroughly understand the proceedings," said Judge Sullivan today. "'Contempt of court' means little except a fine to them; the administration of the oath, as far as it goes, fails to impress them. But let their eye fall on the judge, dressed in a black gown, and there appears an awe in their eyes."

"Just a moment, please and I will come back to discuss this," he said, disappearing into his chambers.

Slowly and solemnly, so slowly and solemnly in fact that they might have marched to the tune of a funeral march, the crowd passed out of the courtroom. Lips were held respectfully closed, as the spectators went into the hall and soon the courtroom was silent even of shuffling feet.

A Change in the Judge.

The Judge Sullivan came back. His step seemed a bit more sprightly than when he left the room, his solemn gait hampered by the sweep of yards of black material.

"Sure," he declared smiling in what is described as a "human" manner. "Those robes do influence the court. Don't they, Louie?"

He was addressing the bailiff, who stepped forward and declared with a slight minus in his solemnity: "You bet they do, your honor."

"The funniest thing about it is," declared the judge, with additional minus in his manner, "that they influence the judge. You cant' relax a minute, because the minute you do the gown reminds you of your dignity.

"That isn't saying the profession isn't dignified enough," he explained. "But it helps remind you."

Contrast in Courtrooms.

Jude Sullivan nodded good-by with a gayety that was almost a salute and the reporter beat it out of the courtroom and into the hall. But he stepped on tip-toe as he opened door after door of court-rooms and saw judge after judge sitting silent and dignified in his frame of black gown, oaken bar, pedestal and dim lit globes on either side.

Wandering thus, the reporter chanced to another floor of the county building and opened the door of the court occupied by a judge who from the beginning has been a conscientious objector to the robe. Dressed in a business suit, the magistrate stood in his place, leaning carelessly against a side lamp pedestal while before him lawyers harangued. As the reporter gazed the judge flung himself into his chair and yawned.

It is poor consolation to the girl who has been stung by a bee to know that bees are partial to sweet things.

Three hundred years ago any man absent from church on Sunday was find a shilling. What a war revenue that would produce today!

SELF-POISONING VERY PREVALENT

AUTO-INTOXICATION, OR SLOW SELF-POISONING, CAUSE OF MOST ILL HEALTH AND DISEASE

Advanced medical authorities assert that auto-intoxication is the foundation of most of the ills and diseases to which the human flesh is heir.

This condition is nothing more nor less than the slow self-poisoning of the vital organs produced by the excessive mental and physical strain which we are forced to endure, which renders the organs lame and inactive, and permits toxins—actual poisons—to be generated within one's own body.

Usually the trouble starts in the intestines; sometimes it starts in the stomach, liver, or kidneys, but in any case the blame lies with the faulty method of living, and may be traced to over-eating, excessive nervous strain, lack of exercise, or other causes. At any rate it is the more important organs that suffer the final damage and when they falter or fail in their duties the body fills up with acids or poisons, and the victim often yields to their baneful influence. Bright's disease, heart trouble, high blood pressure, catarrhal acections, and other troubles are frequently the result of self poisoning or auto intoxication.

A tired, draggy feeling of the body, sluggish mind and dull memory, intense nervousness, headache, stomach and bowel troubles, poor circulation, imperfect digestion, constipation and despondency are some symptoms of auto-intoxication; and nine out of every ten of the American people are likely to be so affected.

Tanlac, the powerful reconstructive and systemic tonic, was designed especially to overcome these very troubles. There is not a single portion of the body that is not benefitted by the helpful work of this celebrated preparation, which begins its action by stimulating the digesive and assimilative organs, therebp enriching the blood and invigorating the entire system. Composed of the most beneficial roots and herbs known to science, it enables the stomach to thoroughly digest the food, thereby permitting the assimilable products to be converted into blood, bone and muscle. It overcomes that great exciting cause of disease weakness. It renders the body vigorous and elastic, it keeps the mind clear and energetic and throws off the symptoms of nervousness and indigestion. It builds up the constitution weakened by disease and mental and physical overwork, quickens the convalescense of the invalid, and is a sure and unfailing source of comfort to those who are suffering from the effects of nervousness and overwork.

That Tanlac does these every things is proven by the fact that it now has the largest sale of any tonic on the American market. Millions have used it with the most astonishing and gratifying results.

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. R. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Ivnike; in Lakefield, by Teener Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Mr. Playter, of McGill University, Montreal, is at present at his home in the village.

The Great War Veterans' Association will attend divine service in St. John's Church on Sunday evening, May 19th.

Rev. S. F. Dixon, of Stirling, has accepted the unanimous invitation which has been extended to him by the quarterly official board of the Lakefield Methodist Church.

By a recent order-in-council some of the locks on the Trent Canal will be open for Sunday traffic this summer. Among them is No. 27, Young's Point, which will be open from 7 a.m. until 11 a.m.; closed from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; open from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. and closed from 9 p.m. until midnight Sunday. This will give the people of Lakefield the opportunity of spending Sunday up the lake. This Sunday work is optional to the canal employees, but they will receive an extra 20c an hour if they undertake duties.

Capt. W. Scollard has returned to his home at Young's Point after spending his vacation in Buffalo.

The regular meeting of the Epworth League of the Methodist Church was held in the lecture room on Monday evening.

Special services were held in the Methodist Church last Sunday. Eloquent sermons were delivered by Mapor Rev. Harry A. Frost, B.A., B.A., pastor. The subject for 11 a.m. service was "The Ideal Mother," and for the evening "A Mother's Influence". Both services were well attended and the church full of people listened with great interest. During the service a solo "Abide With Us." was rendered by Mrs. F. Brown.

Special music was rendered in St. John's Church on Sunday by Mr. Harry Strickland, violinist of Toronto. An anthem, "O. Praise Ye the Lord," was given by the choir.

Mr. Gordon Grahame is at Stoney Lake for a few days making preparation for the boys' camp which he contemplates establishing this summer.

SEGRETARY PARKER'S REPORT OF YEAR'S WORK OF Y.W.C.A.

Expression

Fourteen pupils are enrolled in the Expression Class. In March a Green Room Recital was given by some of the pupils:

Dominion Council

During February, Miss Jones, National City Secretary, and Miss Yoemans, Girls' Work Secretary, spent three days in the Association, conferring with the Board Members and the staff, and bringing suggestions and counsel. In connection with this Conference a mass meeting for girls and a public meeting were addressed by Miss Jones, Miss Yeomans and Miss Harcourt, of the Hygiene Department of the Dominion Council Y. W. C. A. Acknowledging its debt to the general and foreign work of the Young Women's Christian Association of Canada, the "Y" has subscribed $125 to the Dominion Council to be applied to these departments.

Social

Several social events have been enjoyed by members this year. A masquerade party in December, when 80 members were present, and a Valentine in February, when 130 were present, were the two large membership parties. The Juniors too, had their big party at Christmas time, and the Ladies Class had their party in February, with an attendance of 60.

The events under the direction of the social committee of the Board were:—the Garden Party at the opening of the Swimming Pool in May, when 300 were present, and $87 realized. The opening rally in the Fall when 100 were present, a party given by the Board to the House Members and the Normal Students, 100 present, and a splendid banquet prepared at the launching of the Membership Campaign, 100 present.

The special events during the year, besides those just mentioned, which have added to the income of the Association were the Swimming Pool Exhibition at the Closing of the Pool in the Fall, $70. Victory Bazaar in December in which Gym Classes, Club Girls, House Member, and Girls' Auxiliary worked heartily, $223. Membership Campaign lasting one week in February, when teams representing each class and club, and the house girls handed in names and fees for 350 members, amount realized $465. Eastertide cantata given with the assistance of outside talent $15. Gymnasium closing, over $250, making a total of over $1100.

That the Y. W. C. A. should prove its right to be recognized as a centre for the young womanhood of Peterborough and in co-operation with the churches and Sunday Schools be a power for good among the girls of this city is its great ambition, and to some extent this ambition is being realized. The Girls Inter Sunday School Council, which grew out of the Girls Conference of last year, and which is composed of representatives from the various Sunday Schools, has its Centre at the Y.W.C.A. Another outcome of the Conference is that several Sunday Schools have now secondary divisions. It is right and fitting that the Association should be linked up with and take a leading part in all work of this kind.

Several Women's Organizations hold their regular or special meetings in the Green Room, among them, the 57th, Otonabee, and Peter Robinson Chapters of the I.O.D.E., the Local Council of Women, W.C.T.U., and Business Girls Club.

To attempt to record in detail the business of the office would be useless. The number of people passing in and out of the Association, the good use which is made of the Library and Reading Room, the Employment Bureau, the chats with girls, the many and varied calls made upon the time of the secretaries, through small perhaps in themselves, would loom large in the aggregate.

The Association has held itself in readiness to serve the community—and in return has gratefully to acknowledge many services and favors, and at this opportunity would voice its thanks and appreciation to those who throughout the year have generously given of their time and talent to assist on various programmes given in the Association, to the girls who have helped in many ways on various occasions, to the business men who have responded so heartily with donations to the Bazaar, and have allowed posters to be placed in their windows and have shown interest in the work carried, to the papers who have given much space and prominence to the activities of the Association and to all those who have given encouragement and support to the work during the past year.

WINNIFRED PARKER,
General Secretary

Superintendent's Report

In the late fifties of the last century the first Young Women's Christian Association home was opened in North London, England, where nurses going to Crimean War might be boarded and prepared for their work before sailing, and received on their return home. In 1861, this home was enlarged to make room for that class of young women emploped in business and now all over the world there are Y.W.C.A. boarding homes for young women, of which ours is one.

During the year past, our home has provided comfortable accommodation and we try to make it a real home for girls in commercial life, teachers and students. Our home has been practically filled since January 1. During the past year 190 different girls have lived for a longer or shorter time in our Association home, as well as two hundred and seventy transients. In addition to these we have had a number drop in for meals, and several come in every noon for dinner. Our capacity is seventy including an official and domestic staff of eleven. We have served approximately during the year 63,700 individual meals. Our total receipts amount to $11,488.90.

The ever increasing cost of food and for a number of months the urgent necessity for conserving food has made this a most difficult year in the Home Department, but on the whole the girls have shown a fine spirit and have fallen in line. On account of the increased price upon all sides, we found it necessary to increase the price of board. Board and room now ranges from $4.75 to $6.00, acording to the location of the rooms. Certain extra expenses have been incurred along the line of furnishings and repairs. There have been two of the large rooms on the top floor painted, and cork carpet, which for a long time has been badly needed on the halls of the first floor is being laid. Mats and runners have been putin all bedrooms on the second floor. These will not only add to the comfort of the girls, but also to the appearance of the room.

From Petty Cash has been bought curtain material for the second floor, table linen, sheeting, towels, cups and saucers and glassware, and many things which are required to keep a home in good running order. Last summer and in the early autumn, the following quantity of fruits and pickles were put away:—500 quarts of fruit, 250 quarts of pickles and canned tomatoes, 100 quarts of marmalade.

When our home filled up with returning girls last September, it unfortunately did not remain so for very long. The Flu epidemic began to creep in, and by Thanksgiving Day we had eight or nine cases. From that date until Christmas time there were only a few days without one or more cases in the home. Eight were taken to the hospital and twenty nursed here. We are glad to say that all recovered and that we began the New Year free from sickness and throughout the winter we have not had a case of illness.

A very pleasant time was spent in the home at Christmas. Cake and coffee was served on Christmas Eve. A large Christmas tree was placed in the hall, and decorated with gifts received by the house girls. These were distributed by Miss Littlefield, disguised as Santa Clause on Christmas morning. Special dinners were served on Christmas and New Years and a jolly little party was given on News Year's night. The girls decided it was the happiest

"IT WOULD BE UNNATURAL ON OUR PART IF WE WERE NOT ANXIOUS TO ASSIST THEM IN EVERY WAY TO ACCOMPLISH SO WORTHY AN OBJECT"

"The project to establish a headquarters at Peterborough for the men who have rendered naval and military service to their country during the Great War, is one which should appeal to the sympathy of all.

"The imminent peril to which our country, our homes and our institutions have been so recently exposed has in God's mercy, through the instrumentality of these men, been at last averted. It is natural that they on their part should wish for facilities which will enable them to keep unimpaired and strengthen the bonds of the close comradeship and brotherhood which the hardships and sacrifices and the imminent perils and dangers encountered have cemented so steadily. It would be unnatural on our part if we were not anxious to assist them in every way to accomplish so worthy an object.

"But quite apart from any benefit that the Veterans of the Great War may themselves derive from the undertaking, it cannot be doubted that the whole country will be strengthened by the creation of such a memorial of the struggle through which we have passed.

"The spirit of service and sacrifice which it commemorates and which it is designed to keep alive and foster, will be an inspiration to future generations, and of infinite service to the country should it ever again be necessary to call upon its manhood to take up arms in defence of their homes."

In case you are out when called upon it would be appreciated if you would leave your subscription at the home or office so that it may be procured.

"MONTANA BILL" TELLS THE STORY OF HIS CONVERSION

Famous Cowboy Found Light While in Training Camp in London, Ontario and Has Never Wavered.

London, Ont., May 15—William Downard of Montana, formerly Gunner William Downard of the 63rd Battery, better known to Londoners as "Montana Bill," spent Sunday with friends in the city on his way to his ranch in Montana with 108 head of horses purchased in Ontario.

He has almost entirely recovered from the casualties from which he suffered in the war, and is rapidly gaining up as a result of his outdoor life in Montana of the past few months.

The story of the conversion of "Montana Bill" at the City Mission during the time he was in training here is widely known. He remained Saturday afternoon for the purpose of having a talk with another convert of the mission who has lost his grip on the Christian faith. In all the trials and temptations through which he has passed in England and in France, Bill has never wavered, and many are the stories which have come back of the missionary work done by him in camp and hospital overseas.

Still Fairly Wild.

"Is Montana still a wild and woolly country?" he was asked.

"It is and it ain't," was his reply. "If you are looking for trouble you can find it, but it a a lot changed from what it was twenty years ago, or even five or six years ago. There is trouble sometimes, but when a cattleman carries his gun, in a good many cases it is to be ready to shoot if one of the steers in his bunch should go mad as they pretty often do, or if his horse steps in a badger hole and breaks its leg. At a time like that you can't wait to throw the animal with the rope and cut it up.

"Just the 14th of last month there was a general mixup not a block of a city street from where I was. Some greasers from over the border got after the stock along with some other rustlers. If you didn't get after them it was a case of them shooting you and taking your horses and cattle.

Quiet for a While.

"So far as religion is concerned, I'm going to go quiet for a time, but I know where I'm at. If I started shooting religion right away at some of the folks out there they'd tell me what I would have told you four or five years that I was clean crazy."

Bill has tenderer recollections of his mother, who died when he was a young lad.

"She was a good woman," he said, "but how can a woman teach her children much religion when she has to cook for forty or so cow-punchers and doesn't get any encouragement from her men?"

He was just six years old when he was literally kidnapped from home and his mother's care to be taught all the moves in the cattle game of a lawless country. He was thirteen before he saw his mother again.

How did he come to enter the City Mission?

The Conversion.

He had absolutely no use for preachers or churches, and many a time had put a bullet through the drum head of the Salvation Army. He had been on a big drunk, and was feeling down and out, absolutely friendless and hopeless. He was reading the paper on a Sunday and saw an advertisement. "The war goes on, peace is declared." He didn't notice where the address was to be given beyond the street number but his curiosity was aroused in regard to why they should be crying for recruits when the war was over.

He didn't even catch the name, "City Mission," when he entered the building Sunday evening.

He was seated before he realized that Evangelist Matheson was preaching a sermon. He was just about to go out when he became interested in the banners hanging around the walls printed with Scripture, texts, etc. He started readin them all round till he came to the second last, almost above his head.

The Question.

It asked the question, "When did you last write to your mother?"

"Gee," that made him more lonesome than ever. He wished he had a mother to write to, and that started him thinking about his mother.

Then the meeting was over, and the evangelist came down to talk to him and ask him where he was from. When he said, Montana the evangelist told him that he himself had come from Pennsylvania, and was an ex-pugilist, and some more things not exactly clerical.

That made Bill sit up and be willing to listen.

Would he like to be converted? He didn't know what that meant. But he had at times wanted to find out if the dope they taught in churches was straight. He had gone into churches, guns, chaps and all, to find out. But churches weren't very kindly to a man with chaps and guns and the people didn't show inclination to want to sit near him or act friendly.

The Light Broke.

He didn't remember how he got up to the platform or started to pray, but a light broken on him, and since that day when he found the friend of sinners, and of fellows who are lonely and friendly, Bill has never gone back on Him.

There are some 12,000 head of cattle out on the ranches among the family, father and two sons and "Bill," otherwise former gunner William Downard of the 63rd Battery is looking forward to a successful business career as a ranches, and also to getting in some effective work for his "best friend" as he calls Jesus Christ.

Concerning the Salvation Army, he said: "Since I've been in France I think there is nobody in the world like them, but I'd have thought anyone was crazy who said that five or six years ago."

A BAD HABIT AND HOW TO CORRECT IT

"I'll start here—this is a good place to begin."

How often we hear students voice the above when asked to play a certain measure of part of a composition. They invariably prefer to commence at the beginning of the phrase in which the measure occurs and even, at times insist on playing the whole section on the ground that they will get mixed up if they attempt to play only the designated fragment.

This is a bad habit; one that should never have been formed, and if unfortunately acquired by careless training or lazy indulgence, should be overcome as speedily as possible. It is an admission of weakness an acknowledgment of inadequate mastery of he composition to be guilty of needing "a good place to begin."

A student should be able to commence playing at any measure or on any beat of a measure and maintain the proper accent and rhythm without undue effort or confusion. The same principle applies to memorizing. So often, if a mistake is made when playing from memory, he pupil finds it necessary to go back three or four lines or perhaps a page in order to get "started" again. If the piece had been thoroughly learned, with ample practice in beginning at various places, the break could be tided over and the broken threads of the composition picked up with ease, thus eliminating much needless repetition.

MAKING SEA MUSIC

The most successful of the music sea painters after Handel and Purcell is Mendelssohn. The soughing of the wind, the rolling of the waters the strange, resounding echoes that come out of empty caves, the gentle melancholy of eventide—all these go to make "The Herbrides" one of the loveliest things in music.

Beethoven never tried his hand at music of this kind. Mozart never tried, and Haydn has only one sea piece in The Creation. When he wrote that interesting, old-fashioned work he had crossed the channel twice, but "Rolling in Foaming Billows," is a poor, uninspired thing.

"Ocean Thou Mighty Monster," is Weber's only attempt in this genre, and it is more suggestive of a squalling soprano at the footlights than of the fresh, salt ocean. Rubinstein's "Ocean Symphony" is not real music of any sort but mere noisy bombast. Elgar's Sea Picture bring no scent of the sea.

It is no reproach to a composer that he should have failed. There are many other things quite as well worth doing. While many natural phenomena have been splendidly interpreted in music, few have achieved masterpieces in depicting a phenomenon which ought to make a stupendous and varied appeal to all men.

RELAXATION FOR MUSICIANS

The art of music contains so many branches and subdivisions that it contains its own "changes of occupation". And they are all necessary to the complete musician. So that the student may rest from reading of musical history, he may rest from the study of interpretation by the practise of sight reading; he may rest from all these by the study of languages and literature; he may rest from the study of harmony by the reading of new music; and the changes may be rung on these and other subjects belonging to the musician's art in such a manner than that student's mind will be positively rested and revitalised by the contrasting topics.

But there is another "vacation" another "rest" another "change of occupation" which transcends all others. It is the Summer School. Here the student may find change o fair, change of scene, change of outlook and exchange of ideas. He will learn new methods; he will get in touch with the latest developments he will be able to measure his talents by the standards of others; be will be possessed with a greater spirit of emulation and will be fortified by a greater amount of vim, or nerve, and of "pep" for the next season's work.

PIANISTS SHOULD STUDY MECHANISM OF PIANO

No pianist is competent to take up the study of one production unless he is acquainted with the mechanism of the piano, the construction of which must decide the treatment htat it should be accorded. A visit to a piano factory will more than repay any serious teacher. He will receive information that he will be able to use to advantage throughout his career, either as a teacher or player. I is very essential for a student to know the working of the instrument on which he plays if he is to do his task intelligently. This subject is one of the most neglected in the whole piano curriculum. It is part of the organists' equipment to have a working knowledge of his instrument. Should we require any less study of this point in the cast of the piano student?

Good gracious! Man, mere man, is outdistanced at every turn! Detroit now has a woman piano mover!!! And there are women tuners!!!! Cannot the legislators do something to........ (words fail) ....

MAKING A TOWN MUSICAL

It makes such a difference if there is a leading thought in a town. Even one person can do so much. Just suppose you went to stay in some little place, quite asleep on the subject of music. What you would at once do might be a very simple thing at first. You might only call some of the people together once a week to listen to phonograph records. Then you might start a little music club an dbefore long you would suggest having a few artists come during the season to play and sing for them. And so the good work goes on. The artists need not be of the highest or the most expensive many of the humbler sort are doing splendid work in just this way. They are filling the great need—the need to make the people know and love good music.

THE BASIS OF MUSIC

The basis of music is melody and rhythm. The one cannot exist in music without the other, and those who would interpret music, must stud the printed page for the great sweep of the rhythm and the beauties of the melodic outline. Having found those two, it is only necessary to produce them with the same conviction one would use in uttering the truths of the ages.

IS SIX-EIGHT TIME

In order to enjoy playing or listening to Mendelssohn pou must have melody in your heart.

Anybody who has an audible speaking voice, has, bp the same token, a voice with which to sing.

The piano was the medium that Chopin chose and on it and for it he wrote some of the most perfect tone creations that man has ever heard.

There has been formed in England a National Carol League devoted to the development and performance of carols, ancient and modern.

You have set a time for breakfast dinner and supper. You should have a set time for your vocal or instrumental practice. Just an hour, whenever convenient, a day is not good enough.

The reading public is finding out about the vast number of important men who find in music a recreation an inspiration and a rest from the serious affairs of big business and the state unqualified by anything else—such as Charles M. Schwab, Rt. Hon. Lord Northcliffe, Lloyd George, and scores of others that might be mentioned.

"The cello," Dvorak once said, "is a beautiful instrument, but its place is in the orchestra and in chamber music. As a solo instrument it isn't much good. Its middle register a fine—that's true—but the upper voice squeaks and the lower growls. The finest solo instrument after all, is—and will remain—the violin." The 'cello not a solo instrument. No person would be bold enough to make that statement today.

"When practicing, Ishonld never advise a student to play a piece through from beginning to end untilit is well learned, recommends Mark Hambourg. "A piece should be studied as poetry—idea for idea. It should be played slowly and evenly and when perfected, the next idea should be treated in the same way and then the two played till they go smoothly, and the third is taken up."

Ebony is a very hard wood, and if your violin has a fingerboard of some softer wood it would be an advantage to have an ebony fingerboard put on as the pressure of the fingers on the strings wears little gutters in the surface of the wood very rapidly in the case of ordinary hard wood. Even in the case of ebony these gutters appear in time, and the fingerboard then has to be scraped to eliminate them.

Why It Is a Mistake to Delay Your Purchase Of The NEW-EDISON

EDISON RE-CREATIONS

Most everything you buy wears out eventually. An automobile for example or a suit of clothes. So the longer you delay its purchase the longer you'll have it to enjoy.

Not so with a New Edison. It will outlive you anyway. Every month you delay is just one more month gone from your life—another month in which you might have had your life enriched by music—but didn't.

Under our new plan by which payment can be made so much a month there's no reason why you shouldn't be enjoying your New Edison right now.

The New Edison cost $3,000,000 to perfect. It is the only instrument which successfully meets the test of direct comparison with the living artist's voice or instrument. It will bring into your home the world's best music, sung or played by the world's great artists.

Call to morrow for a demonstration. "Send it out to the house" will be your verdict.

If you desire it, we will make easy terms of payment.

"ANNALS OF VALOR."

Handy Little Volume Issued by Department of Education.

The Department of Education has issued a booklet, designed for use in the celebration of Empire Day, May 23rd, called "Annals of Valor." As the name implies, the little volume is a record of outstanding events in the late war, with special reference to the part taken in the conflict by the Canadian soldiers.

One of the chapters deals with "The Schools and the War," and in this the ground is taken that the educational system of Ontario is not hopelessly bad. If the real aim of education is the training for effective citizenship, then that aim has been attained in this province as evidenced by the fact that the graduates of the schools enlisted voluntarily and in numbers unprecedented and unequalled anywhere.

The book is one of the handiest war volumes that has yet been issued for the peculiar benefit of the school children.

WHY SO MANY PLAYS PROVE FAILURES

NOTED DRAMASTIC SAYS IT IS BECAUSE THEY ARE OVER PEOPLES' HEADS.

Mr. C. Haddon Chambers is the author of "The Saving Grace," in which Mr. Cyril Maude appears at the Grand, Thursday, May 22nd, and is also the author of those delightful dramas of seasons past, namely, "Captain Swift," "The Idler," "John 'O Dreams," "The Fatal Card," "The Tyranny of Tears" and "Passers By." He came to America from his London home last autumn to supervise the rehearsals of "The Saving Grace" and came a second time to witness the final performances of the long run of the play at the Empire Theatre. During his stay in New York the stereotyped question, "What makes a successful play?" was asked of him. His reply was by no means stereotyped. He said:

"For my part, I consult no taste but my own. I have written to please myself, and sometimes it pleases other people. When it does not please other people it is a failure. When it does it is a success. But it is always a success so far as I am concerned, because, you see, I get my amusement out of it before the audience sees it. Once in a hundred times when a play is a failure it fails because it is over the heads of the audience. The ninety-nine other times it fails because it is beneath the audience's contempt. We hear a lot now and then about the coming drama. Do you know what it will be? The coming drama will be the same kind of play that has been successful for the past 2,000 years, and will be for the next 2,000—the play that entertains and interests. The drama that is not going to come in the future, just as it has not come in the past, is the drama that bores while it pretends to elevate and uplift. Personally, I don't want to be unlifted, but I dare say there are people who do. The only thing I resent is that they should ask me to uplift them. However, there is no knowing what a man can get the public to accept from him, provided he possesses the first think the public will take any and that the dramatic instinct. I think the public will take any amount amount and any kind of preaching if the man who preaches is really a born dramatist and has the dramatic instinct. But the trouble with the most of these people who try to uplift and elevate and educate us is that they haven't the dramatic instinct, and they don't succeed in making what they have to say interesting."

BLANCHE SWEET PLAYED A HUNCH

FOUND CONGENIAL DUAL ROLES IN "THE UNPARDONABLE SIN."

Theatregoers everywhere will welcome the return of Blanche Sweet to the screen in the big Harry Garson photoplay, "The Unpardonable Sin" which is the attraction at the Grand today, Friday and Saturday, matinee daily. Miss Sweet had won a host of admirers—and these admirers have missed her for the past year or more. "Where has she been?" and "What has she been doing?" will be questions asked in thousands of homes where her new will be discussed. There isn't so much to say about where she has been and what she has been doing—Miss Sweet's earlier work before the camera had taken a rather heavy toll of her nervous energy and when the time came that she found it possible to take a long and comfortable rest she welcomed the opporunity to establish herself in one of the real show places in Lower California and live the quiet, peaceful life which she had been advised would return her to active service beter and more effective as a screen star than she had ever been. There is, however, something more—and more interesting—to say as to the manner in which Miss Sweet was induced to come out of her "home shell" for this particular picture "The Unpardonable Sin."

The reading public will identify the picture as a screen adaptation from the popular Major Rupert Hughes' novel by the same name. Those who have read the book will also recall that the principal character in the story, Dimny Parcot, is a young American girl who finds herself alone in her father's wonderful home in California when the action begins; Dimny's father is an explorer, who has been absent on a trip to the Arctic regions for some time, and her mother has hurried to Europe to find Dimny's sister, who had been placed at school in a convent in Belgium.

When Mr. Garson secured the photoplay rights to the story and engaged Marshall Neilan to direct the picture, both Mr. Garson and Mr. Neilan agreed that Miss Sweet was the ideal star for the production. Miss Sweet was offered an attractive contract and the figure was such that she might have accept for nothing other than business reasons—but it so happened that Miss Sweet welcomed hte opportunity to play "Dimny Parcot" for other reasons about which Mr. Garson and Mr. Neilan knew absolutely nothing when they were looking for a star.

First of all it has developed, Miss Sweet knows Major Rupert Hughes and his wife intimately. She had read "The Unpardonable Sin" while it was appearing in serial form in the Red Book Magazine. It had happened, moreover, that Miss Sweet had been told a few things about the story and how it was fabricated which not many people know. Major Hughes, following the accepted practice of novelists who get exceptional results, had written into his fiction narrative a number of flesh-and-blood characters—and among them were some of his honest-to-goodness personal friends in California, whom he chose to name the Parcots. Miss Sweet knew a way to get in touch with the father, mother, and two daughters whom Major Hughes had chosen as his "Parcots" of the story, and, using a little of the superstition which is always to be found in people in the amusement business, the actress who had been offered the opportunity of becoming the make-believe Dimny Parcot, regarded the offer as a "hunch" and, as she express it, gave up the simple life because she "just had to."

It is interesting to know that after Miss Sweet had arranged to play the part, she insisted upon following her "hunch" to such an extent that it cost Mr. Garson a little extra money. It was easy enough— and it didn't cost anything for Miss Sweet to cultivate the acquaintance of the originals of the "Parcot" family but, after the production had been begun it did cost Mr. Garson some money to transport a photographic crew to the necessary principals all the way back from Los Angeles to Marion, Ind., to make that part of the picture in which Miss Sweet is represented as having been frightened into a state of coma by an attemped assault—and Miss Sweet insisted upon an actual town—and this town, Marion, Ind., for the reason that some years ago she had been taken ill there and had been tenderly cared for by comparitive strangers in much the same manner as is shown in the picture.

Those who have seen "The Unpardonable Sin," are unanimous in their opinion that in none of her previous productions has Miss Sweet done more artistic work. That she has staged a "come back" without the slightest slip is conceded to be remarkable.

Special Holiday Bill At The Grand

"TURN TO THE RIGHT" IS THE ATTRACTION FOR MAY 24th.

A kettle of peach jam, placed on the window sill of an old-fashioned farmhouse, plays one of the important parts in "Turn to the Right," the comedy drama of mirth and mother-love, to be presented at the Grand Saturday, May 24th, matinee and evening, by Winchell Smith and John L. Golden.

The irresistible odor of the jam, carried forth on the evening breezes, attracts to Mother Bascom's kitchen door a weirdly varied group of folk from the world outside—folk who convey to the homely domicile a tang of Gotham life from its widest sociological extremes. First it brings grasping old Deacon Tillinger, who would turn the golden-hearted old lady out of her home and so grab the whole peach orchard and jam industry. Then it brings, at the proper dramatic moment "Slippery Muggs" and "Dynamite Gilly," smooth crooks from the city and former prison pals of Mother Bascom's erring son, Joe. Likewise, at the right time, it attracts a glib salesman whose contract for great quantities of the confection puts the repentant and tender-hearted crooks on the high road to respectability and wealth, wins Deacon Tillinger's loyal daughter for the regenerated ne'er-do-well son and reveals the silver lining of the clouds that threatened the little homestead. The cleverness of the scene builder is given free rein in a series of beautiful stage settings.

To err is human, to forgive divine—but it's useless to mention it to the police justice.

Inconstancy Ever Unpopular.

Nothing that is not a real crime makes a man appear so contemptible and little in the eyes of the world as inconstancy, especially when it regards religion or party. In either of these cases, though a man perhaps does but his duty in changing his side, he not only makes himself hated by those he left, but is seldom heartily esteemed by those he comes over to.—Addison.

More or Less?

Hickop had decided to turn over a new leaf, and he couldn't help letting everybody know. "I have resolved for the New Year," he said, feeling if his halo was on straight, "that I shall not drink any more." "But, my dear fellow," protested a Doubting Thomas "you couldn't drink any more. The point is have you resolved to drink any less?"—London Answers.

Understanding Each Other.

Those who fancy themselves not understood by the people with whom they have to associate might find some consolation in the fact that they themselves are not taking any great trouble to understand others. We are really not so complex or peculiar as we often imagine, and perhaps we are not worth so much study as we demand.—Exchange.

Reptiles That Shed Their Skin.

Among the reptiles many, like the lizards and snakes, shed the whole skin at once, which they contrive to cast in a single piece, wriggling out of the old skin and leaving it behind them in the form of a hollow sheath, a mere ghost of the wearer. The frogs and toads contrive to make some profit on the transaction, since they eat their own castoff garments.

Billion.

In the United States a billion is a thousand millions. In Great Britain and European countries, the progression runs regularly, tens of millions, hundreds of millions, thousands of millions; tens of thousands of millions, hundreds of thousands of millions, thousands of thousands of millions, billions (that is a million of millions).

Salt and Superstition.

The superstitions with regard to salt are endless. That spilling salt is unlucky is perhaps the commonest of all superstitious beliefs, and prevails in the kitchen as well as at the table. There are Scottish households where salt is still held in such reverence that the salt cellar used at the family table is invariably kept standing on the family Bible.

Are Judges of Own Membership.

The Constitution gives each house of the national congress the right to expel a member, and makes each house the sole judge in the matter. Any charge would suffice, if two-thirds of the members deemed it cause for expulsion. Neither house has anything to do with expelling a member of the other house.

The "Anvil" Bird.

The anvil-bird of Australia is a very rare and exceedingly shy creature. Its clear metallic note rings out, "Kling, kling, kling, kling, kling a ling." It is the hardest of all bush birds to locate, as it mostly does its blacksmithing in the topmost branches of the dense brushwoods.

If Willard and Dempsey Fail to Agree Then Tex Rickard is to Make the Choice.

Tex Rickard has wired Willard and Dempsey to set a day when they can get together and appoint a referee. Under the terms of his agreement with the two boxers they are to select the referee, but if they cannot agree then Rickard is to make the appointment.

At the present time there seems to be little chance of the two agreeing on any particular man. The very fact that a certain referee pleases one of the contestants will be sufficient to make him decidedly unpopular with the other and a deadlock is bound to ensue.

That was precisely what happened when Jeffries and Johnson were matched. Neither would consent to the choice made by the other until it was suggested that Rickard himself act as the official arbiter. This Rickard was very loath to do, but when it began to look as though the match would fall through if he did not agree to the proposition he consented to act.

The Jeffries-Johnson mill was slated to go forty-five rounds and as there appeared to be little chance of it going the limit the referee question was not half as important as it is in the present case. Willard is stakin his title on the judgment of the third man in the ring and the chances are greatly in favor of the bout going the limit of twelve rounds.

Under the circumstances Rickard seems to be the only man that both boxers would be willing to trust. However the promoter declares that nothing can induce him to take the job. He says that he will be busy enough looking after the thousand and one things around the arena without adding to his trouble.

Refereeing a bout is a thankless task in Rickard's opinion. No matter how he decides he is bound to make enemies and no friends. In other words "the best he can et is the worst of it."

In Rickard's one essay as a referee he was fortunate enough to escape having to hand down a decision or decide any knotty point in regard to the rules. Both Jeffries and Johnson fought fairly, and there was little or nothing for Rickard to do.

Recently Rickard recalled his experiences on that occasion. He said that he was so busy with other details that it entirely slipped his memory that he was to referee the biggest battle in the history of the ring. It was not until the men were in the ring that it suddenly dawned upon the promoter that he was to be the third man in the circle that day.

"If I had thought of what was before me I probably would have been worried to death," he said, "but before I had time to think the bout had begun and then I never had time to be nervous over the matter. The most painful part of the job for me was watching Jeff toss off a fight that I think he should have won.

"For the first two rounds Johnson was so nervous that if Jeffries had gone after him with both hands and mixed it up I think he would have made Johnson jump through the ropes. But instead of forcing he stood there trying to feint and box. Johnson soon found that he could box rings around the big fellow and his confidence came back. In the third round Johnson landed a terrific left that closed Jeff's right eye. After that there was no holding Johnson. He knew he was master, and for the first time he smiled and began to kid and josh, as he always had done when he was sure of himself."

General Strike

there are to be no exceptions in this strike, and it is intimated that even the few unions which decided not to take a sympathetic strike vote must abide by the decision of the majority or run the risk of being deprived of their charter in the Labor Council. The principle of collective bargaining is at stake, they say.

Must Adjust Every Demand.

While the strike was called for the purpose of enforcing a settlement of the demands of the building trades and metal workers, once the strike is effective, Secretary Robinson announced, not settlement will be permitted until every demand of every union has been satisfactorily adjusted. Negotiations will not be permitted between employers and respective unions, but all communications are to be handled by the Strike Committee, which will have absolute authority over the strike, and will approve or disapprove any settlement offered.

People's Chimes Rang Merrily

IN WELCOME TO LT.COL. REASON BACK FROM FRANCE

Lieut.-Col. Reason officer commanding No. 3 Canadian Stationery Hospital in France arrived in the city last evening and is the guest over today of Rev. Canon Davidson. The people's chimes were rung merrily this morning in the galant Colonel's honor, and the visitor thoroughly enjoyed a drive throughout the city to see its many points of interest.

NO CHANGE IN STRIKE CIRCLES

The strike situation so far as the city is concerned remains unchanged City Engineer Parsons and Street Commissioner Evans say they have all the men working that are needed for pressing calls. A sufficient street cleaning gang is on duty, the men from the surface drainage work are engaged in piping the Romaine street sewer beneath the railway tracks, and after that is finished in a day or two, they will return to their drainage job on King street. Plenty of work is listed for this year, apart from the bridge proposition, but the corporation will not undertake it under existing conditions.

A settlement between the employers and men of one skilled line affected by the strike is optimistically looked for by Monday next.

VETERANS FROM THIS CITY PROPOSE AN AMENDMENT

Would Make Membership in the Association Harder to Secure by Limiting the Eligibility of the Candidates.

Windsor, Ont., May 15. The Peterborough delegates to the provincial convention of the G.W.V.A. propose to bring in a motion which will make membership in the association considerably harder to secure. They will ask that each applicant be forced to wait until his antecedents can be looked into by a committee appoitned for the purpose, and that those not suitable be rejected. This will do away with initiation en bloc which at present prevails. This motion will be supported by delegates from other towns, who claim undesirable members are injuring the association in the eyes of the public.

Peterborough, Belleville and Cobourg are all after next year's convention.

Membership Discussion.

The 170 delegates at the convention are not to have any too much time to themselves. Last night they sat until nearly 11. The old membership qualification rule again came up and caused some hot discussion. It was not finished when the meeting adjourned and will be gone into again today. A motion was introduced calling for the admission to membership of all volunteers who had served in England or Canada and for such others as might be declared eligible. An amendment was introduced asking that such action be deferred until all present available membership be exhausted, and yet another amendment to the amendment wanted the question put to a referendum. The original motion was put in by Comrade Abot of Guelph and Comrade Drew of Galt. The question produced a bitter discussion.

Has To Apologize and Withdraw.

Secretary Cook of Hamilton Central took the motion to mean that draftees would be admitted, and he dubbed them "vermin." He was asked to apologize and withdraw the expression, which he di. Dr. Wilson, Central Toronto, thought it was not a square deal to keep men out who had volunteered, until all available membership was exhausted, and Comrade B. P. Brockbank supported this, and pointed out that some other association might snap them up in the meantime.

President A. H. Peart, Hamilton East, also thought draftees who had seen service and volunteers who did not got overseas should be in. The only men he wanted kept out were the 43,366 who had asked for exemption and had been refused. There were men on garrison duty, etc., who had done their bit where they were ordered, as well as 8,000 men in the R. A. F. eligible.

President Livingstone, Grimsby, Stevenson, Riverdale, and several others also thought these men should be allowed in.

Mr. Turley's Objections.

Provincial Secretary Turley strongly objected. He pointed out that the G. W. V. A. had 469,500 volunteers to draw from for membership, and thought the deserving cases would see the justice of the associate membership allowed by the association to them.

He also thought that secretaries of branches were too modest in reporting their membership to the executive and that there were more than 40,000 members in Ontario, of which 95 per cent. could qualify under the present rules. He claimed that the G. W. V. A. was a real veterans' association from the feet up, and that the other associations were outnumbered 25 to 1 in fighting men among their numbers by the G. W. V. A., and that there was no fear of their getting any members wanted by the G. W. V. A. Also that the G.W.V.A. was the only real veterans' association recognized by the Government.

Neutral in Wine and Beer.

A resolution was introduced calling for an expression of opinion by the association on the proposed light wine and beer legislation which will be before the electors of the Province soon. This attempt of drag the veterans as an association into politics appears doomed to failure. It is stated by some of the resolution committee that the resolution will never be presented to the meeting. Every veteran must decide the question individually, and the veterans as an association will be neutral.

CAPT. ROLLINS HOME JUNE 1ST

CABLED REV. W. L. H. ROWAND FROM LIVERPOOL THIS MORNING.

Rev. W. L. H. Rowand, minister in charge of St. Andrew's Church, received the following cable this morning from the absent pastor, Capt. James Rollins:

"Can preach June 1st."

The cable was dated May 15 and was sent from Liverpool, so that Capt. Rollins must be on the point of embarking for home. He is chaplain of the 21st aBttalion, which was expected to return as a unit, so that the announcement that the battalion had sailed yesterday would appear ot be premature. Mrs. Rollins and Miss Jessie, her daughter, are at present in Kingston, and will no doubt return with Capt. Rollins to the city, where they are certain to receive a hearty welcome. St. Andrew's people have every reason to be proud of their pastor, whose military record is above reproach, who served to the end of the war in any position which he was called upon to fill, who has been four years overseas without seeking the limelight of free advertising, and whose age alone prevented him from serving as a combatant.

Lakefield Cadets Pass Inspection

At the conclusion of the inspection a baseball match was played on the grounds.

Col. Gillespie also inspected the Lakefield Preparatory School corps.

MR. ROWAND CANNOT ACCEPT

Invitation to Preach Jubilee Sermon in Fort William.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Fort William, of which Rev. W. L. H. Rowand, of this city, was pastor for seventeen years, leaving that place nine years ago, will celebrate its jubilee on Sunday, June 1. The management have asked Mr. Rowand to conduct the services on that occasion, but he has been obliged to decline, having agreed to be in Moosejaw on that date to begin his pastorate there. The invitation, however, was certainly a compliment to Mr. Rowand and an evidence of the esteem in which he is held by those to whom he formerly ministered.

GIRLS! OPPORTUNITY IS KNOCKING AT YOUR DOOR

New Field of Business Operation in Whicq the Demand For Intelligent Girls is Far Greater Than Supply

The field of opportunity for girls in the business world is expanding every year, and the latest openings presented are those created by the invention of Burrough's Calculators. These machines are a wonderful improvement on the adding machine, in that they not only add, but substract, divide and multiply. They are in great requisition by leading business houses, in which they are invaluable for all classes of figure work.

As is the case with all new machine inventions the demand for operators is much in excess of the supply, and to meet this demand the Peterborough Business College has installed a battery of Burrough's Calculators, and placed on its curriculum the "Calculator Course" of study. In eight weeks girls with two or three years in the high school can acquire expert efficiency in operating this calulator and remunerative positions are even now awaiting them. There is no school in Ontario in which this new business course is taught but the Peterborough Business College, endorsed by the Burroughs people as training headquarters for their wonderful calculator.

$1,000 a Year.

Principal J. A. McKone has engaged a special instructor of the Burrough's Calculator and since March 1st all proficient students have been placed in desirable positions. Five graduates are earning from $800 to $1,000 a year with bright prospects for a considerable advance and the waiting list for operators swells every week.

Congenial Work.

The operation of Burrough's Calculator affords opportunity for girls engaging in congenial work, in a line from which mental strain and drudgery have been eliminated. The machines are used by large and important business houses where surroundings are pleasant and appreciation of expert work exemplified in regularly increasing salaries. The Calculator is such a time-and-worry saving and accurracy assuring invention that its installers are always generous in salaries offered for its operation and in consideration for the comfort of its operators.

Exceptional Advantages.

The Peterborouh Business College enjoys a reputation for giving the best there is in business training, and in its exclusive Burrough's Calculator course it offers exceptional advantages to its students to acquire skill in a new avenue of employment for girls in leading industrial and business concerns.

Take Advantage of It.

Girls! Opportunity is knocking at your door. Take advantage of it by acquiring efficiency with the new calculator and thus securing a business asset, for which the demand is persistent. Positions await you!

The Peterboro Business College, training school for the Burrough's Calculator is situated in the Dominion Bank building, corner George and Hunter streets.

Secretary Parker's

festive season they had ever spent in the home.

Little groups of girls are being entertained to birthday parties by the Superintendent in her sitting room. All the girls will have been included by the end of June. The girls enjoy this little touch of home and the break in the regular routine. The House and Social provided an evening's entertainment for the House Girls and Normal Students during the winter, which was much appreciated. In entertaining our girls we feel that it not only provided pleasure, but also gives us greater opportunity of becoming more closely acquainted with each, for in this way can one of the most helpful influences be exerted.

During the Membership Campaign our House girls entered most heartily into the competition with the result that hey received the coveted pennant.

The banquet at the launching of the campaign was served in our dining room.

Eeverp evening immediately after supper the girls assemble in the Green Room for prayers, a house girl taking charge once a week. On one occasion representatives of the Religious Work Committee took charge of an evening prayer service.

Our home throughout the year has been comfortable and happy, and we feel sure equal to any other Association home. To the House Committee I would voice my appreciation of their hearty support and kind encouragement, and the kind interest and confidence shown by the members of the Board has been an added incentive to the carrying on of the work of the Home.

In these days of unparalleled opportunity we believe we are together learning to serve in the Spirit of Him, who came not tobe ministered unto, but to minister.

Respectfully submitted,
E. MORRISON,
Superintendent of Home.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

Every Wage Earner An Investor

Every wage earner can be an investor in gilt-edged securities bearing a high rate of interest without sacrifice or worry.

The plan is so simple and secure that it commends itself to everybody.

All of us spend a portion of our earnings thoughtlessly. It is human nature. Yet most of us would be glad if someone would take the money we fritter away and save it for us, because we find it difficult to save it ourselves.

Make your employer do it by means of War Savings Stamps. Say to him: "I want you to take five per cent. of the money in my pay envelope each week and buy me Thrift Stamps.. Then with each $4.00 worth of Thrift Stamps buy me a War Savings Stamp. When you have bought each War Savings Stamp, put it in my envelope. Go on doing that for a year."

That is all. Your mind is free. You will not miss that 75 cents or that dollar which you have hitherto squandered on trifles.

But at the end of the year you will have a little package of War Savings Stamps, each bearing the $5.00 mark, hut which have cost you but a few cents over $4.00 each. These Canada will redeem in 1924.

In May W-S.S. Cost $4.04

In June W-S.S. Cost $4.05

DIXIE MINSTRELS AT THE LYCEUM

The Dramatic section of the Holy Name Society presented a minstrel show at the Lyceum last night and the excellency of the entertainment, which was under the able direction of Mac Murty, furnished further evidence of the fact that there is an abundance of histronic talent in Peterborough. The interlocutor's position was ably filled by Mr. Richard Leonard and the colored end men were:

Bones	T. J. Collins
Ambroce	E. J. Picard
Sambo	W. E. Girard
Rastus	D. J. White
Snowball	M. J. Maher
Rufus	M. J. Murty

Some of the jokes had a local application that caught the audience and between these pleasantries the following musical program was rendered by the cork faced artists and others.

Song—You're some pretty doll A. Weatherhead.
Song—They'll be mighty proud in Dixie—Bones.
Song—Ja Da —Sambo
Song—Someone else may be there —F. Shannon.
Song—How you gohna keep 'em down on farm—C. Carson.
Song—After you're gone—Snowball.
Song—Pray for the lights—
Song—Kisses—Laurence Emberry
Step dance—Rufus.
Song—Cotton Hollow —Ambrose.
Song —Robert E. Lee - Rastus.

The young men in the chorus were D. Kelly, Arthur, Donoghue, Alfred Weatherhead, Harry Rudkins, Willie Carroll, George Leonard, Laurence Emberry, Charles Begley, Charles Carson and Freddie Shannon and every singer met with a hearty recall.

There was a special musical program after the Dixie Minstrels had retired. J. Collins sang "Honeysuckle Inn." Miss Minnie Allen "Sing me the Rosary." Fred Clark rendered a banjo solo and Sam Houlihan delighted the large audience with an exhibition of artistic step dancing. J. Primeau delivered one of his famous monologues that abounded with local skits in which frequent reference was made to the Hunter street bridge. Mr. Primeau was arrayed in a grotesque negro costume in keeping with the temporary ebony hue on his otherwise handsome face.

Perhaps the best feature of the interesting program was the work of two little girls, who in tasteful attire rendered "The Story Book Ball," the vocal part being taken by the elder, Dorothy Gordon, her companion, Helen Conroy, a charming child of about three years joining in the dance with a composure that only childhood knows. This exhibition fairly brought down the house.

In no small measure the success of the entertainment was due to the excellent work of the orchestra which was composed of Miss E. Delaire, pianist; Miss C. McCarthy, first violin; Mr. E. Cassiano, second violin and Mr. Frank Lynch drum and fife.

21ST BATTALION FIGURED IN TROUBLE IN ENGLISH CAMP

Col. Pense's Men Broke Into Canteen and Helped Themselves to Stock of Beer—Trouble Started When Military Policeman Struck a Colored Private.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, May 16.—Later advices regarding the disturbances which occurred in the Canadian camps in Murrey last week are to the effect that a party of men at Seaford became incensed at the action of the military police in arresting a colored soldier.

A policeman it is stated struck a private and threw his comrades into an uproar. Two wet canteens were broken into. It is believed the Commandant does not defend the action of the military police. The only casualty was one policeman bruised and shaken but not seriously hurt.

This was on the 3rd instant and on the following Wednesday night there was trouble among the 21st Regt commanded by Col. Penso of Kingston, two canteens were broken into and beer disposed of. Windows were broken but otherwise there was no serious damage.

Last Saturday there was trouble in Guilford. There was a dance at the town hall and Imperial discharged men, it is said resented the preference shown the Canadians by the ladies. The Canadians on leaving the hall were subjected to insult which some of them did not submit to tamely and isolated fights occurred.

Last Sunday there was further trouble in Guilford streets between the Canadians and residents and the Canadian military police persuaded their men to take a train for Witley Camp. In recent interviews the Mayor and Chief Constable of Guilford testified to the general exemplary conduct of the Canadians at Witley.

Germans Have No Choice But To Sign

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Versailles, May 16.—The distinct impression among some of the subordinate members of the German peace mission that the Germans will sign the peace treaty is deflected in the remark of one of the secretaries. "What else can we do but sign? We are on the ground, your knees are on our stomachs and your thumbs in our eyes."

LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN TO ESTABLISH A BABY CLINIC

Action Taken at Regular Meeting Yesterday and Committees Will Look After Various Details of the Project.

The regular monthly executive meeting of the local Council of Women was held in the Green room of the Y. W. C. A. on Thursday May 15th. The president Mrs. Harstone, was in the chair. A communication from the National Council asking the local Council to join with them in petitioning the Government to allow the importation of oleomargarine was read. The Government having permitted the existing order of things to continue for another year, waiting was done with regard to this communication, but it was felt that there was no good reason why oleomargarine should not be allowed to be manufactured in Canada. With this idea in view the secretary was asked to get all information from Mrs. A. Short, who has made a study of this subject. This information will be given to the local Board of Trade who it is hoped will co-operate with the local Council in this matter.

A communication from the Protestant Home calling the attention of the Council to the fact that there is no law in Ontario compelling children to support their parents, was received.

A resolution that this communication be sent on to the National Council of Women to be discussed at their annual meeting, was carried.

The Citizenship Committee referred to a bylaw, the purpose of which was to compel people to cut down the weeds on their property. This bylaw is ignored and the weeds flourish especially those on vacant lots adjourning well-kept lawns and gardens. This committee also commended a municipal spraying machine. This idea was endorsed by the president of the Horticultural Society.

The matter of licensing rooming houses arising from a letter from Dr. Margaret Patterson was left in the hands of the convenor of the social reform committee to be dealt with.

For some time the project of establishing a baby clinic in Peterboro has been under discussion. In New Zealand where these clinics were seen in operation, for years the majority is the lowest in the world. Ine one of the provinces of Canada about 10,000 children under one year died from want of proper care. In the winter of 1917-18 the number of children who died in Canada exceeded the number of men killed on the battle fields of France and Flanders.

With these facts before us it cannot be denied that baby clinics are needed in every town and city in Canada.

Through the energy of Dr. Bernie the sum of $300.00 has been collected, a committee of nurses has been secured, a housing committee will find suitable rooms.

The Medical Association has also appointed a committee who will study the latest ideas on the subject and by September it is hoped a flourishing clinic will be in operation.

CITIES REFUSED STREET CONTROL

PRIVATE POWER COMPANIES CAN ERECT POLES WHERE THEY WILL.

Ottawa, May 16. So far as concerns the special committee to consolidate and amend the Railway Act, the fight of Canadian municipalities to regain control of their street against the Toronto & Niagara Power Co.'s claim that it has the power to place poles wherever it wishes without the consent of municipalities, was lost by a vote of 6 to 14.

How They Lined Up

The friends of the public generally, in this particular fight as disclosed by their votes this afternoon, were Mr. H. M. Mowat, Unionist member for Parkdale Mr Frank S Cahill, Liberal member for Pontiac, Hon. T W Crothers, Unionist member for Elgin West; Mr. Duncan Campbell Ross, Liberal member for Middlesex West; Mr. T. M. M. Tweedie, Unionist member for Calgary West, and Capt. T. G. Wallage, Unionist member for West York.

VETERANS OFFICIALLY ASKED TO HOLD NEXT CONVENTION HERE

Mayor Duncan and City Clerk Armstrong Address the Gathering at Windsor—Gratuity Matter Referred to Committee.

Windsor, May 16—A telegram was received by the convention from the Trades and Labor Council of Peterboro inviting next year's convention to that city. The Mayor and City Clerk of Peterboro had previously addressed the convention, issuing an invitation, although delegates from other towns that wanted the convention objected to this.

After a bitter debate, the $2,000 to $1,000 grant, first proposed by the Calgary branch was shelved for a time by referring the original motion to a committee to report on. The motion adopted by the Resolution Committee was that the physical and moral sacrifices of the men who went overseas cannot be estimated and that a committee be between the sacrifices of those who went and those who stayed can be estimated, and that a committee be formed to investigate this difference and report.

Amendments Defeated.

Cheers greeted the announcement that the amendment proposed by Comrade Hossack of Westboro, calling for $2,000 to $1,000 grant had been defeated, and also that the amendment to the amendment, which wanted $200 a year for ten years for men who reached France and $100 for ten years for others, with the provision that the lump sum be given in special cases at 5 per cent. interest and repayable by the Government at $200 a year, had also been rejected.

For the latter scheme Riverdale, Central and Westboro voted with West Toronto delegates splitting their vote. Comrades Burch and Meredith against, Challenger, Rice and Shields for; Earlscourt and Parkdale voted against; Scarboro Riverdale and Central voted for the amendment for the straight money grant, while Parkdale, Earlscourt and West Toronto went against it. A poll had to be taken on the amendments after which the original motion went through by a standing vote.

Liquor Question Not Yet Mooted.

While the liquor question has not yet put in an appearance, and is not looked for by many of the members, there are others who figure that it may come on the floor. It is intimated that if the Resolutions Committee holds it in abeyance and does not introduce it to the meeting, the sponsors of the motion, who are said to be the Walkerville delegates, will assert their right to move it in open meeting. The resolution calls for the convention to declare for light wine and beer in Ontario, and general opinion does not favor the veterans mixing in the fight either for or against. If the motion is put to the convention there is very indication that it will be defeated.

Referendum on Membership.

The convention decided to put the knotty question of membership qualification up to a general referendum, and the branches will be asked to consider the motion put which asked that all volunteers who failed to reach a fighting front be admitted, providing that they could show a good reason why they had failed to see fighting, and the amendments which wanted no more of these members taken until all available members who had fought in France or elsewhere had been gathered in. The referendum, which took the form of an amendment to the amendment, carried by a large majority, with all Toronto branches but Centre voting for it.

Among the resolution adopted was one in favor of Federal insurance for returned men, for the formation of a juvenile branch and another in favor of co-operative stores.

See Ball Game at Detroit

Yesterday afternoon the veterans took a special ferry, provided by the Windsor-Detroit Ferry Company and attended the New York-Detroit ball game at Navin Park as the guests of the Detroit team. The veterans, headed by the Windsor Veterans' Pipe and Brass Band marched though Detroit to the ball grounds. They excited curiosity, but not much applause, the Detroit crowd evidently not grasping who the men were. Crippled delegates filled ten autos provided. The veterans saw Detroit lose 4 to 3.

Cigarette Case Lost At Vimy Returned Here

Gunner W. C. Thornton, a member of the local Post Office staff, on enlisting with the Canadian Expeditionary Force, November 11th 1916, had presented to him by his fellow employees, a substantial metal cigarette case, engraved with his name, from whom and when presented. He lost the gift at Vimy Ridge, where he served with his battery, and to his regret never expected to see it again. To his father's surprise, however, he received from the Post Office this morning his son's lost cigarette case found on the field of battle by an officer who considerately forwarded it here. Inside the case there is now very legibly engraved, "Vimy Ridge." Gunner Thoruton is away from home at present.

SOUTH PORCUPINE BLOCK IS BURNED

HEAVY LOSS ONLY PARTIALLY COVERED BY AMOUNT OF INSURANCE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Cobalt, May 16.—Fire in South Porcupine yesterday afternoon almost wiped out the block bounded by Bruce, Golden and Bloor avenue. The Post Office, Todd's drug store and the mining and timber grant offices were saved. The fire started in Dagenai's rooming house. The insurance on the lost property is $17,000 and the loss is propably several tides that figure.

AUTOISTS FINED.

Two cases of breach of the traffic bylaw by motor car drivers were disposed of in Police Court this morning.

One man, for passing a street car while unloading passengers, paid into court $8 10. Another for turning a street corner contrary to the rules of the bylaw paid a like amount.

NEWSPAPERS AT WINNIPEG ARE PUT OUT OF BUSINESS

Stereotypers and Pressmen Join Strikers This Morning and Tie Up the Plants—Telephone Operators Also Walk Out and News Service is Crippled.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Winnipeg, May 16.—Winnipeg advanced another step towards primitive existence this morning when at 7.30 o'clock the telephone operators in all local exchanges joined in the general strike. Telephonic communication is completely paralyzed. The press service over the wire from the south leased from the Telephone Company by a news gathering association had to be suspended owing to the shutting off of the batteries.

Stereotypers and pressmen decided this morning to join strikers and the three Winnipeg daily papers will consequently be tied up.

Origin of Trouble.

The general strike of union workmen and other employes which was declared yesterday and has to a large extent tied up business is the direct outcome of a vote carried at the meeting of the Trades and Labor Council May 6th by an overwhelming majority. In the words of the secretary of the Trades and Labor Council, it was to help the men already striking of the trades unions and collective bargaining. Two weeks earlier the metal workers and the building trades workers had presented demands for larger wages and these being refused had gone out May 1st. Metal workers then asked the Council to vote on the question of a general strike.

Refuse to Arbitrate.

Senator Robertson Minister of Labor, has wired, in response to a telegram from Mayor Gray, that he does not see any use in coming to Winnipeg in view of the fact that the men have refused to arbitrate.

While the failure of some shops to bargain collectively is the assigned reason for calling the general strike, the unrest over the high cost of living and the operation of the One Big Union spirit, which is strong in the West, have a good deal to do with the trouble. In fact the strike is a sort of experiment with the One Big Union as a weapon to enforce demands. Bolshevist literature including the economic views of Lenin, was distributed among the strikes. There is no doubt that the strikers are ready to take control of industry if the opportunity offers.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

FRIDAY, MAY 16, 1919

POLICE COMMISSION MAKE APPOINTMENT.

THE POLICE COMMISSIONERS have appointed a new constable on the force to fill a vacancy, and have, in a praiseworthy effort to maintain the present high standard of efficiency insisted upon by Chief Thompson, selected an experienced constable whose testimonials are of the best. But in order to do this was it necessary for them to import a man from Hamilton, as the Commission have done in this instance?

There are nearly seven hundred returned soldiers in this city already, with new arrivals almost daily. The majority of these are out of work. So serious has the employment problem become that the members of the G. W. V. A. have appealed to the City Council and to the Board of Trade for assistance, which has been pledged them. The Police Commission may not be a purely civic institution, but it is composed of men who reside in the city, and some of whom are fervid in their professions of appreciation of what the veterans have done for nation and city and who declare upon every public opportunity presented that the best in the way of positions should be theirs when they return.

Right here a chance to give those professions of devotion practical effect has been turned down. It makes no matter whether the new constable is a returned soldier or not. The fact remains that he is an outsider. If he were a veteran, however, it is more than likely that the men who appointed him would parade the fact as justification for his selection.

Surely among seven hundred returned soldiers there could have been found one man at least with the necessary qualifications to walk a constable's beat in Peterborough. The veterans have faced greater dangers than confront the constable, even in the time of riots, which are happily infrequent in this city. They have had the training of military men, they have been subjected to the discipline which is regarded as essential by the heads in police departments. In a word, there seems no reason on earth why the position, really in the gift of the city, although the Board of Police Commissioners plume themselves on the fact that they are a provincial body and for that reason above municipal control, should not be filled by a local returned soldier.

In the appointment of police chiefs in the smaller cities it is customary to go outside for a man, and the wisdom of such a course has seldom been seriously questioned. That is a case in which experience is of first importance. But surely the duties of a constable can be easily acquired, and in a comparatively short time, especially if the selection were made from a body of men who were good enough to wear the King's uniform, a rather higher badge of distinction than even the trim garb of a policeman.

PAINFUL LACK OF INFORMATION.

THE EXAMINER, displaying again that painful lack of information on Federal affairs, says the Dominion Parliament lacks courage in refusing to enforce nation-wide prohibition. It would indeed be a courageous Government that would drive a coach and four through the B. N. A. Act even at the behest of our quibbling contemporary. The liquor question belongs to the individual provinces, which are given full autonomy in this as in other matters. Quebec has just declared itself on the prohibition question, and the rights of the majority must be respected by the Federal powers. That is the law, and our neighbor should pause in its reckless policy of coercion lest it smash the Confederation that was perfected after infinite labor by statesmen now dead and gone. It is idle, too, to cite the dissatisfaction expressed by the Dominion Alliance, the members of which have shown more enthusiasm for the cause than regard for constitutional law.

THE WOBBLING LIBERALS.

THE FARMERS' SUN quotes the speech recently made in Parliament by Mr. McKenzie, when the Liberal leader declared himself a protectionist, and comments as follows:

> Our construction of what Mr. McKenzie said is that he made an unequivocal profession of protectionism. He declared himself not a high but a moderate protectionist, but regarding his declaration with care the measure of his moderation seems to be that protection which may suffice to enable any industry which sets up in Canada to prosper, no matter what the cost may be to the consumers, who buy its products. That is clearly the principle of his support of adequate protection for the making of steel plate and steel ships in his own constituency. We understand now why Mr. McKenzie has never lost an election in Cape Breton. It may be that, as some suggest, he has lost his crown. He attempts, at all events, to lead his party in to the protectionist camp, and in so far as his party follows it will become undistinguishable from the Conservative party and lose the not inconsiderable support which will not move in that direction.
>
> We do not ignore the embarrassment which the liberal party professing free trade principles has long experienced in the old Provinces in which provinces in which protectionism and the exploitation of natural resources in the new provinces have put an undue proportion of the population in the towns and rendered rural opinion year by year more impotent. Nor do we ignore that, more than once before Mr. McKenzie's time, the free trade flag was hauled down to win an election or to hold on, when an election had been won. Blake, at Malvern, speaking more oracularly than Mr. McKenzie was assumed to have hauled down the flag. About that time, the Globe, not as pious as it is now, assured the manufacturers that a very high scale of taxation must be retained and that they had nothing to fear from the Liberals. Laurier having won in 1896 on the school issue, was, as a matter of fact, obliged also to assure the manufacturers who we are sure would have turned him out at the first opportunity, had he held on his free trade professions. They did turn him out, when he attempted tariff reform in 1911. The new Liberalism was another effort to get away from the tariff issue and divide the labor vote with the Tories.
> It is not to be supposed that Mr. McKenzie tripped or spoke without a sense of his responsibility. It is idle to speculate on the political moves behind the scenes which precipitated his statement. He has, however, afforded the farmers a motive to double their effort to make their influence effective in Parliament.

The Sun is not deceived by the free trade professions of a section of the Liberal party, but recognizes that these professions are part of a plan to woo a portion of the electorate.

VETERANS AND LABOR STRIKES.

IN THE GENERAL STRIKE that has been proclaimed in Winnipeg, with 27,000 men already out and more to follow, every effort has been made by the strikers to prevent anything like lawless destruction. Besides this, there are provisions for caring for property generally and for the carrying on of essential occupations, the suspension of which would cause actual suffering. In the task of maintaining the public peace, the members of the G. W. V. A.—and there are six thousand of them—are taking a prominent part.

A band of six thousand men, trained and disciplined as they are and experienced in real fighting, makes a formidable police force in any city. But these veterans, at least ninety per cent. of whom are members of unions themselves, are in no sense strike-breakers, even if they have volunteered for this new service, in which they are aided by the best of those among the strikers who do not wear service buttons.

Public sympathy is really the deciding factor in all labor disputes. The men cannot hope to retain this if members of their party disregard the law and commit acts of violence against either the persons or the property of the employers. But in organizations in which the conditions of membership are easy, it is nothing unusual to find extremists whose actions will tend to bring the movement into popular disfavor.

It is always the lawless element in a strike who find their acts featured in the press. Usually little is said of the efforts of the sane and conservative to preserve the peace and protect life and property. The soap-box orator, blatant in the enunciation of his anarchistic theories, is the man who forces himself into the limelight. It is just the same in the reporting of labor meetings by sensational newsmongers, who emphasise what is said by the fire-eaters, the men whose only argument is the use of force, while the wiser counsel of the cool-headed, even though the latter class be in the minority, is passed over without allusion.

The great majority of the workingmen in Canada are law-abiding, safe and desirable citizens. Their record during the war, the percentage of their membership which they sent into the service, proves this. But the noisy element can to a great extent bring discredit upon the entire body, and one of the highest duties of Organized Labor is to eliminate this dangerous element and purge its own membership, just as the Peterborough veterans, at the provincial convention now in session in Windsor, have suggested in the case of their own organization.

In Peterborough the veterans are a powerful adjunct to the police force. This is a logical assumption of responsibilities on the part of men who have done what they did to restore order in Europe. Preserving the peace at home is of vastly greater moment. They are in no sense strike-breakers, and will interfere with the liberty of no man to do as he pleases so long as he does not run counter to the rights of others. Six thousand law defenders on duty in Winnipeg is the best possible guarantee that city can have for safety in the present crisis. The veterans helped to save Belgium and France from utter effacement, they protected the weak, the aged, the women and children in Europe, and will throttle in its cradle the first sign of anarchy in Canada.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

LOCAL VETERANS fought for their country as a whole and not for Hamilton specially

• • • • •

INDIVIDUALLY the Hamilton police force may be all right, but collectively— well, there is the record.

• • • • •

UNFORTUNATELY, the clean-up season for the City Council is fixed by statute several months in the future.

• • • • •

THE PIG GRUNTS and the cur whines, but the German delegate to the Peace Conference possesses both vocal powers.

• • • • •

BUT BY THIS TIME the Liberals either in Ontario or in the Dominion should be tolerably accustomed to leaders who won't stand without hitching.

• • • • •

"HIS OLD JOB or a better one" for the veteran, even if it is necessary to turn down an applicant from Hamilton for a position on the police force.

• • • • •

ORDERS-IN-COUNCIL, regulating the liquor traffic or otherwise, were tolerated in war time, but the day has returned for the re-establishment of constitutional law.

• • • • •

WHEN WILL the members of the City Council quit their fruitless business of chasing each other around in circles, finding themselves as they invariably do at the starting point again?

• • • • •

ONE QUALIFICATION for the new constable not yet pleaded is his laudable ambition to change his environment and become a resident of a real city with a police force that is up to the mark.

• • • • •

MAY ALL international disputes in the future be settled as sensibly and amicably as the one between the Board of Education and the Chamberlain estate, the parties coming to terms with equal credit, and possibly profit to both.

BEFORE COLUMBUS CAME TO AMERICA

CHINESE SAILORS SAID TO HAVE VISITED COAST OF CONTINENT.

A Chinese Monk, Heui-Sen, is said to have discovered the west coast of America 1,000 years before Christopher Columbus and his mutinous crew sailed from Spain on his perilous mission, according to certain Celestials who have started a heated controversy in the Oriental Empire. The Chinese sailed by the compass in the Fifth Century and made many discoveries then, that give a certain credence to the story. Americans who have listened to the arguments, and investigated the claim, also say they recognize certain portions of the explorer's report which confirms the discovery.

After making the trip Heui-Sen returned home and wrote a report of his discoveries. He stated that the most important country was "Fu-Sang" (apparently Mexico), which got its name because of the number of fu-sang trees grown there. The inhabitants were reported to eat the trees and also the fruit, which was in the form of a pear, but red in color. Thread, fine cloths and brocades were also made from its bark.

"The king of the country is known as the 'chief of the multitudes,'" the port continues. "The nobles of the first category are called 'little tuilu,' and those of the third category 'na-to-oha.' The inhabitants have herds of deer, just as Chinese have herds of cattle. There is no iron in the country, but copper is found there and gold and silver have no value."

This report was made in 499, and other Chinese sailors followed Heui-Sen, and reported their findings between the years 502 and 556. They reached the Aleutian Islands, British Columbia and Alaska.

The Wife's Idea

"I notice that you occasionally send your husband to the grocery store. What's the idea?"

Work at Home

The members of the missionary society had assembled to turn in their money and to relate the difficulty and amusing experience in earning, each, her dollar.

"Sister Lamm, how did you earn your dollar?" asked the chairman.

"I got it from my husband," replied the good sister, tendering her money.

"Oh, but that is not earning it," remonstrated another sister.

"No?" asked Mrs. Lamm, "Then you don't know my husband."

A Legal Point

"My uncle left me only $5,000. Wonder if I could break his will."

"Sure thing. He must have been crazy to leave you anything."

Precocious Child

"We're gonna to have two deserts for dinner," said little Tommy Twobble.

"Who's coming to dinner?" asked little Susie Dadspur.

"Nobody but pa."

"Gee! Hasn't you mother gotten her new spring clothes yet.

A Sympathetic Man

"Don't you sympathise with the people who complain of high prices?"

"I do," answered the food profiteer. "It shall never be said that I was lacking in sympathy. I sympathise with them a great deal, and if I had my way I'd fix things so that I could sympathise with them twice as much."

Two 17-year-old boys were arrested, charged with stealing $100,000 in diamonds from a New York jewelry firm.

CLEANLINESS IS HEALTH

By the use of Gillett's Lye, house cleaning is made a pleasure instead of a drudgery. It softens the water and cleans thoroughly whether the dirt is visible or invisible. Destroys all bacteria and infectious germs, removes obstructions from drain pipes, closets, sinks, etc. Refrigerators are made delightfully fresh and clean by using one teaspoonful of Gillett's Lye dissolved in two gallons of water.

THE FARMER ON THE PRAIRIE

(Lethbridge Herald.)

The farmers are contemplating political action distinct from existing political parties. We presume that their ambitions to have enacted into legislation the policy of the Canadian Council of Agriculture, and they feel that their only hope is through a farmer's party at Ottawa. May we say, without belittling their general knowledge of affairs, that these farmers don't know Ottawa or the rest of the Dominion, or they would not nurse the idea that a farmers' party will get what they want. A united western representation, agreed on a policy of obtaining tariff relief, can be an influence at Ottawa but a class representation demanding the adoption of a certain platform and not agreeable to accepting anything less, would labor at Ottawa for years without getting results.

We agree with the farmers' platform as an objective but we do not ignore the fact that it can only be adopted by degrees. Further, we contend that western representatives at Ottawa today, and the Liberal representatives there in the past, have done much to make the tariff an issue, so that at this moment there is prospect of some relief, with a certainty that there will be further concessions later. If the farmers intend to demand their platform and nothing else they will fail to make headway because it will take many years to convert the east to the entire farmers' platform. A western representation committed unitedly to tariff reduction can make headway, provided it will take what it can obtain by its influence as a united group, and then demand more, but to say "This platform and nothing else" might leave us without tariff relief at all.

Despite criticisms to the contrary, we feel safe in arguing that there is more independence amongst the representatives from Western Canada in the present parliament than at any time in our history. Practically every western member wants tariff reduction and is pressing the Government to grant it. What they will do if the Government fails to meet the demand will be [illegible] when the Budget is under discussion.

At the present time the western farmers have [illegible] in Parliament, Hon. T. A. Crerar, J. A. Maharg, R. C. [illegible], J. F. Reid, A. R. Knox, Levi Thompson and Robert Cruise. All these men are farmers [illegible] they have [illegible], [illegible] other farmer members will learn that in a Parliament with [illegible] western representatives and B. C. representatives not in sympathy with the entire farmers' platform it is impossible to secure the adoption of [illegible] platform even with a solid western representation. They do know, however, that [illegible] western representatives [illegible] Parliament to grant tariff relief, if not in the Parliament, then in the next.

We strongly advocate unity in the western representation, but to say that farmers' candidates elected [illegible] western seats can get the entire farmers' platform put into effect immediately is a delusion. To make any headway at Ottawa, the farmers would have to abandon [illegible] and co-operate with [illegible] ties to obtain tariff relief. Sitting as a group by themselves, committed to their platform and nothing short of it, not prepared to co-operate or compromise, they wouldn't get anywhere. With the platform as an objective and [illegible] and compromise, a western group whether farmers or not, can make many breaks in the protectionist wall.

The farmers today are a greater influence on Western representatives than they imagine. Without exception every western member, whether he was Liberal or Conservative, wants tariff reduction, some to a greater extent than others. They know the opinion in the constituencies that they represent and in nearly every case they voice that opinion. As a united group they have been urging the Government to make tariff changes at this session. If the Government fails to make reasonable reductions then the western farmer will find that the western representatives will assert themselves.

$70 A DAY FOR TERM IN JAIL

CROOKS THINK IT IS WORTH WHILE TO MAKE SACRIFICE.

How would you like to go to jail for $70 a day?

Louis Merriam and Wm. Kiley convicted Liberty Bond thieves at Philadelphia, coolly figured that $26,500 each would be worth while taking an extra year in jail for.

This is the belief of the district attorney and the police. They have every reason to believe that Merriam and Kiley have secretly stolen bonds worth $53,000 and, when free from prison in two years or two and a half, will uncover the loot.

District Attorney Rotan made it plain that Merriam and Kiley have acquired no title to the bonds merely by going to prison. When the prisoners are released they will find that the authorities have not forgotten them. To be found in possession of the bonds means that Merriam and Kiley can be convicted again.

The two received the limit under the law for larceny. Judge Monaghan gave them time to make up their minds whether they would return the stolen bonds. They thought the matter over and decided to keep quiet and take what was coming.

Shun Flatterers Says Cyril Maude

ADVICE FROM CELEBRATED ACTOR WHO WILL BE AT GRAND THURSDAY.

Mr. Cyril Maude, the eminent English actor, who is this season touring America in the new Haddon Chambers comedy, "The Saving Grace," declares that the flatterer is the worst enemy of the young actor—or indeed of the old actor. "Both the young actor and the old one should have wise heads on their shoulders," says Mr. Maude. "Of all the evils they have to fight the most insiduous is flattery. The world is full of flatterers, and there is nothing the flatterer so delights in as doing mischief. The flatterer is everywhere to be found near the theatre and woe betide anyone connected with the stage who is beguiled by him, thinking he is cleverer than he really is; because from that moment he will begin to fail and fail. The young actress who is told that there is a certain note in her voice that is lovely will be always using it until you hate the very sound of her speech. I have seen it again and again. Once a critic wrote of me that the way I use my hands was a study. I was pleased at the time, but there came a night shortly after when I found myself using my hands rather more than usual and I knew I was beginning to come under the influence of the flatterer. If I had continued to believe in his flattery I should have become absurd in my gesticulation. I have seen actors rise to eminence and then fall victims to the fatal disease of flattery. In England we call it, when it manifests its most acute symptoms, a swollen head. And when a man's head is swollen his case is hopeless. Not the actor's severest critics are truer friends than his flatterers. But he has only one true friend, and that is himself. He must develop his own ability by hard work and come to trust in his own judgment."

Geo. Chapa, of Langford, Pa., returned from overseas to find his father and mother and a brother-in-law dead.

AT THE GRAND

In the "Unparadonable Sin," shown at the Grand last night the people of Peterboro had an opportunity of seeing the bestiality and savagery of the Hun during the early days of the war. And it is safe to say that although it is now generally known that the Germans had little or no respect for womankind, this picture drives home to the public their utter savagery.

Blanche Sweet plays the leading role and is up to her usual high mark. The story is of a mother and daughter caught in Belgium at the outbreak of the war and of the terrible sufferings they endured at the hands of the German beasts. A letter written by the daughter to her sister in California brings the latter to Europe in search of her mother and sisters.

She too is subjected to many insults by the Hun soldiery but finally discovers her parent, though the sister had died at the hands of the beasts. In her search she was greatly assisted by her husband who was a member of the commission for the relief of Belgium. He, too, was handled rather brutally at times by the Huns.

After a fierce fight at the German headquarters and an exciting chase the Americans finally escape into Holland after this soon reach America.

The story is by Major Rupert Hughes and appeared in one of the well-known American magazines in serial form a few months ago.

The picture will be repeated today and tomorrow and should be seen to be appreciated.

A British Labor Leader

AT no previous time in British history has Labor played so prominent a part in elections as it is playing just now. Labor did a big "bit" toward winning the war, not only through its contributions to the army itself, but by its gigantic effort in the turning out of munitions. It is only natural that in the demands it is now making for social re-organizations it should have a surer sense of its dues than ever before. There is even a chance that should Mr. Lloyd George and his Coalition Cabinet not measure up to Labor's ideas of post-war reconstruction, they may find in Labor an opponent not lightly to be put off.

Among the "unknown quantities" in the Labor party may be reckoned Mr. Arthur Henderson. Before the war, and during its first two years, Henderson was regarded as a steadying influence among the labor element in the House and in the country. Even an important Tory Journal said of him: "He is the representative of labor in all that is best, in the right and responsible sense of the term."

He was not the aggressive type of labor leader. He had been championed at the outset of his Parliamentary career by so discriminating a man as Lord Morley, and his course had been one of moderation and balance. So much so that he won the important distinction of being the first man not a university graduate to occupy the post of president of the Board of Education.

He was taken into the Asquith Coalition Cabinet as a representative of labor with a feeling that he would marshal the workers behind the Government in concentrating the nation's war effort. It was not till after he had paid a visit to Russia during the turbulent era of the first revolution that he developed "pacifist" tendencies that brought him into sharp conflict with the Government and with the Seamen's Union. Up to that time he had been a firm opponent of compromise or negotiation. He returned from Russia with the idea that the British Labor party should join in the proposed conference at Stockholm in which German Socialists were to participate.

He seemed to have become convinced that the struggle the Socialists were alleged to be making in Germany should be aided and that by this means the war could be most quickly brought to a successful termination. It was highly improbable, he told a meeting in East Ham in March last, that the war could be ended by a decisive Prussian military triumph. It might end by a process of exhaustion, but such a termination would be a disaster of the first magnitude for mankind. He declared himself for peace by conciliation.

His action in telling a British Labor conference that the Russian Government was desirous of having British labor participate in the Stockholm conference, when Lloyd George had just been told by Premier Kerensky that Russia was opposed to the conference, brought a sharp open rebuke from Lloyd George. Henderson, as a member of the British War Cabinet, ought to have known of Kerensky's communication. Lloyd George's reprimand was tantamount to an accusation of bad faith.

Henderson's resignation from the Cabinet was inevitable, his dual position as secretary of the Labor Party and member of the Ministry having already become anomolous.

From this time Henderson was stamped as a pacifist in the eyes of Great Britain. The British Seamen's Union refused to carry him to the Stockholm conference. He tried to cross to France with Camille Huysmans, the Belgian Socialist, last October, but the crew of the ship refused to sail with "pacifists and pro-Germans." Even the cab-driver he hailed at the dock declined to drive him to the station, and he had to carry his luggage himself.

Henderson has represented the Labor interests in Parliament since 1903. He was born in Glasgow in 1863, and served his apprenticeship as an ironmoulder at Robert Stephenson's & Co.'s works at Newcastle. He showed aptitude for speaking and leadership early in his career, and became an official of his trade union. He was for some time a member of the Newcastle City Council and Darlington Borough Council, becoming mayor of the latter municipality in 1903.

Henderson stands for the typical British virtues of thoroughness, steady application and a distaste for violent or revolutionary measures. He is an indefatigable worker, and devoid of pretense or ostentation. He is a total abstainer and a prominent member of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, in which he has been for many years an active lay preacher and a representative at the annual conference.

He was in marked contrast temperamentally with his Russian friend Kerensky and other European Socialists of less phlegmatic constitution at the Labor conference in London last June. Kerensky responded to the uproarious musical welcome accorded him in his own national fashion by abruptly bestowing a resounding kiss upon the astonished Labor leader. Henderson recoiled as if stung, nearly lost his glasses and blushed like a school girl.

"Now, Arthur, be a woman!" chorused his delighted fellow-Britishers, and "Arthur," recovering himself with difficulty, managed to summon a smile in time to save the situation.

The peace treaty ending the Franco-Prussian war of 1870 comprised only ten clauses, or articles.

Honey Found in Tree Tops.

Quantities of honey are found in the African forests by the natives in hollow trees. The honey is generally at the summit of the tree, and the men knock down the tree, and smoke the bees out of their lodging with burning grass. The honey is then quickly collected and taken to camp.

Interesting Experiment.

A distinguished scientist has revived an after-image artificially by means of the following experiment: After remaining in darkness for some minutes he flashed a light onto his hand. He then went to bed in total darkness and slept through the night. Before opening his eyes in the morning he again flashed a light, but this time on his eyes. By this means he revived the after-image of his hand in front of him although he had not seen it since the previous night.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Barometric Violin.

Abram Moses, a violinist of Baltimore, is the possessor of what might be called a barometric violin. Some time after Mr. Moses bought it, he noticed that at certain times it exhaled a strange and subtle fragrance, like an aroma of Oriental incense. Later, he observed that this fragrance was noticeable only when the weather was about to become damp. He obtained the violin in Paris some years ago when he was studying there.

Wise to Conceal Injuries.

If a bee stings you, will you go to the hive and destroy it? Would not a thousand come upon you? If you receive a trifling injury, do not go about proclaiming it, or be anxious to avenge it. Let it drop. It is wisdom to say little respecting the injuries you may have received.—Anon.

Do Your Best.

The man who does not seek each day to do his very level best, no matter what his task, is doing himself an injury and increasing his debt to humanity. Life is a serious business.—From the New Era, Federal Penitentiary, Leavenworth, Kan.

Why It Is a Mistake to Delay Your Purchase Of The NEW EDISON

EDISON RE-CREATIONS

Most everything you buy wears out eventually. An automobile for example—or a suit of clothes. So the longer you delay its purchase the longer you'll have it to enjoy.

Not so with a New Edison. It will outlive you anyway. Every month you delay is just one more month gone from your life—another month in which you might have had your life enriched by music—but didn't.

Under our new plan by which payment can be made so much a month there's no reason why you shouldn't be enjoying your New Edison right now.

The New Edison cost $3,000,000 to perfect. It is the only instrument which successfully meets the test of direct comparison with the living artist's voice or instrument. It will bring into your home the world's best music, sung or played by the world's great artists.

Call to-morrow for a demonstration. "Send it out to the house" will be your verdict.

If you desire it, we will make easy terms of payment.

BRITAIN WON THE WAR

Pershings Says Words Cannot Express His Admiration

General Pershings in a "Britain's Day" message to America cabled:

"Steadfast in adversity, and although wounded with a thousand wounds, Great Britain's hammer blows have never weakened or faltered. But for the tenacity of her people the war would have been lost.

"To those of us who have associated with them and who have fought with their gallant troops, words of praise seem inadequate to express our admiration."

A picturesque feature of "Britain's Day" was a "Victory Sing" in front of the White House in which 60,000 Government employees participated.

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat Less Meat, Also Take Glass of Salts Before Eating Breakfast

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy, the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad. Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING

By Dr. W.A. BRADY

Some Wart Psychology

"I wish you would print a good formula for the removal of warts. I am opposed to the surgical removal of warts, as I once knew a woman who suffered the loss of two fingers from blood poisoning following the removal of warts. N.O.S."

I once knew a man who was elected to the legislature the very day after he had presented his own wife two pounds of chocolates. The best formula I know, the cleanest, safest least painful, most efficient, is the knife and local anasthesia. The only reason why I do not suggest caustics for the purpose is because of the danger of blood poisoning, and, in the second place because they commonly disappoint.

Cheese Easy to Digest

"Is cheese easy to digest?"

Mrs. R. E. L."

As easy as bread, toast, meat, broth or rice, calory for calory. The prejudice against cheese is attributable to the abuse of cheese, a food of very high fuel value, with such substantial things as pie, and after a hearty meal at that.

Where to go for your Health

"I would like to know where you would advise me to go for my health. Do you think California or Florida would be a good place? I had a nervous breakdown last winter. The doctor examined me last week and he said as far as he could see there was nothing wrong with me. G.R."

The best place I can suggest for a man to go who has nothing wrong with him yet suffers some kind of breakdown is to a doctor. California and Florida both have rather lower health rates than most of the northern states. Certainly a man never breaks down from "overwork" or "strain" unless there is something wrong with his health.

CEMETERIES FOR SOLDIER DEAD

PURCHASED BY BRITISH GOVT. —WILL BE PRESERVED FOR ALL TIME.

It will be a measure of consolation to Peterborough's bereaved by loss of loved ones in active service to know that the graves of the British dead in France are to be sympathetically care for.

In this connection the Military Gazette says:

"The terms of the agreement between the French and British Governments 'respecting British war graves in France' which was signed at Paris on November 26, 1918, are now published by the Foreign Office.

"The Imperial War Graves Commission is recognized by the French law as the only official British organization entrusted with the task of preserving the British soldiers' graves in France, and the French Government have purchased the land for the British cemeteries and have presented it for all time to the British authorities. France does not acknowledge any other authority in such matters than the Imperial War Graves Commission, and will not deal with private applications for the purchase of individual graves.

"The agreement provides that isolated graves of British soldiers on the sites of old battlefields may be removed immediately after the cessation of hostilities with a view to concentrating the bodies in military cemeteries. The work is being carried out by the army at present in occupation, but there is nothing in the nature of wholesale exhumation.

"Many applications are being made to the War Office by relatives of those who lost their lives in the war for permission to visit their graves in France. Such applications have to be refused. In some instances there is no transportation to the places where the graves are located and where it exists it is required for military purposes. Hotel or housing accommodation is also hard to be procured. Living is abnormally high. There is any amount of red tape in connection with passports and those who are wise, however must they may desire to visit the last resting places of their dear ones, are advised not to attempt an adventure at present, which can only result in disappointment."

Two Million Yards Ribbon For Medals

A MEDAL FOR EVERY SOLDIER WHO FOUGHT IN GREAT WAR.

The British Government has decided to issue a general war medne to all who served in the great war. A design for the riband has been accepted, and the amount of material required for this decoration will exceed two million yards.

There will be a distinction between the 1914 and the 1915 ribands issued with the Mons Star. The 1914 riband will carry a small silver rosette similar in design to that which marks the repeated D.S.O. with rosette, and will be issued to men who, in 1914, participated in actual fighting, and will not be issued to men who during that period, proceeded no further than a base in France. Also, that a free issue of the riband will be sent to all men qualified as above, whether they are serving or discharged.

TO-DAY'S STORY

When the war began the Hon. Henri S. Beland, M. D., M.P. ex-Postmaster-General of Canada was residing in Belgium with his wife and daughter. When the German invasion began, since he was not a combatant, and since he was engaged in medical service in aiding wounded Belgian soldiers, Dr. Beland naturally anticipated that he would not be molested, and was at first given assurance to this effect by the German Commandant. Shortly afterward, however, he was seized and in spite of all protestations, taken to a German prison in Berlin, where he spent practically three years. He was finally released a few months previous to the signing of the armistice in exchange for Von Beulow, Secretary of the Krupps, who had been under surveillance in England up to the same time.

He has told the story of his capture in "My Three Years in a German Prison." It is a story of heartlessness and a good deal of stupidity as will readily be believed. Dr. Beland's wife fell ill, and died but he was not allowed to visit her.

"Very seldom a day passed without one of the non-commissioned officers submitting this question to the British prisoners: "When shall we have peace." The answer was invariably the same: "We did not know." How could we? However, the question gave the Prussians an excuse for prolonging a conversation, during which we would be told that Germany wished for peace, but that the obstacle was England. On more than one occasion several among us—notably a Belgian named Dumont, who never minced his words, retorted: "But why did you start the war?" On one occasion a non-commissioned officer, to whom the question was directly put, insisted that Germany never wished nor planned the war, neither did she start it.

" 'You are quite right; you are a thousand times right as to the starting it,' cried Dumont, giving expression to his anti German sentiments, 'it was not Germany that started the war. We, the Belgians started it! ! !' "

"The remark was greeted with general laughter, and the non-commissioned officer, in confusion, turned on his heels and left us."

The prisoners had their bit of fun even in the face of Captain Block a typical Prussian ramrod of a prison officer.

"With much difficulty we managed to smuggle into the jail a copy of the London Daily Telegraph twice a week, in spite of the interdiction of all English and French newspapers. Needless to say, the Telegraph was circulated amongst all the British prisoners and after each and every one of us had read it, the operation was crowned as a great joke against Officer Block himself.

"By the aid of the aforesaid key, then, the door of the office would be opened during the breakfast hour while the officer was away, or during the closing hours of the day after he had left the jail, and the forbidden Daily Telegraph placed on his desk."

Of course the officer was furious, but the prisoners who had secured some keys kept up the joke as long as they cared to without being discovered.

"An instance which reveals something a real heart of a Prussian officer is the following," he writes: "We were at the epoch of the catastrophe which fell upon Britain when Lord Kitchener was drowned off the Scottish coast. This news was reported to me, like all other news of a disquieting character, with great eagerness by the visiting officer. Others may be amazed at the lack of tact, to say the least, here shown, as we in the prison were each of us amazed in turn.

"Kitchener has been drowned," announced the officer with glee.

The news drew from me a pained expression of sorrow.

"How regrettable," I cried.

The officer drew himself up to his full height, and his eyes flashed as he retorted, 'Nicht for uns, Nicht for uns." (Not for us. Not for us.)

"Listen," I remarked. "The intention of my remark was to convey to you how regrettable it is that a soldier of the worth of Lord Kitchener, instead of finding a glorious death on the battlefield should have perished in the manner reported."

"Nicht fur uns. Nicht fur uns," the Prussian insisted.

PLENTY HOME-MADE LIQUOR

A well-known lawyer in discussing liquor prosecutions this morning said he was asked yesterday if he wanted any "domestic stuff."

"What," asked the lawyer. "do you mean by 'domestic stuff'."

"The home-made," replied his interrogator; "there's plenty of it going."

"Hold-up or wreck?" queried passenger, as a Michigan train came to a sudden halt. "No. just a stork visiting the Pullman ahead," said the brakesman.

Are you Looking For

a laxative which, no matter how long you use it, you do not have to increase the dose, that will right your stomach trouble whether due to dyspepsia, indigestion or acidity; that will restore your liver to a natural healthy action and at the same time purify your blood, then just try

Gallagher's Blood Purifier

And why will it do all this? Listen:

SCIENTIST HAVE LEARNED FROM THE GREAT WAR

that there are certain ingredients found only in the [illegible] vegetable world which are necessary to keep the body in continuous good health, and without this vegetable diet sooner or later, the system becomes deranged; the organs refuse to do their work properly and headaches, stomach trouble, liver trouble follows. Now, ingredients of these kinds are found in excess in certain vegetations and plants of this type are called medicinal herbs. These have been scientifically selected, combined and compounded in "Gallagher's Blood Purifier" to put into the blood the necessary salts to cause the stomach, bowels and liver to act in a natural healthy manner, thus removing the cause and effecting a cure in a natural way.

Unlike Mineral Drugs it is Digested and Assimilated by the Digestive System

just as food is, and this is why it may be taken for years without losing its effects.

Laxatives composed of Mineral Drugs merely irritate the alimentary canal

thus causing the stomach and bowels to set to work to violently expel them as quickly as possible. That of course carries with it the waste matter, which is preferable to leaving it there, but each time this happens the irritation becomes less and less until sooner or later the dose has to be increased or the medicine changed. Do you not believe with us that herbal remedis are safe, natural and sure and do not leave sediments in the system to clog it, but is nature's way to heal and cure.

For those of sedentary habits whose liver and bowels are prone to inactivity, this laxative above all others will incite them to natural action and will leave the impression that something helpful to the whole system has been taken. Families in this county have used it for over thirty years and it still remains a first favorite. Put up in large bottles for 50 cents.

Other Herbal Remedies put up by this firm and equally good in their own way are:—"Life Drops," a liniment for internal or external use; "Golden Drops," the greatest healing agent known to science. "Kidney Cure," a safe and sure remedy for any kidney trouble. "Gallagher's Vermifugue," for children or adults. "Cough Syrup," purely vegetable and contains no opiate.

All these remedies are put up in pale blue cartons and labels. Watch for them. A list of Dealers where these medicine may be had will be given in next weeks issue.

Although these patents have been used as household remedies in East Peterborough County for forty years, they are now, for the first time being advertised and put on the general market. Read the story of the origin of them, found in a wrapper around each bottle.

FARM LOANS for SOLDIERS

The Soldier Settlement Act

Purpose

To assist ex service men who desire to make farming their permanent occupation, and who, it is considered, are qualified to make a success of the farming business.

Procedure

The returned soldier who seriously intends to adopt farming as his life work, and desires financial assistance to purchase land, live stock, and equipment, may receive full information and instructions how to proceed from the representative of the Soldier Settlement Board in the district in which he resides.

Financial Assistance Available

Loans may be granted qualified settlers, according to their needs, on the following basis—

(1) Up to $4,500 on the purchase of land for agricultural purposes or the discharge of encumbrances;

(2) Up to $2,000 on the purchase of live stock, implements, and other equipment;

(3) Up to $1,000 on the erection of buildings.

Interest at the rate of five per cent. will be charged.

Who Are "Qualified"

The qualifications of all applicants are investigated by an Agricultural Qualification Committee, composed of men of superior standing, who understand the farming business. All applicants are required to appear in person before the Committee in their district.

Military Service.—Any person who served with an honourable record:

(a) In the Canadian, Imperial, or British Colonial forces in an actual theatre of war, or (except in [illegible] Bermuda) outside of the country in which he enlisted;

(b) In the forces of any of His Majesty's Allies in an actual theatre of war, if he was a British subject resident in Canada before the war;

(c) In the C.E.F. in Canada only, if he is in receipt of a pension for disability occasioned by such service.

These benefits are also granted to widows of such men.

Other Qualifications.—After an applicant's eligibility, from the standpoint of military service, is determined, the Committee will investigate his physical condition, general fitness, and agricultural experience. An applicant must satisfy the Committee that he is aware of the individual responsibility resting upon those who would engage in farming successfully, and that he has the required energy to carry on farming in a successful manner. A Qualification Certificate is issued to qualified applicants. Agricultural training is available for men who fail to receive a Qualification Certificate only through lack of sufficient practical farming experience.

All Qualified Men Assisted

The applicant, after securing a Qualification Certificate, may then apply to the Loan Advisory Committee for financial assistance. Should he desire to purchase land he may indicate the particular parcel of land which he desires to acquire. The Committee will appraise the land with regard to its agricultural possibilities, and if it is satisfactory and its value is in keeping with the soldier's ability to comply with the financial requirements of the Act, the land may be secured.

Equipment

The Loan Advisory Committee also determines the amount of loan to be granted to the soldier settler for the purchase of live stock and implements, and the erection of necessary buildings in keeping with the settler's absolute need. The Soldier Settlement Board has made arrangements to secure these needs for the settler at specially low prices.

Supervision

The Soldier Settlement Board has a staff of agricultural advisers, whose duties are to promote the prosperity of the soldier settler by timely advice and assistance. It is also enlisting the co-operation of experienced and successful farmers, located near at hand, who will direct and assist the settler to make a success of his undertaking.

Special Transportation Rates

The Railway Companies of Canada have offered special rates to soldier settlers who travel for any of the following purposes:

(a) First trip to appear before Qualification Committee, to work with farmer, to attend an agricultural school or to look for land;

(b) To return to his home for the purpose of transporting his family or goods to his farm.

The rate will be allowed on the production of a certificate issued by the Soldier Settlement Board.

PERMANENT UNION PARTY IS PLANNED

POLITICAL POT IS COMMENCING TO SIZZLE AGAIN AT OTTAWA.

Ottawa, May 16.—The political pot again commencing to sizzle and bubble. The return of Sir Robert Borden and Hon. Arthur Sifton will see developments in the Unionist party, while the Opposition are as busy as beavers in an effort to effect a reconciliation and reunion of the shattered Liberal party. Steps toward the formation of a permanent union party, it is expected, will be taken shortly after the return of the Prime Minister. This has been urged in every caucus since Parliament was called, but it was felt that it was impossible to make any move until Sir Robert the founder of Union had returned to Canada.

The rump leaders are anxious to secure a united party, although how they will be able to formulate a platform upon which conscriptionists and anti-conscriptionists, Government and anti-Government ownership advocates and free traders and protectionists can [illegible] together is a mystery to Ottawa.

The Western Liberals will undoubtedly attend the convention, but the prediction is freely made [illegible] will be compelled to walk out, and will form their own western wing with the farmers' platform as the [illegible]. However, in the meantime, no effort is being spared to secure a real re-union. D. D. McKenzie, Opposition leader has issued an invitation to all provincial Premiers and Opposition leaders to attend a gathering on Saturday. William Proudfoot has wired he will attend. Hartley Dewart, who [illegible] close to the Opposition leaders in the House, has been here all week assisting in the plans for conciliation and will also attend.

Sir Lomer Gouin will represent Quebec. New Brunswick and Nova Scotia will both be represented at the gathering, although not by their Premiers. 48-HOUR WEEK IS SET FOR WOMEN

ILLINOIS LEGISLATURE PASSES IMPORTANT LABOR MEASURE REGULATING HOURS.

Springfield, Ill., May 16.—By action of the senate the woman's eight hour day bill was transformed to a forty-eight hour week measure. Senator Austin was successful in getting an amendment adopted to allow a limit of nine hours' work in a single day, with the limitation of forty-eight hours' work in a week. The bill was otherwise weakened before it was sent to third reading.

Department stores and all other mercantile establishments were exempted from the provisions of the bill and the storekeeper may keep open ten hours if he desires. The canning factories also got out from under the proposed law. The telephone company got its amendment which eliminated presence on the premises to count as part of the hours of employment while the employe may be resting in the lounging rooms.

A "sinker" amendment presented by Senator Wright frightened supporters of the bill. It sought to put domestics under the measure. The Wright amendment was tabled by a vote of 18 to 27. Wright also wanted to exempt women 50 years old or over

WILL BD. OF WORKS DEADLOCK ON BRIDGE TENDERS TO-NIGHT?

(Paterfamilias.)

The Board of Works on Monday night declared for a narrow high-level bridge and decided to make their choice of the three lump sum tenders to hand tonight. The Board of Works is composed of the whole Council and their action tonight should be conclusive. At least enough time has been devoted to this matter without any changing of mind being looked for in the Council when the members of this Board recommend to themselves in Council the adoption of their own report. If all the members of the Board are present tonight, and they always have been on this vexed bridge problem, one may reasonably assume that any decision reached will be ratified in Council. There no longer exists occasion for cold feet. However, there seems grave danger of a deadlock arising tonight, as indications point to one alderman having, for reasons not quite clear, switched over to the minority four in favor of one tenderer. Each alderman has a right to his own opinion, but the public expect this bridge contract awarded tonight and should an unbreakable deadlock occur now the whole Council will be engulfed in a warve of public censure.

At last the aldermen have on the table lump sum tenders within the funds at their disposal. They have also a cost-plus guaranteed sum tender, which, from assurances given by tenderers of established reputation as men of honor and business integrity, promises the cost of the bridge being kept down to a figure that will not cause the city any embarrassment, and it is up to the people's representatives to show no favor, bury the hatchet of disagreement and accept the best proposition. In reaching a decision, experience ability to perform, and reputation should have as much, if not more weight, than dollars and cents for the cheapest is not necessarily the wisest choice in such a proposition as the high-level bridge.

This is not time, with the seasons waiting for no man, to play battledore and shuttlecock with a permanent improvement voted by the people four years ago, endorsed by the Government to the tune of $50,000, and pledged to an important industry. This is no time for a deadlock among the aldermen on a question already responsible for so many midnight and after midnight sessions which should have been productive of concrete action. Either let them place the work under contract now or admit their defeat as "bridge builders."

It is to be hoped that this Friday evening, May 17th, 1949, our aldermanic board will, in a business-like manner, weigh the merits and demerits of the tenders without prejudice or favor, and even give way to each other's leanings if necessary in order to reach an agreement which will react in the best interests of the city as a whole, assure an early start in re-bridging the Otonabee, and in doing so provide work at a time when employment is badly needed.

OPENING OF CITY LEAGUE

RIVERSIDE PARK

2 P.M. G.W.V.A. vs. Orientals | 4 P.M. DeLaval vs. Mat.-Black.

Saturday, May 17, 2 P.M.

G.W.V.A. Band in Attendance ADMISSION 25c Parade Central Park 1.30

CITY LEAGUE SEASON OPENS WITH BIG PARADE TOMORROW

Play Will Be Called at 2 p. m. and Double Header is the Program With Close Contests Expected.

The Oriental baseball team held a successful practice at Riverside Park last night and the players who will appear in the game tomorrow against the Veteran's team when the season opens at 2 p.m., were selected by Manager Solomon. The battery will be Kirn. McNeely, Head and Soden. The other players their positions to be assigned later, are Cherrett. Cullins, Murray, Kennally. Phelan, Neary. Heenan and McCarney. This is an aggregation that should be able to face any other team with bright chances of success.

The Veterans will practice tonight at Riverside Park at 6.30 and all players anxious to get a place on the team are asked to attend. Final choice of those who will appear in tomorrow's game will be made after the test tonight and the Veterans are certain to have one of the best teams in the City League.

The De Lavals and the Matthews-Blackwell team will stage the second feature of the opening program tomorrow at 4 o'clock and an excellent opportunity will be afforded the local fans to witness a double header at the price of the admission. The gate fee is 25 cents with an extra charge for the grandstand. Mayor Duncan will officially open the ceremonies.

There will be a parade before the game, the procession to be headed by the G.W.V.A. band, the members of which are requested to meet in civilian attire, at Central Park, the starting point. If the weather is at all favorable, there is no doubt as to the attendance, which last season was always satisfactory.

The grade of baseball put up by the teams in the City League entitles them to the support of the public. Peterborough will be represented in the Central Ontario League again this year and beyond all question will figure in the finals of City Leagues just as it did last year when the locals made such a creditable showing against the famous Hillcrests of Toronto.

DERBY DAY RECALLS OLD TIMES ON THE RACE TRACK

OldTimers at Race Track Re-union Hear Story of the Two Famous Charley Walters.

Chicago, May 16.—Derby day at Louisville brought hundreds of old timers together. In fact it was a reunio naccording to a veteran Chicago sportsman. Every corner you came to, he says, you would run into horsemen who would greet you: "Glad to see you; well, well, it looks like the god old days at Washington park." Many a funny story of bygone days was recalled, particularly one good story that was on Charley Walters, "our own Charley," who is at present associated with Charley Stephenson ("Big tSeve") in the cigar business with several stands in the loop.

The two are held in high esteem by thousands of sportsmen throughout the United States and Canada and seldom a big event comes off that they are not at the ringside or in the paddock when the saddling bell rings. Well, on Saturday Chicago's Charley Walters was at Louisville and in the paddock discussing racing generally, when who should walk up but Charley Walters of Harrodsburg, Ky., famous as a trainer in the good old days.

The two Charleys were certainly glad to see each other as they had not seen each other in several years. They look as much alike as a banna and an orange, although their names and tastes run alike.

Story of Old Harlem.

At the last meeting run at the old Harlem track the Harrodsburg Charley Walters had a horse entered in the usual Saturday handicap, 1:1-16 miles for 3 year olds and up. It was Dr. Stephens, a black colt and some mud runner. The track was heavy and holding and the field was large with a number of horses above the average entered. Dr. Stephens was not given much of a chance by the handicappers but always had a following especially in the bad going.

In those days a special train always left the track immediately after the fifth race, and Charley Walters from Chicago was waiting on the bleachers back of the betting ring to see the fifth race and grab the "rattler" home. The impression gained was those who went home early were either broke or badly bent, and Charley said there was no secret — he was broke.

Well, along came a nice genteel person and addressing the Chicago Walters, who never owned a horse, said "Howdy, how is your horse today?" Walters answered, "Never better."

Dr. Stephens Wins Handily.

The horses went to the post, and among them were several bad actors, and there was quite a little delay, but they finally got away to a good sendoff and Dr. Stephens picked up his field one after another and came through the stretch leading and won handily by three lengths. The horse was backed from twenty to sixteen to one.

Well, our Charley was bemoaning his financial condition, when along came the genteel stranger and exclaimed, "Mr. Walters, your horse ran a remarkable race," and in shaking his hand deposited three $100 bills in his hand. The genial Charley was too much surprised to say a word and never had the opportunity of seeing the gentleman afterwards to explain just which Charley Walters he was.

Nestegg for Fortune.

The donation, or whatever you might call it, was the nest egg that started a big success and the large farm at Fennville, Mich., stocked with the best that can be bought, in the way of hogs, sheep, cattle and horses, is a certificate that the money went in the right direction.

An affiliation with the Gates-Drake combination at Washington was the climax, and Walters owes it all to the genteel stranger whom he saw but twice but whose name he never knew. He hopes some day to run across him. "That," says Charley, "is why I am at Churchill Downs today but, by the way, I want to tell you in confidence that I now own some horseflesh. I have a colt at the Fennville farm by the name of Dr. Stephens. Come and see me some time."

NEW TRAINING FOR GROWN-UPS

HON. DR. CODY EMPHASIZES IMPORTANCE OF VOCATIONAL TRAINING.

Chatham, May 16—The importance of education along vocational lines for boys and girls during the adolescent age of fourteen to eighteen was emphasized by Hon. Dr. Cody, Minister of Education, at a meetng of the two Canadan Clubs here. He also emphasized the necessalty of discipline and guidance during these years, and declared that the future of Canada depended upon the education given the rising generation. Referring to the situation in the rural districts he said that he believed the improvement of highways and the increased use of electricity on farms would do much to stay th emigration to the city, and he also emphasized the consolidated school, the community hall and the school section library as other means of making rural life more attractive.

He urged that teachers realize the importance of the duty facing them and that the public realize the value of the work being done by the teachers, and pay accordingly, and in addition, he declared that the teachers should not bexpected to do their own work and a large portion of the work which should be done in the churches and in the homes.

An inspection of the educational institutions of the city brought words of favorable comment from the Minister, who in his first official visit here, created a most favorable impression.

Puritanic Names.

Faint-not, God-reward, Sorth, Meet Repentance, Kill-sin, Be faithful, Mot fruit, Seek-wisdom, Accepted, Return, Hope-for, Weep-not; Fly-debate, an Stand-fast-on-high! Yes, these wer all perfectly good front names in Mayflower times. They represent some of the flower of a Puritan jury. But think what an awful time the wive and sweethearts of these gentlemen must have had finding nick-names fo them!

Well-Preserved Stakes.

Some of the piles in use in Amsterdam are three to four hundred years old. That part which is not in the ground in salt water is often bored by a pile worm near the surface, but is preserved by driving in nails with very large heads, so as to give the pile an iron coating. This coating is then transformed by the water into a layer of rust, which protects the wood from the pile worm. This process must be repeated every fifteen years.

To Save Pencils.

A great saving of lead pencils may be effected by using metallic pencil holders which can be bought at the stationer's for 10 or 15 cents. In this way you will get the use of almost the entire length of the pencil. Ordinarily about one-third of the pencil goes to waste. An ordinary stenographer or clerk will by this plan save about 30 pencils a year.--Thrift Magazine.

Goethe Memorial at Weimar.

The genius of Goethe and Schiller characterize Weimar in many forms of civic beauty. Goethe, some years before his death, laid out a large public park in the form of a garden and without an enclosure of any kind. There a quaint relic of its originator remains in the stone altar round which a serpent climbs to eat the votive bread. Upon the altar is an inscription to the "genius hujas loci."

Lucky Youth.

A boy was up before an English magistrate for stealing gooseberries. The clerk was absent, so the magistrate had to look in an alphabetical law book to see what he ought to do. Presently he turned to the boy and said: "My lad, it's lucky for you it's gooseberries, and not a goose. For a goose it's a month without the option, but—I can't find any reference to gooseberries. You are discharged."

WAY THEY HAVE OVER IN ORILLIA

NOVEL METHOD OF THAT TOWN TO SETTLE LABOR DISPUTE.

Orillia, May 14.—A novel method of settling a labor strike has been adopted in Orillia, the Town Council undertaking to submit a bylaw to the people asking the authorities to pay workmen on road construction a bonus of 2 1-2 cents per hour over and above the wages paid by the contractors.

On May 1 the laborers on storm sewers and road construction who were receiving 40 cents per hour with a nine hour day, struck for 50 cents per hour with an 8-hour day. They have been idle ever since, but some days ago conceded the 9-hour day if 45 cents was paid.

The paving contractors claimed that they figure on 35 cents per hour, the minimum set by the Council at the time tenders were asked, and declined to pay more than 40 cents.

PETERBORO C. I. CADETS MEASURE UP TO THE BEST

Results of Annual Inspection Yesterday—New Uniforms Promised—Increased Expenditure on Corps

The Peterborough Collegiate Institute Cadet Battalion was inspected by Col. Gillespie on the Central [illegible] yesterday afternoon.

The boys made an exceedingly creditable showing and won from the inspecting officer warm words of commendation. Col. Gillespie in addressing the corps complimented them on their military bearing and drill exercises, and said they would measure up to the best cadet battalion in this district. He assured them that they would shortly receive overseas khaki uniforms, and that now hostilities have ceased the Department of Militia intends devoting more funds to school cadet purposes than was possible during the past four years of war.

The inspection as a whole reflected considerable not only on the cadets themselves but also on Capt. Jamieson their indefatigable instructor and Peterborough city itself.

ONE AUTOMOBILE FOR 18 PERSONS

THAT IS THE RECORD IN THE UNITED STATES TODAY.

[illegible] per cent of all motor [illegible] the world are owned in the United States, where there is one automobile for every eighteen inhabitants, as against one automobile for every 267,207 Chinese. The United States, always in a hurry to go somewhere to do something, is essentially an automotive nation. It is estimated that on the first of this year the value of motor driven vehicles was five and one-half billion dollars; that last year owner paid license fees amounting to $14,730,152 and that Federal taxes on sales for 1918 were $[illegible],678.

There are [illegible] states with [illegible] automobiles each and the production of these vehicles for this year is expected to reach the two million mark. Ninety [illegible] per cent of all the automobiles in this country are of American make. The United States is by far the largest user of automobiles. The nearest competitor is Canada, with one automobile for every twenty five of population. Then come Australia with one in 100, [illegible] 102, Italy 1 in [illegible] for every 2,381. Incidentally there are 450,000 motor trucks in use in this country.

The automobile has come to stay. Having passed the experimental stage and passed into the useful one, it seems destined to survive as the [illegible] means of local transportation.

Lack of Training.

Katherine's parents are trying to teach her politeness, although she is only four years old. As a result she watches opportunities to use "Scuse me" and "Please." The other day she watched mother as she rocked her year-old brother. Finally little brother hiccoughed. Katherine waited expectantly but in vain. Finally she could stand it no longer. "Mudder," she said, indignantly, "Bub ought to be sense enough to say "Scuse me'."

Pilgrims' Hours of Relaxation.

Sober, rather than dour, the Pilgrims knew the rudiments of social relaxation. The upper ranks or gentlemen delighted in evenings of conversation on suitable themes, enlivened with moderate portions of wine, beer or ale, and one reason why they did not indulge this taste oftener was the expensiveness of candles and the long hours of work.

Rebuffed.

"Dat's a hard woman in dat house," said the ragged wayfarer. "Did she threaten to sic de dog on youse?" asked his comrade. "Naw, but when I said I'd seen better days an' a lump came in my throat because I had to beg for a bite to eat, she told me to swaller de lump an' maybe I wouldn't be so hungry."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

LOWER CALIFORNIA.

Rich Land May Be Annexed by the United States.

While the talk of self determination goes on at the Peace Conference, there is one project of Imperial aggrandizement making headway we seldom hear about. The United States may at any moment annex a portion of Mexico. The proposition to extend their territory by the acquisition of Lower California—possibly in settlement of claims for damages against Mexico, with a money consideration thrown in by the United States—is attractive for several reasons.

One of these is purely strategic—particularly as regards Magdalena Bay (on the west coast), where an enemy might conceivably establish a naval base, and which the Americans would like to occupy and perhaps fortify ourselves.

Another has to do with the delta of the Colorado river, which is a vast area of immense agricultural possibilities. At present a desert (barring some beginnings of irrigation), it could be made one of the most productive regions in the world by the simple expedient of storing the waters of the Colorado in reservoirs far to the north and distributing them over the delta through systems of canals.

One of the greatest fruit-growing districts on the earth is the Imperial Valley of California, which was by these means reclaimed from the desert. It was formerly part of the bottom of the Gulf of California — the old beach lines being still plainly distinguishable along the flanks of the [illegible].

The Imperial Valley extends southward into Lower California and all of it that is in Mexican territory is susceptible of the same sort of development. Indeed, the whole delta of the great river, which has been called the American Nile, is a veritable Land of Promise.

The Mexicans have not been able to handle the problem. The Americans can, and are anxious to do so. The region in question is adapted for the production of two or three crops per annum of sugar cane, citrus fruits and the valuable long-staple Egyptian cotton.

The Colorado rivers brings down vast quantities of silt — enough annually to cover eighty square miles to a depth of one foot—and thus one may realize how rapidly in the course of centuries the delta has been built out, the northern extension of the gulf retreating correspondingly.

The gulf at the present time is 739 miles long and 190 miles in greatest width — a really huge arm of the ocean. Toward its southern end are found valuable beds of pearl oysters; it has also turtle fisheries.

The peninsula called Lower California is traversed from north to south by a chain of barren mountains covering most of its surface area, and which is a continuation of the Sierra Nevada. Its shores are arid wastes. But there are fertile valleys, naturally watered, which are veritable gardens.

On the west coast, near Magdalena Bay, an American citizen (who dwells in San Diego) owns a "concession" 300 miles long and three miles wide which he farms, so to speak, for the production of a lichen that is valuable for making dyes. It is gathered by Indians whom he employs.

To round out the proposed annexation of territory from Mexica, it is urged that part of the Mexican State of Sonora (which borders on the gulf) shall be included. It is a typical desert, with possibilities, and is inhabited by Papago Indians, who may be called the great desert people of America. No other people that we know elect to dwell in a bare desert. They are peaceable and fairly civilized.

The peninsula of Lower California has important mineral wealth—particularly copper. On an island in the gulf called Tiburon, live the most primitive savages in North America. They are the Seri Indians, professed cannibals, whose huts are of stones roofed with huge turtle shells, and whose sole garment, for both men and women, is usually a short skirt of pelican skin—the island being a resort for pelicans.

First Transatlantic Steamship.

The first steamship that succeeded in crossing the Atlantic Ocean was the Savannah, a vessel of about 350 tons burden, measuring 100 feet in length. She was built in New York city by Francis Pickett in 1818, and was a full-rigged ship, with side paddle wheels that could be unshipped and taken on deck in stormy weather. Under command of Captain Stevens Rogers, this vessel sailed from Savannah on May 20, 1819; but did not venture on the high seas until the 25th of the month. She reached Liverpool on June 20, after an ocean voyage of 26 days, during sixteen of which she used her paddles. Off Cape Clear she was mistaken for a ship on fire and was pursued by the British cutter Kite. The Savannah afterward visited St. Petersburg, Copenhagen, Stockholm and other foreign ports. Captain Rogers, having failed to dispose of his vessel to the King of Sweden, started for home, and reached Savannah on November 30, 1819. The engines and boilers were afterward removed and the ship was used as a sailing packet between New York and Savannah. She was finally wrecked off the south coast of Long [illegible].

Wood as Fuel.

Experiments on wood as part substitute for coal in gas making have been carried out in France. The wood [illegible] pine in the form of [illegible] cut from the middle of the [illegible]. The charge of the wood was [illegible] half the weight of that of coal, [illegible] carbonization occupied half the [illegible] time. When running one retort with wood to every two with [illegible] no appreciable difference in the [illegible] power of the gas was noted. Would Be a Nuisance.

Chairs so mounted that they can be raised and lowered two feet or more by the occupants, for use in motion picture and other theaters, are shown in Popular Mechanics Magazine. The advantage of these seats is that they lift the users high enough to give them a view of the stage unobstructed by persons passing to and fro in front of them—a frequent occurrence at the "movies."

Languages at Conference.

French has the preference at the Peace Conference, but each delegate is free to speak in his own language. There are expert interpreters to quickly turn the other languages into French, or translate [illegible] for the benefit of delegates who do not understand.

The inhabitants of Mesopotamia are not Arabs, but descend from the old Babylonians and Assyrians. Before they were conquered by Arabs the natives of the Tigris and Euphrates valleys spoke Syriac, a dialect of the Assyrian language.

EVERYBODY HELP

Of course we couldn't all go overseas, but those of us who didn't go can show our appreciation of those who did by helping them along in this campaign for funds for their new home. Peterborough may well be proud of the way in which her men responded to the nation's call and we stay-at-homes should help and encourage those of our soldiers who have been fortunate enough to return.

This new home on Murray Street is a memorial to those who fought and fell, as well as being a gathering place for returned men. It is a place where they can gather of an evening and fight their battles over again in comfort. It should have the wholehearted support of every resident in the city and no doubt it will.

It is now up to all of us to give to the limit that the boys may furnish their clubhouse as comfortably as possible. $15,000.00 is the sum asked from the citizens of Peterborough and there isn't the slightest doubt but that his objective will be reached as easily as every objective was reached in France by the brave lads for whose benefit it is being raised.

The generosity and appreciation of the Peterborough Public is relied upon in this as in all other Patriotic Campaigns conducted in Peterborough, to put this Campaign Over the Top without a doubt.

SHORTER HOURS IN STORES

Store clerks are likely to be given an eight-hour day with the exception of Saturday when they will work till nine p.m. The Retail Merchants' Association is considering a proposal to have all stores open at eight a.m. and close at five p.m. five days in the week all the year round.

TRY TO GET COAL.

London Will Make Another Effort to Secure a Supply.

London, Ont., May 16.—Chairman Philip Pocock of the public utilities commission, which operates London's municipal coal yard, announced that an effort will be made to secure a supply of the anthracite coal that St. Thomas is vending to her citizens at $10.25 a ton. During the war it was virtually impossible to buy hard coal as a municipal yard, and as a result operations had been suspended when the announcemnt from St. Thomas revived interest. Retail dealers are selling coal here at $12 a ton.

DRY MONTREAL IS STILL VERY WET

HARD STUFF IS SOLD OPENLY AT OLD-TIME PRICES.

Montreal, May 16.—It is fortunate for the peace of mind of the Rev. Ben Spence that he does not live in Montreal for most of the bars there are still selling hard liquors quite openly. The proprietors of bars do not seem to exhibit any scruples in the matter, and so long as one is an old customer he may imbibe his Dewar's Special, G. & W., or even a John Collins, the prohibition law notwithstanding. The habit is rapidly spreading and threatens to engulf the popularity of prohibition beer. It is not necessary to have any extra loose change about you to obtain the strong and good stuff, for prices have not risen since the referendum.

The Montreal police are taking no interest in the matter and the game goes merrily on. The act, they say, provided for a force of special policemen to enforce the measure. Therefore it is none of their business to interfere.

Happy Montreal!

DUTY IS FORTY-TWO PER CENT ON PRINTED MATTER FROM U. S.

Howard M. Mathews Has Run in With the Customs House Officials and Refuses to Come Across.

H. M. Matthews, a delegate from the Printers' Union to the Trades and Labor Council, wrote Secretary Morrison of the American Federation of Labor at Washington for placards which show the union label of union labor organizations, these to be distributed in the city free of cost. Twenty-five such placards were sent through the Customs House. The collector held that they are dutiable when Mr. Matthews called for them today. The latter mentioned that they cost nothing, that they were worth nothing to him but the collector set a value upon them of 50 cents and set the duty at 21 cents, or 52 per cent. Mr. Matthews refused to come across and the placards are still in transit.

Some weeks ago the Typographical Union received from the International headquarters copies of the constitution and bylaws of the International Union for free distribution among local printers. These also come through the Customs House and were held for duty by the collector. Secretary Bartlett refused to settle and finally received the package free of charge. Mr. Bartlett has been apointed to setttle with the officials at the Customs House the case now in dispute.

DAME FASHION WINS LAW SUIT

IMPOSSIBLE FOR WOMAN IN A HOBBLE SKIRT TO KICK MAN

New York, May 16.—William Travers Jerome, former District Attorney of New York, was bested in the Tombs Court by two hobble-skirts. Jerome represented Joseph Goldmunz, jeweller, 87 Nassau St., who charged Jennie and Minnie Berger, sisters, 63 West 110th street, with assault. In a quarrel over some gems, an accounting for which was demanded by the defendants, witnesses maintained that the young women called the jeweller—who is administrator of their father's estate—a thief and a smuggler, and repeatedly kicked him. "They kicked me and kicked me," wailed Goldmunz.

The sisters did not deem oral evidence necessary for their defence. They were modishly attired and smiling. They merely rose, shuffled forward a few paces, and Jennie, pointing to the hobbled ankles of Minnie and herself, exclaimed: "We kick him? Impossible!"

Magistrate Douras took a deliberate survey of the tight skirts and shook his head. "The court agrees," he observed. "Impossible!"

BENEFIT FOR THE LABORERS

ENTERTAINMENT PLANNED IN VICTORIA HALL ONE WEEK FROM TUESDAY.

The city and other laborers who are on strike for better working conditions receive no strike benefit while they are idle. The molders, on the other hand, are in receipt of a weekly income during the vacation that has been forced upon them by the failure of the employers and laborers to come to terms. Under the auspices of the Trades and Labor Council a benefit entertainment has been arranged on behalf of the laborers, to be held in Victoria Hall one week from Tuesday night. Local talent will furnish the program, and the excellent entertainment put on at the Lyceum the other night by the Dixie Minstrels will be repeated.

Labor in Hamilton.

At Hamilton, the laborers on the Kenilworth avenue sewer again went on strike because the Board of Control had not favorably recommended to the City Council on their demand for an eight-hour day with nine hours' pay. The men marched to the city hall, where the controllers were sitting to consider this matter, and their spokesman stated that the men not only wanted the eight-hour day and more pay, but wanted it to date from May 1 and be paid for the time they were off on strike.

Demand Granted.

The controllers again tackled the question and decided to grant the men an eight-hour day with nine hours' pay, starting June 1. A special meeting of the Council will be held tonight to ratify this. The increase is to aply to all outside men, and not merely the men of the Civic Employes' Union who went on strike.

MAKING WAR ON DOPE REMEDIES

DOCTORS IN PARLIAMENT DENOUNCE ALL MEDICINES THAT CONTAIN OPIUM.

Ottawa, May 16.—The "dope fiend" has no friends in Parliament. The law makers now propose to rob him of the drugs he uses to put a "kick" in the two and half per cent beer. Nor is the "snow-eater" to have any more cocaine, or the "pin pusher" to secure his ration of opium. Even the "poisonous syrups" fed to cross children by impatient and ill-advised parents are likely to be banned.

All this was made clear in the House of Commons tonight when the small army of doctors among our legislators directed a withering fire against a clause in the Patent Medicines Act, which provides that all proprietary or patent medicines containing opium or any derivative of coal tar, and intended for administration to children over one year of age, will be labelled "dangerous for infants under one year old."

"If Mothers Knew"

It was Hon. Dr. Beland, M.P. for Beauce who launched the attack on the so called soothing syrups," declaring that if Canadian mothers knew the contents of these widely used drugs they would not think of administering them. Several members used even stronger language in condemning quack remedies, contending that it is nothing short of criminal to allow them to be sold.

BUT LITTLE HOPE OF BUILDING HIGH-LEVEL BRIDGE THIS YEAR

Aldermen at Deadlock on Tenders—the Conroy Minority Unbreakable and Blocks All Movments in Favor of Competitors—Ald. Gainey Again Moves For Fair Wage Clause.

As foreshadowed in The Review last evening the Board of Works is at deadlock over the tenders for the new bridge. The members sat till eleven o'clock last night, could reach no conclusion, adjourned indefinitely.

Two tenders were voted on twice and one tender once, but all were turned down on division. While Ed Conroy's supporters on the ground that he is a local man and his lump sum tender lowest, were not in the majority to carry a resolution in his favor, still they made a strong enough minority to block resolutions recommending the tenders of the Russell-Towsend Co. and the Canadian Engineering and Construction Co., respectively. And unless either one of these two out-of-town tenderers gain a majority division it looks as though this year's Council will have to abandon the bridge building proposition entirely.

The Resolutions.

Ald. Turner and Edgar moved that in addition to the lump sum tenders those on a cost-plus fixed sum basis be considered. Carried.

Ald. Edgar and Turner moved that the Russell-Towsend cost-plus estimate of $228.600 for a bridge 9 feet narrower than the original design, with all the eliminations previously specified be accepted. This was lost.

Ald. Taylor and the Mayor moved that the cost-plus tender of the Canadian Engineering and Construction Co., guaranteeing the work to cost no more than $276.860, be accepted. This also was turned down.

This latter tender provides a commission to the contractors of $28.000 for their work and use of plant, and of any saving is effected the city gets the benefit, together with half the commission on a percentage basis shaved.

Ald. McIntyre and Garside moved that the lowest tender, that of Ed. Conroy for a lump sum of $251.639.35 be accepted, providing he makes a settlement of the Romaine street sewer claim against him in accordance with the finding of his solicitor and that of the city. This was lost on a vote of 4 to 6.

Savings Pointed Out.

The Canadian Engineering and Construction Co., in a letter contended that a considerable saving from their fixed sum of $276.000 could be assured as follows: The filling could be done with ashes collected in 1920 by the city, also with earth from excavations and street cleaning. This and other items they had in view, together with the possibility of renting timber from one of the railway companies, would effect a saving of from $8,000 to $10.000.

Will Take Back Cheque.

Mr. Navin of the Russell-Townsend Co. was present to have a last word. His people felt they had offered the best proposition for the city. They would not, however, give a cost-plus fixed sum price as their policy and principal all through their business career has been to stand or fall by the original tender. And under no condition would they accept any contract extending beyond ten months on any basis but that of cost-plus. "We have," he said, "a good organization, and that it is recognized by two of our competitors as a little better than their own is evidenced by their approaching my chief with a view to securing the services of our Mr. Towsend as supervisor of their work should either of them get this contract. If you award us the contract we must have absolute control of the labor needed as to hiring and discharging men."

Ald. McIntyre: "I can't see why, with an organization like you say you have, you cannot take a chance on a guaranteed fix sum. Even should you drop $10,000 you can afford it."

Mr. Navin: "Perhaps we can, but we don't intend to leave our good money in that bridge. We don't have to. The only chance the city takes is that of us not being competent to tender and execute the work; but our reputation inclusively shows our efficiency. As to the personal liability, some of you aldermen seem to fear, we'll guarantee that none of you gentlemen suffer from that if we build the bridge on a cost-plus basis.

Mr. Navin takes back with him tomorrow his firm's deposit cheque for $10.000.

Public Opinion.

Ald. Phelan said that so far as he was concerned, public opinion was opposed to the idea of letting the contract on a cost-plus basis and the Board cannot vote for any such measure. "It gives no guarantee of what the bridge is going to cost the city."

Confidence in This Firm.

Ald. Edgar and Turner expressed their utmost confidence in the Russell-Towsend Co. The latter said that with but one exception, they had never been known to exceed their estimates.

Ald. McIntyre: "We want the sources of your information as to their efficiency and reliability, not mere statements.

Ald. Turner: "Mr. J. A. Aylmer a reliable authority, speaks most highly of this firm and says Mr. Russel, its chief, is a splendidly efficient head."

Ald. McIntyre: "I hear he's quite a politician, and knows how to get around people."

Ald. Hamilton: "Mr. Quinland, a competitor, gave Mr Russeell a high reputation."

A Peterborough Boy.

Ald. Garside: "It will be a credit to Peterborough if we can get the bridge built by a Peterborough boy. Mr. Conroy has built concrete bridges before—one in Quebec."

Fair Wages.

Ald. Gainey said the elimination of the fair wage clause in the specifications had not affected the tenders, and he moved that the Board's recommendation for a wage rate of 40c an hour for laborers and 60c for carpenters be rescinded, and that the fair wage clause in the specifications for the bridge remain as it is.

This was seconded by Ald. Garside, but defeated on a vote of 4 to 5—the same old division.

There was no serious consideration of the Concrete Constructions Company's lump sum bid of $252 thousand odd.

IS SMITH STREET BRIDGE IN DANGER OF DISINTEGRATION

Ald. Turner Contends That it is—Expanding Crack in One Span—the Contractor Defends Himself—Followed Specifications Which Called For No Expansion Joints.

Ald. Turner, at the Board of Works session last night on the bridge tenders, said in discussing Ed. Conroy's tender: "To be honest and fair, I'd be afraid to trust the bridge to Mr. Conroy. We have in this town three evidences of concrete work to guide us in our conclusions in this respect. The elevator construted by John O'Toole for the Peterborough Cereal Company and the Auburn dam built by Clark & Mond, stand at our doors monuments of efficient work. But the Smith street bridge, I am informed, is liable to disintegrate and collapse some time in the future. In the first span on the west side there is a large and expanding crack which is even widening, while there are two or three other cracks in the structure not quite so bad, but serious evidences against efficiency in workmanship."

Fair Hearing

Ald. McIntlyre replied that in fairness to Mr. Conroy he should be allowed to defend himself against Mr. Turner's contention and this was readily acquiesced in by all, including Ald. Turner himself.

Mr. Conroy was not far away and on being summoned, said the expanding crack in the first span of Smith street bridge was due to lack of expansion joints, to which he at the time of construction called the engineer's attention, but with no result. Expansion jonits were not called for in his specifications which he followed to the letter in every respect. "The engineer is always boss of such work," Mr. Conroy added, "and the contractor must follow his plans."

Ald. Turner: "I am only actuated. Mr. Conroy, with a desire to spend the people's money—yours included—to the best advantage. My contention let it be right or wrong, is that you did not put in a foundation sufficiently substantial and firm to support the concrete forms."

Mr Conroy: "My foundations for the forms were perfectly good." Mr. Conroy also replied to questioning as to the coarse finish of the work and the crumbling concrete railing on the bridge, that he was not paid for a "rub" finish, and the city built the railing in question by day labor. He also affirmed that cracks or no cracks the bridge would neither disintegrate or collapse, and he offered to wager Ald. Turner $[illegible].000 (to go to charity) that the Smith street bridge would not fall either in 20 or 50 years. Of course, he was afraid that neither Mr. Turner or himself would be here at the end of 50 years, but the money could go to charity nevertheless.

Union Wages.

Mr. Conroy said he would employ an engineer himself on the job and would not dream of paying other than Union wages, no matter what wage clause the Council might insert in the contract.

One of the First.

The Board generally concurred in the view that apart from Ald. Turner's complaint, as the Smith street bridge was one of, if not the first, concret bridges built in Canada, engineers and contractors have naturally acquired much additional knowledge concerning concrete construction since that bridge was erected, nine years ago

AMERICAN SEAPLANES FINISH FISRST LEG OF OVERSEAS FLIGHT

Early This Morning, Leader Arrived at Island of Horto With Two Others Going Strong in Wake—Work of Radio Apparatus One of Marvels of Enterprise.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, May 17.—The United States airplane NC4 has arrived at Horta island, Azores, in the completion of the most difficult leg of the trans-Atlantic trip.

St. John's, Nfld., May 17.—The British airmen here will in all probability fly this afternoon.

Washington, May 17. — The naval seaplane N.C.V. was 100 miles from Corvo Island at 5.54 o'clock this morning Washington time, according to a despatch from the Azores. The others were going strong in the wake of their leader. The average speed of the N.C.V. was computed at more than 75 miles an hour. The section of harbor where the planes will be moored has been cleared of all craft to permit a safe landing. Two destroyers are ready to assist the planes if they alight outside the breakwater. The city here is in gala dress for the expected event of the day, and crowds gathered on the waterfront shortly after daybreak. The weather was misty and the visibility poor early this morning, but clearing weather was predicted for this afternoon when the planes are due to arrive.

Marvels in Radios.

From the time the aerial voyageurs left Trepassey Bay shortly after 6 o'clock last night until they had passed destroyer No. 13 more than six hundred miles out, the radio stations on this coast were able to trace their progress by intercepted radios. By this means the powerful government station at Bar Harbor, Maine, kept the Navy Department constantly informed regarding the expedition for more than eight hours. Although the radio apparatus on board the seaplanes was only designed for a radius of about 250 miles, the Maine station intercepted messages exchanged between the planes when they were more than 1,200 miles distant. This was declared by expert radio officers at the department to be one of the most surprising features of the undertaking. When the flight was planned, it was not expected that the stations on this side would be able to hear Commander Tower's messages after his squadron was two hundred miles at sea.

AIRPLANES MAKE HALF DISTANCE

REPORT OF PROGRESS WAS RECEIVED AT 4 O'CLOCK THIS MORNING.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, D.C., May 17.—Three American naval seaplanes, the N.C.-3, N.C.-1, N.C.-4, which started just before sunset yesterday from Trepassey Bay, Nfld., in the first attempt ever made by men to cross the Atlantic Ocean through the air had at 4 o'clock this morning, Washington time, covered seven hundred miles, more than half the distance of the longest and most difficult leg of the TransAtlantic flight from Newfoundland to the Azores.

TELEGRAPH OPERATORS JOIN WINNIPEG STRIKE

City is Now Completely Shut Off From the Outside World.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Winnipeg, May 17.—The situation here today in the great general strike is practically unchanged, except for the addition at noon today of all telegraphers in the city which will completely isolate the city from outside communication from that soar. All industry is tied up and the people are laking in all the food they can obtain. There have been no serious disturbances although the police and military are held well in hand in preparation for an eventuality. Practically all unions are out, except the Typographical and the whole affair looks at present like trumps for the "One Big Union" idea so favored in the west.

BIG DRIVE STARTS MONDAY

The big drive to raise $15,000 with which to complete the new G. W. V. A. hall on Brock street, will be launched Monday, and behind the movement, actively engaged in the campaign, will be found not only the Veterans themselves but some of the leading citizens who have brought to a successful issue every patriotic effort made by the city since the beginning of the war.

The money which the citizens will subscribe to this object will not be a charity but an investment. When the City Council voted the G. W. V. A. a grant of $10,000 they set cast-iron conditions more binding than any that are made with a manufacturing concern that is induced by special concessions to locate in the city. The Veterans' new hall is really a civic asset. If it is ever diverted from the purpose designed at present, if it is ever abandoned through the collapse of the organization, it will revert to the city and will become one of the municipality's most valuable holdings. The security is ample. There is no question as to the wisdom of the enterprise. The hall when completed will be of more real value to the city than any manufacturing concern, which can change its location and go to some other town without forfeit to the municipality.

The Veterans' Hall is to be more then a mere club house. It is also a business institution. It is not only for recreation, but to carry on business for between 2,000 and 3,000 returned soldiers who have gone from this district. Peterborough will be a district centre for three or four surrounding counties or what might be called East Centre Ontario.

From the first of the year until the present date, the Veterans have settled between $15,000 and $20,000 in claims for pensions, gratuities, lawsuits and other matters. This building will also be a monument to Canada's soldiers, or that part of them that Peterborough sent to the front. Names and deeds forgotten elsewhere will be remembered and discussed there. It will also be one of the city's points of interest, and all citizens will feel a just pride when pointing out to the visitors "our boys' club house." The rooms will always be open to returned men from other cities when here for a short time or passing through the city, and if these men are in temporary financial difficulty their need are attended to and they are sent on rejoicing. To attempt anything less than the Veterans are putting through would not be appropriate to the city of Peterborough or to the Veterans themselves.

The Veterans are affiliated with the Board of Trade. They work with the closest friendship with the Y. M. C. A., T. A. S., Trades and Labor Council, and every association that has for its object the betterment of the city. Their relations with the City Council and other public bodies are of the best. They have received letters of encouragement and best wishes from His Worship Mayor Duncan, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, the Ministerial Association, and a number of social and benefit societies. This would indicate that they have the sympathy of the vast majority of Peterborough people.

In preparation for the campaign a final meeting will be held tonight in the old G. W. V. A. rooms. Every committeeman, group leader and canvasser is expected to be present.

CARING FOR PARENTS.

THE POINT HAS BEEN raised by the managers of a benevolent institution in the city that is devoted to the care of the aged, that there is no law in Ontario making it compulsory for children of means to provide for the wants of their indigent parents.

Contrary to the apparent general impression, there is such a law in existence. British jurisprudence was not likely to overlook such an important point as that. In the reign of Charles the Second such a statute was passed, and it has never been repealed. When the British code became effective in Canada this law was included, and it has remained to the present day. Some years ago these facts were unearthed by a Toronto court that under the law in question compelled a wealthy resident of that city to provide for his father who otherwise would have become a public charge. And if there is justification for any statute on the list surely there is for the one that fixes filial responsibility.

SETTING HOURS OF A WORK DAY.

SOMEWHERE in the covenant of the League of Nations there is a clause which provides for an eight-hour work day in every country that is a signatory to that agreement. That is to be the economic aim of each one of them. The unterrified "Big Six," the half dozen aldermen, that have usurped prerogatives that never were supposed to belong to them, show their contempt for the new League by flying in the face of the covenant that has been created by the master minds of civilization, and have decreed a nine-hour day for the carpenters and laborers in the city. This may be taken as an indirect official condemnation of the work of the leading statesmen of the world.

Setting the number of hours that shall constitute a legal day's work is a function that belongs to the Provincial Legislature and not to the various municipal councils except so far as their own employes are concerned. The Dominion Parliament can settle this point for those on the Federal pay roll, but cannot say as to whether Peterborough carpenters and laborers employed by private contractors shall work six or fourteen hours a day or whether their pay shall be ten cents or one dollar an hour. It seems, however, that there are municipal councils that do not hesitate to rush into a field from which even the Dominion Parliament is constitutionally barred.

Minister of Labor Robertson on his visit here last winter told the workingmen whom he addressed that the legislatures of the various provinces alone had the right to establish an eight-hour day. There was some pressure brought to bear upon the Hearst Government at the recent session to enact such legislation, but nothing came of it.

Why should a government hesitate to pass laws affecting the economic status of mankind when such government is not at all slow in the matter of regulating the moral and spiritual welfare of its constituents? The Government says what a man shall and shall not drink, what he shall eat, and forbids him impairing his health or his religion by engaging in his regular occupation on the first day of the week. There will be labor disputes just so long as the matter of hours is left for adjustment between the labor unions and individual firms, until there is a uniform working day throughout Ontario. The question of hours is the real basis of all the present-day differences between Capital and Labor. If it is natural for the workingmen to agitate for a reduction, it is just as natural for an employer to refuse a concession so long as that concession is withheld by another wage payer either in this city or in Toronto engaged in the same line as himself and with whose products the other has to compete in the open market.

The one objection to legislative action in this matter is the probability of the various provinces failing to enforce a uniform law. Workmen in Ontario might work eight hours a day while those in Quebec put in ten. The same difficulty has been made painfully apparent in recent liquor legislation, but it is a difficulty that goes with a Federal form of government and is a problem that statesmanship has been so for unable to solve.

The Legislature of Illinois has just passed an eight-hour day. Every province in Canada stands in the same relation to the Central Power as do the various states of the American Union. The Republic, however, has one advantage over Canada. It can amend its constitution by a three-fourths vote of the state legislatures, and so could make an eight-hour law general throughout the country, just as they have done with the prohibition amendment.

PRINTERS AND STRIKES.

THE THREE DAILY PAPERS in Winnipeg have been forced to suspend publication on account of the general strike called in that city, but for this condition the printers are in no sense responsible. They refused to take part in the strike, and were forced to quit when the stereotypers and the pressmen walked out.

The printers of America have the oldest, just as they have the strongest, union on this continent, their organization dating from 1852. They include among their number a higher standard of intelligence than that of any other class of workmen. They have comparatively few disputes of a serious nature and very few strikes. When an agreement is made with their employers, a contract is drawn up for a specified time. The existence of such a contract prevents the printers from taking part in a sympathetic strike in order to espouse the cause of some other class of workers. Any union that did so would be outlawed by the international organization with which all are affiliated. This is why the printers in Winnipeg refused to join in the general walkout. They hold a written contract with their employers in higher regard than the Germans accord an international treaty.

The plan has been found to work out well in actual practice and it gives to the printing trade a stability that is unknown in other lines. If the plan were generaly adopted there would be fewer labor disputes and infinitely less of such sympathetic strikes as the one that has tied up every branch of industry in Winnipeg.

"EVEN AS YOU AND I."

TO THE LASTING HONOR of humanity in general and to the judiciary of Ontario in particular, let it be written that in a recent case in Chatham, heard before a police magistrate, stern justice was tempered with a mercy that was little short of divine. The story of the occasion for this display of clemency is one of the most [illegible] in the annals of fact of fiction and no dramtist could draw from his imagination so touching a picture.

A youth of ten years, acting as a delivery boy, went to a house to deliver a package, and while waiting saw a well filled purse on the table. Children of his tender age who are working for their daily bread are not usually affluent. This particular boy was hungry, ragged and penniless. He took a $5 bill from the purse and with his new wealth purchased himself a meal in a restaurant and a pair of suspenders to replace the string that did duty for such in his attire. That was the extent of his expenditure on his own behalf, but the pathos of his story is in the recital of what followed.

Questioned by the magistrate, the little fellow declared that he had bought with the rest of the money four roses, "the beautifulest he could find," in memory of his dead mother. Little wonder that hard-headed court officials shed tears when they heard the boy, little wonder that the little fellow was let off even without a stern lecture from the bench.

Was the home training of that boy deficient? There was certanly nothing much amiss in his upbringing when it developed in him an affection so strong for his dead mother. Had that mother been spared, the chances are that her son would never have been the central figure in a police court hearing. A Christian state is supposed to take over the parental oversight of such orphans, but all the state appears to have done in this case was to permit the little fellow to work at the age of ten, hungry and in mean attire.

All men are assumed to be born in original sin. Children learn the difference between right and wrong only as their minds expand under the influence of religious instruction. However true this theory may be, it is nevertheless a fact that the child, until he reaches a certain stage of development, is a natural born bolshevist. Property rights are something he fails to understand. The first fact that impresses itself upon the child of the poor is the idea that some way or other human affairs are out of joint. The hungry child cannot understand why he should be hungry while there is plenty all around him, windows of the provision stores tempting him with their display. Why should he be in rags or thinly attired while others are warmly clad? Why should his own mother be compelled to wear cotton while other boys' mothers ruffle it in silken attire? He understands these riddles when he grows up and realizes that he is living under a regime that compels him to respect the rights of others.

The little fellow at Chatham did wrong, but good followed his evil act. The saving grace in his case is that he took only what he thought was sufficient for his immediate needs. There are elders who would have done differently if given his opportunity, those fliers in finance, for instance, who spoil the homes of the widows and orphans and then for pretence make long prayers in public.

The Chatham boy was fortunate perhaps in the magistrate who tried him. There are presiding officials in Ontario police courts who with such a case before them would have applied the only remedy known to them for juvenile slips and would have condemned the lad to a whipping to be administered by a constable, a punishment that brings little of moral elevation to the man who orders it, to the officer who administers it, and least of all to the victim himself.

FINDING WORK FOR VETERANS

Replying voluntarily to a circular letter sent out by the Director of Repatriation, many of the large employers of labor in Canada explained —without being asked to do so— what they were doing not only to re-employ former employes who went to the front, but also to give positions to other returned soldiers.

The questionnaire sent out by the Repatriation Committee drew attention to the importance of employers absorbing into industry the 15,000 disabled Canadian soldiers and employing them in suitable, useful and self-respecting positions.

The spirit of generous patriotism exhibited in these letters from employers indicates that the work of demobilization is going on without friction and with much satisfaction. Extracts from some of the letters will be found to be interesting:

1. The policy of our campany is to re-employ every returned man who left our employ to become a soldier, whether he returns physically fit or not, and our foremen and employment officers have been so instructed.

2. For the purpose of training disabled men for mechanical positions we believe it would be better if vocational training institutions were established at many points throughout the country, where men would receive fair treatment and work under pleasant surroundings. This would be better than having disabled men learning a trade among other men in factories, where the training could not be as well given nor as close supervision exercised.

3. Most of the employers in our city are patrons of the G. W. V. A., and as a result co-operate with the secretary of that association in finding satisfactory employment for all returned men.

4. We are constantly in touch with the representative of the Department of Soldiers' Service and Information Bureau, and state that the returned men we have taken on are doing as well as can be expected, and are bound to become useful and dependable members of our staff. We put these men on work that will fit their condition.

5. One of our travellers joined the British service and has just come back loaded with honors, the Legion of Honor and the Crown of Belgium, as well as other decorations. We have held his place for the last four and a half years. We realize that great patience should be used in the handling of returned men, and we believe that most employers realize this fact and are sympathetic.

6. Every man on our place who was fit enlisted voluntarily for overseas service. We are taking back every returned soldier who was in our employ previous to the war, whether he is disabled or not. In addition to this, we are placing as many other returned soldiers as possible. I am a returned soldier myself and most of the men in our place enlisted with me, hence the strong bond of sympathy between employer and employes.

7. Fifty per cent. of the men in our factory are returned soldiers. I have found that the best plan is to take a personal interest in them. I try to have a personal interview with every one of them as often as possible. If they cannot be spoken to individually, they should be spoken to in groups.

8. We have found that indoor workers get restless for a time and want to get outside for air, stating that they could not stand it. We have instructed them to go outside whenever they felt like it, with the result that in from ten days to two weeks they were all right and back to pre-war methods. It is only necessary to be patient and reasonable. The returned men do not ask for nor expect special favors.

9. We had sixty-eight employes join the forces, and we have so far made places for all who have returned, offering advanced wages to them. If this principle of advancing wages were followed, it would not be difficult to absorb returned men.

10. We have looked after our men while they were away by paying them half their salary and keeping their jobs open for them, and as they return we are trying to make positions for them without discharging any of the men we have had to take on in the meantime.

11. Our own boys have all been taken back as they returned, and these returned men are given the full privilege, the same as our old employes, of entering into our profit-sharing scheme, and are treated in the same way as if they had been in our employ for some time.

12. The writer has control of the employment of all people engaged in the manufacture of boots and shoes for this company, and he, being a returned man, has the interests of the returned soldiers at heart and will see that they are given every encouragement in this concern.

13. We have taken back every man to apply who left us to enter military service; consequently if anything, our staff is over-manned.

14. Where returned men have applied to me for positions and I have not been able to place them, I have made it a point—and have been successful—to place them with other concerns and business houses.

15. We have trained one or two men for customers who are buying our machines.

16. We are trying to do all we can to get those who left our employ to go to the front back to their old positions. By letting them have a little more of their own way at first they will gradually get used to the work again and fall into line with the other employes.

17. We have a number of returned men, and we give them the preference at all times. We cannot cripple our plant simply to be patriotic, but when we state that the president has been carrying on the business virtually by himself owing to his two sons being across the water serving their country, it will be evident that this company will do all it can to assist in absorbing returned men.

18. We are giving employment to all returned soldiers who apply for work at our mills. We can generally work in men who have lost one eye or one leg, around some of the machines, where they do not have to tramp around too much.

19. With regard to such partially disabled men who are in our employ, an effort has been made to put them into suitable jobs. The members of the Great War Veterans' Association already in the company's employ, scattered through the various departments, constitute the most effective check, if such were needed, on harsh or unfair treatment.

20. Our experience with returned men is quite satisfactory. They are as good as the same number of men were before the war. There should be little difficulty in getting all returned men back to work.

21. At the present time we have in our employ eight returned men. They are all giving satisfaction.

22. It seems to me that all that is required is a little patience and common sense, with the assistance that the Government is giving, to re-establish returned soldiers in suitable occupations.

23. The rehabilitation not only of the disabled soldiers but of every man who has offered his day for our to-morrow, is of prime importance. It should be unnecessary to say that wherver and whenever it is possible to give them preference it should be done quietly and unassumingly.

"I don't know, I never knew there was such a place until Italy began insisting on having it."

Sillicus: To what do you attribute the fact that so many marriages are failures?

Cynicus: Probably it is because those who don't marry too young wait until they are too old.

Keeping Late Hours

Gale—Your beauty must intoxicate your latest beau, Madge.

Daughter— I'm listening for the joker in the pretty compliment old dear.

Galey— He seldom goes home till morning.

A little girl in Sunday School was asked: "What is a lie?"

Quick as a flash came the reply: "An abomination unto the Lord but a very present help in the time of trouble."

Safe There

"I think I'll go and live in Venice."

"Why Venice?"

"Because the motor cars can't run you down in the streets there."

FEMININE LOGIC

The young lady across the way says it certainly does seem to be just one thing after another these days and before the regular flu has run its course she sees in the paper that the influx of foreign labor is now greatly feared and she supposes it's terribly contagious.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY'S WORK

DEPENDS UPON GOOD BLOOD TO NOURISH THE BODY

Weak People Need a Tonic, One Which Acts Directly Upon the Blood and that Does Not Weaken the Body by Useless Purging.

There are thousands of people throughout Canada who are without ambition or strength to do their day's work, and who are always tired out, have but little appetite and a poor digestion. They cannot get a refreshing night's sleep and are subject to headaches, backaches and nervousness, because their blood is impure. To men and women in this condition Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give quick relief and permanent cure because of their direct action on the blood, which they build up to its normal strength. As the blood becomes rich and red it strengthens the muscles, tones up the nerves, makes the stomach capable of digesting food, and repairs the wastes caused by worry or work. In a word, the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills means restoration to perfect health.

BLOOD TURNED TO WATER

Miss Jessie McLean, Trenton, N.S., says:—"I was as weak as it was possible for any one to be, and yet be able to go about. My blood seemed to have turned almost to water. I was pale, the least exertion would leave me breathless, and when I went up stairs I would have to stop and rest on the way. I often had severe headaches, and at times my heart would palpitate alarmingly. A good friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I have reason to be grateful that I took the advice. Soon after beginning the use of the Pills I began to get stronger, and by the time I had taken seven boxes I felt that I was aain enjoying good health. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a blessing to weak girls and I shall always warmly recommend them."

RHEUMATIC PAINS.

The sufferer from rheumatism who experiments with outward applications is only wasting valuable time and good money. In depending upon such treatment, the trouble still remains and is all the time becoming more firmly rooted, harder to cure when the proper treatment is applied. Treat this disease through the blood and you will soon be rid of the pains and tortures. As a cure for rheumatism Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are unequalled. They act directly on the impure, weak blood; they purify and strengthen it, and so root out the cause of rheumatism. Mr. D. Lewis, postmaster at Escuminac, N.B. says: "I was attacked with rheumatism, which settled in my elbow, shoulder and knee joints, and at times caused me great suffering. The trouble was particularly severe last spring and I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After taking the Pills for some time the rheumatic pains and stiffness in the joints disappeared and I have not had any return of the trouble."

A GOOD DIGESTION

Mrs. William Dale, Midland, Ont., says:—"I suffered for a long time from a severe form of indigestion, and had doctored so much without benefit that I had all but given up hope of getting better. Everything I ate caused me intense pain and some days I did not touch a thing but a cup of cold water, and even that distressed me. As a result I was very much run down, and slept so poorly that I dreaded night coming on. I was continually taking medicine, but was actually growing worse instead of better. Having often read of the cures made by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I finally decided to give them a trial. I have had great cause to bless this decision, for by the time I had used a couple of boxes there was no doubt the pills were helping me, and in less time than I had anticipated the pills had cured me, and I was again enjoying not only good digestion, but better health in every way than before."

ALWAYS FEELS FIT.

The wonderful success of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is due to the fact that they go right to the root of the disease in the blood, and by making the vital fluid rich and red strengthen every organ and every nerve, thus driving out disease and pain, and making weak, despondent people bright, active and strong. Mr. W. T. Johnson, one of the best known and most highly esteemed men in Lunenburg County, N.S., says.—"I am a Provincial Land Surfeyor, and am exposed the greater part of the year to very hard work travelling through the forests by day and camping out by night, and I find the only thing that will keep me up to the mark is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. When I leave home for a trip in the woods I am as interested in having my supply of pills as provisions, and on such occasions I take them regularly. The result is I am always fit. I never take cold, and can digest all kinds of food such as we have to put up with hastily cooked in the woods. Having proved the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as a tonic and health builder, I am never without them and I lose no opportunity in recommending them to weak people I meet."

SKIN TROUBLE CURED.

Mrs. W. Ritchie, Parkbeg, Sask., says:—"Two years ago I was attacked with eczema on my hands. I tried almost everything that was advised, but as the trouble was growing worse I consulted a doctor and took his treatment for some time with no better results. By this time my hands were a mass of sores and I began to despair of finding a cure. A friend strongly advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided to do so. After using two boxes I could see an improvement and I got a further supply. I used altogether eight boxes, by which time every trace of the eczema had disappeared and there has been not a single symptom of the trouble since that time. I gladly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for troubles of this kind."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be kept in every home, and their occasional use will keep the blood pure and ward off illness. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Why It Is a Mistake to Delay Your Purchase Of The NEW EDISON

EDISON RE-CREATIONS

Most everything you buy wears out eventually. An automobile for example—or a suit of clothes. So the longer you delay its purchase the longer you'll have it to enjoy.

Not so with a New Edison. It will outlive you anyway. Every month you delay is just one more month gone from your life—another month in which you might have had your life enriched by music—but didn't.

Under our new plan by which payment can be made so much a month there's no reason why you shouldn't be enjoying your New Edison right now.

The New Edison cost $3.000,000 to perfect. It is the only instrument which successfully meets the test of direct comparison with the living artist's voice or instrument. It will bring into your home the world's best music, sung or played by the world's great artists.

Call to-morrow for a demonstration. "Send it out to the house" will be your verdict.

If you desire it, we will make easy terms of payment.

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING

By Dr. W.A. BRADY

In a recent talk, inspired by a letter from a Pittsburgh teacher, the following item was quoted from the "health bulletin" of the North Carolina state board of health:

"Teachers and Tuberculosis.

"There is a higher rate of mortality from tuberculosis among school teachers than among stonecutters and barkeepers. The reason for this is the unsanitary condition of the school room, lack of ventilation, overheating, lack of light and sedentary occupation."

In Chicago public schools are equipped with a system of ventilation which is under the supervision of a competent expert on ventilation connected with the health department of the city. The health department's ventilating inspector in charge recently observed that it was "safe to say that only a small part of the mechanical equipment installed in school buildings throughout the United States meets the accepted requirements." He also stated that "the tests in the New York schools reported by Dr. Josephine Baker (of the child hygiene bureau of the New York city health department) indicate that air conditions from the standpoint of health at least, are better in the point of health, at least are better in the window-ventilated rooms in those rooms ventilated by mechanical methods and the results should awaken public officials to their laxity and carelessness in the installation and possibly in the operation of these mechanical equipments. To conclude from the report that natural ventilation is to be preferred to mechanical ventilation would be a grave mistake and result in much harm.

Now listen to a Chicago teacher:

". . . The sad, nay maddening, part of it is that in Chicago at least we are not permitted to wait till time and toil have made us prefer our air in a 'static' condition. Willy-nilly we are forced to box ourselves up daily because a breath of fresh air will disorganize the whole of the so called ventilation system. Even principals are at the mercy of the engineers, who of course, receive orders from below as the circumstances seem to indicate.

"The influenza scare furnished a blessed relief. We were required—Oh joy!—to keep windows open then, to ventilate at intervals and—diminuendo—finally forced back to the old method. Thanks to the 'flu,' instead of feeling like a rag at the end of a 'well ventilated' day, I felt fresh and alive. But that is now past tense.

. . . I write in the hope that you may start a campaign for fresh air. The present system of ventilation costs dollars and evidently lives."

There, now.

But it is no use, sisters. As long as drafts, dampness, cold air and wind are generally deemed deleterious to civilized mankind you and the pupils must take your air from a spoon, as it were.

Liver Spots.

"Will you kindly tell me what to use for liver spots? They are brown stained patches here and there on the skin. I have been using lemon juice and peroxide, but they don't seem to disappear. MISS J."

They were named liver spots by some antique who diagnosed disease by intuition. A better name for them would be lung spots, for they depend on the oxygen shortage. Absorb more oxygen. That means physical training. Take a dozen rolls, besides a systematic course of general exercises before breakfast and before retiring every day. These patches or stains in the skin are a confession that the physical education has been neglected.

S. S. B. A.

"Be good enough to explain what is meant by saturated solution, as for example, a saturated solution of boric acid in water or in alcohol.

"MRS. A. W."

When the water or alcohol has dissolved all the boric acid or other substance which it will take up, the solution is said to be a saturated solution. A saturated solution of boric acid in boiled water is an excellent gargle, mouthwash or eyewash, mildly antiseptic. A saturated solution of boric acid in alcohol is much used as drops for running ear.

THE BEST MEDICINE FOR LITTLE ONES

Thousands of mothers state positively that Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine they know of for little ones. Their experience has taught them that the Tablets always do just what is claimed for them and that they can be given with perfect safety to children of all ages. Concerning them Mrs. Joseph Therrien, St. Gabriel de Brandon, Que., writes: "Baby Own Tablets are the best medicine I know of for little ones. I thought I would lose my baby before trying the Tablets, but they soon made him healthy and happy and now I would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WARRANT ISSUED FOR LINDSAY MAN

S. W. SMITH CHARGED WITH FALSE PRETENCES, LEAVES TOWN.

Lindsay, May 17.—One of the biggest swindles ever perpetrated on produce men and merchants was that staged during the past two and a half week by S. W. Smith Wholesale Produce Co. of Lindsay, which firm, while here, is purported to have done business amounting to $5,000 or $6,000.

It appears that a little over two weeks ago a man by the above name blew into town and opened up an office in the building formerly occupied by the Hydro-Electric Co. on William street north.

In Produce Business.

The office stationery bears the following wording: "S. W. Smith Wholesale Produce Co., Dealers in butter, eggs, hay, grain, and all kinds of poultry. Butter and eggs a specialty. Telephone No. 867."

A Busy Telephone.

The aforesaid Smith said he came from Fort William, and he immediately started into business, the telephone being the most important instrument used. As high as 71 long distance calls a day were put through, Mr. Smith buying large quantities of goods from merchants and large produce firms throughout the country. Incidentally he communicated with some 248 produce dealers in this manner, and also circularized them, and incidentally also the telephone bill of $200 or $300 remains unpaid.

Produce Tumbled In.

In the course of a day or two produce was shipped in from all directions and the Express Companies had a busy time. It was conveyed to the office on William street and almost immediately reshipped to Toronto, where it was sold to such firms as Marshall's Ltd. and also one or two shipments to W. S. Smith.

First Goods Paid For.

One or two firms got their money for the first shipments received, but in the majority of cases the firms are still waiting for payments on other shipments, and in the meantime Mr. Smith resold the goods to Toronto firms and received checks for the same. He made a specialty of butter eggs.

Left Town Hurriedly.

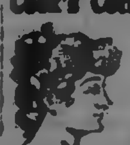
During the past two weeks, Mr Smith paid frequent trips to Toronto, the last being on Monday. On Tuesday he telephoned to the Lindsay office, but he has not been heard of or seen locally since.

Warrant for Arrest.

Mr. Jos. Borensky, of Stouffville swore out a warrant for the arrest of Smith, before Police Magistrate Bradford, the charge being that Smith did obtain goods under false pretences, using a check for the same for which there were no funds in the bank, and knowing that the check would be dishonored on presentation. Mr. Borensky's check was for $337.50.

Marshall's Ltd. had paid Smith $500 on one occasion and $998 on another, and it is estimated that he got away with some $5,000.

Cook's Cotton Root Compound.



A safe, reliable regulating medicine. Sold in three degrees of strength—No. 1, $1; No. 2, $3; No. 3, $5 per box. Sold by all druggists, or sent prepaid on receipt of price. Free [illegible]

Paderewski Leaves Piano And Sacrifices Career For Love of His Country

We have had a bird as prophet and now we have a pianist as Prime Minister. But there is a difference. Ignace Paderewski is far from being a one-sided man. If he had been without musical genius and had exercised his powers in the field of letters or politics he would long ago have been known as a man of brilliant capabilities.

He is an unusually broad scholar, versed not only in languages and literatures but also in philosophy and history. Years ago when he arrived on this continent one season for his concert work the Americans were in the midst of a Presidential campaign. Mr. Paderewski's understanding of the national questions at issue at the time and his discriminating comments upon the trend of public thought were little short of astounding.

In short he is a big brain and a vigorous organization. His devotion to his country has deprived the musical world of a commanding figure. Of course it cannot be promised that with all his ability he will be successful as a Premier. History has taught us that the Poles have a fatal failing. They always quarrel among themselves. We ought not to expect Mr. Paderewski to reform his countrymen. He has many friends in Canada and they will heartily wish him success. But no one will envy him his task.

IGNACE PADEREWSKI

Shortly before returning to his native land, Paderewski wrote an article on Poland for the World's Work, in which he said:

"Poland has been the cradle of the world's liberalism. She concluded, in 1413, a political union, proclaiming for the first time, in a document of almost evangelical beauty, the brotherhood of man. Two centuries and a half before England achieved a habeas corpus act, three centuries and a half before the French declaration of the rights of man, Poland introduced in 1430, her famous law, Neminem captivabemus nisi jure victum; she was first to provide that no man should be imprisoned unless legally convicted. Her constitution of 1505 was the world's primary application of a democratic parliamentary system. In 1573, she inaugurated a virtual republic, its chief magistrate elected for life and called a king, but forbidden to lead the militia across the frontier except with the consent of the senate. And in that very same year, the year, you remember, of St. Bartholomew's Night, the Polish senate provided freedom for all creeds, the right of every man within its jurisdiction to worship as he chose.

"Anglo-Saxon civilization is a political descendant of the nation which, in 1208, first applied the elective franchise, and in 1347, established the first complete civil code of Christian Europe.

The New German State.

It is assumed that the new German state has retained the name Deutsches Reich, which does not necessarily mean empire, unless headed by an emperor. Such a state is called a kaiserreich, or, if headed by a king, a koenigreich. Reich (reach, realm), means domain, as witness Frankreich, Oesterreich, Himmelreich, etc., and there is no suggestion of empire in the world.

TO-DAY'S STORY

A son of the family was home on first vacation since he had attained to the dignity of a college prefect. He and his father were discussing affairs of the day, and finally the boy remarked:

"Say, gov, I hope, when I am as old as you are, I'll know more than you do."

"I'll go you one better, my boy," the father replied. "I hope that when you are that old you will know as much as you think you do now."

Costa Rica.

Costa Rica is the most southerly of the Central American republics, extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, with Cocos Island as its outlying possession. It lies between Nicaragua and Panama. A considerable area of the country is high tableland with a temperate climate, but the land along the coast is low, with tropical vegetation and a strictly tropical climate.

Youthful Saint.

St. Agnes was a Roman virgin and martyr, who at the age of 13 suffered persecution and was beheaded under Diocletian about the year 304. At Rome there is an annual procession in her honor, when a lamb, highly decorated, is led through the city. The connection of her name with the Latin for lamb—agnus—probably has led to the association of this animal with her memory.

How to Remove Pains Caused by Kidney Trouble

It may be news to you, but it is history to thousands of persons, who have suffered from Backache, Painful Urination, Swollen Joints, Constant Headaches, etc., that Gin Pills remedy Kidney and Bladder troubles by first removing the cause.

The cause of all Kidney diseases such as Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, etc., is congested Kidneys. Kidneys that fail to perform their function of filtering the poisons and impurities from the blood. These poisons remaining in the system are the direct cause of a chain of dreaded diseases.

If you've never heard of Gin Pills before ask any of your friends about them. Gin Pills have been on the market for years; they are the old reliable remedy for Backache, etc. If you suffer from any Kidney or Bladder afflictions try Gin Pills.

Should you not care to buy them as an experiment, a sample box will be sent to you on request.

Gin Pills contain the beneficial ingredient of Gin without the slightest trace of alcohol. For many years bottled Gin was considered the ready remedy for Kidney or Bladder troubles. Scientific research proved, however, that the reason for this was due purely to the extract of Juniper it contained and nothing else. From hundreds of letters received by us we are convinced that all any sufferer of Kidney or Bladder trouble needs to do is try Gin Pills—and they will find relief at once.

NOISE OF STREET CARS UPSET HIM

COULDN'T DRINK COFFEE WITHOUT SPILLING IT FROM CUP —LIKE NEW MAN AFTER TAKING TANLAC

"I feel like a different man altogether since I have been taking Tanlac," said John Mulcahey, a well known railroad man who lives at 800 Lydia Ave., Kansas City, Mo., the other day.

"I have been trying for the last twenty years to get rid of indigestion and sour stomach," he continued, "and I failed utterly until I got hold of Tanlac. This trouble had about gotten the best of me, too, for I was so weak and run-down that I could walk hardly any distance without stopping once in a while to rest. Everything I ate disagreed with me and caused gas to form on my stomach. I also suffered a great deal from nervousness, which finally got so bad that I couldn't drink a glass of water or a cup of coffee without spilling some of it. I never slept very well, and even the sound of the street cars passing at night would upset me and keep me awake. To tell you the honest truth I was so weak and run down that life was beginning to be a burden to me.

"I knew a lot of people who had been benefitted by taking Tanlac, so I thought I would try it myself. I just want to say right here that of all the medicine I have taken four the last twenty years, Tanlac beats them all. I have taken four bottles so far, and I don't know what it is to have indigestion or sour stomach now, or to be bothered with gas on my stomach after eating. My nerves are as steady as they ever were, and never bother me the least bit, and I sleep eight or nine hours every night and don't wake up once. Why I can get out and walk forty or fifty block now and it doesn't tire me any more than walking one block before I took Tanlac. As a matter of fact, Tanlac has made a new man of me, and I am more than glad to recommend it to everybody.

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Beware of Compromises.

One temptation in making difficult decisions is to compromise. You aren't sure which way is the best, you seek to combine the advantages of both, and many a time merely combine all the disadvantages. To be sure, there are times when a compromise is the wisest course, but there are just as many times when it is cowardice and weakness. How can one tell which times are which? Well, that is simply another decision for you.

Passed Up Tempting Offer.

William Ewart Gladstone, the great statesman, refused tens of thousands of pounds offered to him for articles by publishers. It is said that an American magazine proprietor once sent him a blank check and told him to fill it up for any amount he pleased so long as he sent him 2,000 words for his magazine. Mr. Gladstone returned the letter and the check also as blank as it arrived.

Winter Reading.

Books of natural history make the most cheerful winter reading. I read in Audubon with a thrill of delight, when the snow covers the ground, of the magnolia, and the Florida keys, and their warm sea breezes; of the fence rail, and the cotton tree, and the migrations of the rice bird; of the breaking up of winter in Labrador, and the melting of the snow on the forks of the Missouri.—Thoreau.

That Much Assured.

A somewhat impecunious young fellow rashly engaged himself to a charming young thing, who shortly after the excitement had subsided began to evince doubts. Said she: "How long, dearie, do you think we shall have to be engaged?" "Well, sweetheart," said the young man cheerily, "I have enough money to last for six months, I think."

Public Penance.

A quaint old law for the punishment of petty offenders exists to this day in Middleburg, the Netherlands, and anything resembling it is not known to exist elsewhere. Owing to dampness weeds quickly spring up in the streets between the paving stones, and here, under the eye of a none too severe guard, the offenders are put to work with a large trowel shaped knife clearing away the upspringing blades of green. Each is provided with a wooden stool; hence it may be imagined that they are not bard driven. Here men and women alike who have been convicted work in this manner.

CANADA A NATION NOT AN ADJUNCT

VAIN ATTEMPT BEING MADE TO REVIVE RECIPROCITY IDEA OF 1911.

(Industrial Canada.)

As the people of Canada are being urged to break down the tariff wall between this country and the United States by reviving the reciprocity agreement of 1911 and by sweeping tariff reductions preliminary to free trade, they should consider the following correspondence, which was written during the progress of the reciprocity negotiations of 1911 and published by Ex-President Taft on the 25th of April, 1912, after the famous Taft-Roosevelt quarrel:—

Ex-President Taft to the late Ex-President Roosevelt:—"The amount of Canadian products we would take would produce a current of business between Western Canada and the United States that would make Canada only an adjunct of the United States. It would transfer all their important business to Chicago and New York, with their bank credits and everything else, and it would increase greatly the demand of Canada for our manufactures. I see this is an argument made against reciprocity in Canada, and I think it is a good one."

From the late Ex-President Roosevelt's reply to Ex-President Taft: "It seems to me that what you propose to do with Canada is admirable from every standpoint. I firmly believe in free trade with Canada for both economic and political reasons."

American Branch Factories Build Up Canada.

Over 500 branches of United States manufacturing concerns have crossed the boundary and located in Canada. If there had been no tariff between Canada and the United States, it would not have been necessary for them to come to Canada. United States could have dumped their goods into this country.

But even our moderate tariff, averaging 21 2-5 per cent. on dutiable goods (exclusive of the special war revenue tariff) prevented this to some extent.

As one American who has become a Canadian says:

"We found that we had to step over the tariff wall and bring our plants with us."

These 500 branches of American factories employ about 80,000 people in Canada, to whom they pay annually in wages about $80,000,000.

If each employe has three dependents on the average, nearly a quarter of a million people are supported by these factories. It is estimated that their annual expenditure, chiefly in Canada, for raw material, is near $200,000,000.

If our tariff wall is broken down or abolished, will any more branches of American factories be located in Canada, and will all those who are here now remain?

If the tariff wall between Canada and the United States is broken down and traffic is encouraged to move north and south, what will happen to our east and west transcontinental railways?

These railways and our entire transportation system, including canals and steamboat routes, were constructed on the supposition that, if Canada was to remain a nation, traffic would move mainly east and west.

Reciprocity or free trade with the United States, of course, means an increase in north and south traffic at the expense of east and west traffic. The people of Canada now own two of our transcontinental railways and will be taxed to pay any deficit which may arise through loss of traffic.

The Swing Towards Protection.

Free trade seems to be dying out all over the world. No doubt the war has hastened its end, because all the countries engaged have found it absolutely necessary to manufacture what they need at home in order to provide employment for their own soldiers and war workers.

Great Britain has prohibited the importation of manufactured goods except under special Government license until the first of September next, when the subject will be reviewed. The regulation does not apply to the British Dominions.

France is not lowering its tariff, but, on the other hand, is shutting out the goods of other countries by a system of import licenses. Italy is doing the same. South Africa is increasing its tariff, which was designed for revenue only, in order to protect home industry. Australia, New Zealand, Newfoundland, Japan, Brazil and Portugal are all jealously maintaining their tariffs.

As the Republican party has now a majority in both the Senate and Congress of the United States, and since that party has always supported a higher tariff than that advocated by the Democratic party which is going out of power, opinion in the United States runs strongly in favor of an upward revision of the tariff schedules.

It is scarcely likely that Canada, a young country in which industry is still in the process of establishment, will be the only country to throw down its safeguards.

EVERYBODY HELP

Of course we couldn't all go overseas, but those of us who didn't go can show our appreciation of those who did by helping them along in this campaign for funds for their new home. Peterborough may well be proud of the way in which her men responded to the nation's call and we stay-at-homes should help and encourage those of our soldiers who have been fortunate enough to return.

This new home on Murray Street is a memorial to those who fought and fell, as well as being a gathering place for returned men. It is a place where they can gather of an evening and fight their battles over again in comfort. It should have the wholehearted support of every resident in the city —and no doubt it will.

It is now up to all of us to give to the limit that the boys may furnish their clubhouse as comfortably as possible. $15,000.00 is the sum asked from the citizens of Peterborough and there isn't the slightest doubt but that his objective will be reached as easily as every objective was reached in France by the brave lads for whose benefit it is being raised.

The generosity and appreciation of the Peterborough Public is relied upon in this as in all other Patriotic Campaigns conducted in Peterborough, to put this Campaign Over the Top without a doubt

Civilian Publicity Committee

VETERAN MAY PRESIDE OVER THE PRESBYTERIAN ASSEMBLY

Two Returned Chaplains Nominated For Moderators of Church Court Which Meets in Hamilton in June.

Hamilton, May 17.—The Presbyterian community of this city is expecting to entertain the largest meeting of the General Assembly of that Church ever held in Canada. Over five hundred commissioners have sent in their names and there are more to follow. The "Billiting Committee," has had a very busy time, but they report that the people of the churches, both large and small have been very ready to sign up as the hosts of the visitors.

The City of Hamilton has a very large Presbyterian constituency even in these days of absence of the soldiers and when the boys get home again, the number will be still larger. There are nearly 3,500 families and nearly 9,000 members connected with the 14 Presbyterian Church in the city.

Like the other church folk here, the Presbyterians are "well-off" and are generous givers to the work of their church, at home and abroad.

The amount collected by these fourteen church to maintain the local and congregational work, approximates year $215,000.00 and in addition, they average nearly $50,000.00 a year for "Schemes of the Church"—the unfortunate name given by the older men of the missionary work they carry.

A Khaki Moderator

The forty-fifth assembly which meets here June 4, will likely choose a khaki moderator, though there are many names on the nomination lists coming forward from the sixty-nine presbyteries. Among those who are being put up for the place are Dr. Love, Quebec; Dr. A. S. Grant, Toronto; Dr. Thos Stewart, Halifax; Principal McKinnon, Halifax; and Dr. John Pringle, Sydney. The last two are khaki men and the opinion seems to be that one of them will be called to fill the chair. Both of these last names have Dominion-wide reputations. Dr. Pringle is honored for his pioneer work in the Klondike as missionary, in the days of the rush for gold, and Principal Mackinnon is remembered as a very popular and successful minister in Winnipeg, a few years ago. Inasmuch as the assembly reverences age, when it is linked with wisdom and zeal, it is not beyond the possibility that the sceptre this year will be held out to Dr. Pringle or to give him his military title, Colonel Pringle. Colonel Pringle was born in Prince Edward Island, brought up in Galt, Ont., and educated at Queen's University. He has rare platform gifts and if he gets to the assembly memorable. Captain Mackinnon also has the power that moderators need, and can always give a good account of himself.

Forward Movement

The big thing to be considered this year is the Forward Movement in all the work of the church. The assembly will try to get itself pledged to raise $40,000,000.00 to be used in putting the enterprises of the church in this and other lands upon a strong basis of operation, and it also plans to double its revenue in the next five years, in every form of equipment. Much educational work along the line of this effort has been done during the year, but the big push is slated for he assembly of 1919.

The question of Church Union cannot come before this assembly, as that as last year resolved: "that further action will not be taken until the second assembly after the close of the war," and the assembly of 1917 resolved "that controversy on he matter or organic union be dropped by all parties; that no attempt be made at the present time to set forth in detail the action appropriate to a future period, but that the church wait patiently the new light which it may receive by Divine guidance through the growing experience of the people, and the lessons of the war." It will thus be seen that according to its own action, assembly cannot deal with the old question of union until 1921, assuming that peace will be signed this year.

Would not be Without Zutoo Tablets At Any Cost

Such is the statement of Mr. A. O. Norton, of Boston, the largest Jack Manufacturer in the world. His voluntary testimonial regarding ZUTOO follows:

286 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

"I have been a sufferer from Headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all the so-called 'cures' on the market. Some months since my attention was called to Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a 'sick' or 'nervous' headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effects. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from Headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I always carry Zutoo Tablets in my grip on the road and I WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT THEM AT ANY COST."

Maxwell—
A Car of Assured Reliability

THE reliability of every Maxwell is assured by the volume produced. One model quantity production involves the investment of millions of dollars in special machinery, plants, laboratories, etc., before a single car is produced.

Therefore, the basic design must be right—right beyond any question—before this special equipment is installed.

And after production starts absolute accuracy in every part must be assured to prevent delays, wastage, hand-labor—things we can't afford.

No tools are too expensive—no precautions too elaborate—to assure this result.

This was our original plan and it has been consistently followed in producing the 300,000 Maxwells now on the roads of the world.

It is the reason why of Maxwell reliability—economy—uniformity.

A car made right to begin with saves you many a dollar even after you buy it.

SAYS HOT WATER WASHES POISONS FROM THE LIVER

Everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it, before breakfast.

To feel as fine as the proverbial fiddle, we must keep the liver washed clean, almost every morning, to prevent its sponge-like pores from clogging with indigestible material, sour bile and poisonous toxins, says a noted physician.

If you get headaches, it's your liver. If you catch cold easily it's your liver. If you wake up with a bad taste, furred tongue, nasty breath or stomach becomes rancid, it's your liver. Sallow skin, muddy complexion, watery eyes all denote liver uncleanliness. Your liver is the most important, also the most abused and neglected organ of the body. Few know its function or how to release the dammed-up body waste bile and toxins. Most folks resort to violent calomel, which is a dangerous salivating chemical which can only be used occasionally because it accumulates in the tissues, also attacks the bones.

Every man and woman, sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, to wash from the liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, the poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleasing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Limestone phosphate does not restrict the diet like calomel, because it can not salivate, for it is harmless and you can eat anything afterwards. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, and any pharmacist will sell you a quarter pound, which is sufficient for a demonstration of how hot water and limestone phosphate cleans, stimulates and freshens the liver, keeping you feeling fit day in and day out.

THEATRICAL

CYRIL MAUDE AND LAURA HOPE CREWS IN "THE SAVING GRACE," AT THE GRAND, THURSDAY EVENING ONLY.

CYRIL MAUDE IS COMING TO GRAND

FAMOUS ENGLISH ACTOR HERE NEXT WEEK IN "THE SAVING GRACE."

Mr. Cyril Maude, and his supporting company under the direction of Charles Frohman, will play an engagement of one performance at the Grand Opera House, on Thursday evening, in the new C. Haddon Chambers Comedy, "His Saving Grace." Mr. Maude is well remembered here through his splendid performance in "Grampy" Since his last visit to this city he has made a tour of Australia in that play and has played a long engagement in his present vehicle, "The Saving Grace," at the Empire Theatre, New York.

Mr. Chambers' new comedy brings Mr. Maude forward in a type of character totally different from the testy but lovable "Grampy". Blinn Corbett, the hero of "The Saving Grace" is a full-blooded, genial, optimistic Brittisher, who covers under a cheerful exterior, an almost religious devotion to England and her traditions. This manner of man, so frequently to be met with among ex-officers of the British army, has been most skilfully transferred to the stage by Mr. Chambers and Mr. Maude. The character of Blinn Corbett, as played by Mr. Maude is a stage figure that will, undoubtedly live in the memories of playgoers as a distinct, and a very distinguished individual. No less truly drawn is the character of Mrs Corbett, which is delightfully played by Miss Laura Hope Crews, who is well known and greatly admired in this city. Other members of the fine organization that surrounds the notable star are Betty Murray, Annie Hughes, Charlotte Granville, Edward Douglas and Stanley Harrison.

"Turn to the Right" A Play With a Moral

ONE OF THE MOST DELIGHTFUL COMEDIES EVER YET PRODUCED

If the cumulative enthusiasm of the large numbers of enquiries at the Grand Opera House is to be accepted as an accurate index of popular feeling, Manager Dahn made no mistake when he decided to bring the big New York comedy success "Turn to the Right" back here again for a return engagement, for a big house is assured. The date of the engagement will be Saturday, May 24th, with a holiday matinee.

This really delightful comedy, with all it simplicity, its sheer human appeal, its rare upliftment, its cleanliness and its direct address to the better qualities of every human heart, will improve on second acquaintance. It is a play that any person can see again and find much that was missed on the first visit.

A Play That Appeals

"Turn to the Right" is not a great play in any sense of the word, nor is it very distinguished, but it has been argued successfully that it is a play that nobody can see without feeling better for having seen it and, to quote S. Moran Dowell, the dramatic critic of the Montreal Star, "of how many dramatic productions of the past decade could this be said in justification."

To repeat, more or less, what was said of this play on the last visit. Here is a comedy that takes you back to the days when life was simpler, purer, happier perhaps than it seems today, when wholesome sentiment was a thing of which nobody was ashamed, when it was not only a goodly, but a desirable thing to enjoy the unadorned beauty of life to the fullest free from the canker of modernism.

Kindly Philosophy

It isn't a pretentious play; it isn't high comedy, or great drama, or touched wiht satire or barbed with keen wit. It is just a plain every day story told with saving grace of genial humor, illuminated with kindly philosophy and an unfailing sympathetic note.

If you don't think you like this sort of a play then don't go to see "Turn to the Right."

If, on the other hand, you retain recollections of your youth which still have the power to move you, if you have known the beauty and the power of a mother's love, then be careful not to miss this play, and if you have seen it once, go back and see it again, for it will quicken memories that are perhaps sleeping and in it you will (like Antaeus when he comes to earth) renew the youth that was after all, the best time of your life.

"Turn to the Right" since the last visit here, has played to enormous business in the leading cities of the Pacific Coast, and will only play a few selected towns on its way back to New York City where it closes one of the most successful coast tours in theatrical history. Exactly the same cast will return here.

SCENE FROM "TURN TO THE RIGHT," SPECIAL HOLIDAY ATTRACTION, SATURDAY, MAY 24th.

Juvenile Play At Grand Friday

There has never been so lavish and adequate a production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" as that which Wm. H. Kibble will offer amusement lovers at The Grand, next Friday.

The scenes which are large enough to fill the most spacious stage could not be easily improved. Those representing the Ohio River in winter, the rocky pass in which George Harris protects his family, the St. Claire plantation, the levee at New Orleans, the cotton fields in full bloom, and the "Celestial City" are the most notable effects. Each pictures that reality as closely as paint and canvas will permit and the stage prospecting is so big that the effect is exceptionally pleasing. The company is also worthy of the environment. Gus Collins, the eminent minstrel artist, offers an excellent study of Uncle Tom. Special school children's matinee, at 3 p.m.

Dibney—Those are the noisiest chickens I ever heard.

Wife—well, they're leghorns.

ELSA RYAN IN "TEA FOR THREE"

HERE MONDAY, MAY 26TH DIRECT FROM ROYAL ALEXANDRA, TORONTO

Direct from a week at the Royal Alexandra, Toronto, Miss Elsa Ryan comes to the Grand Monday evening May 26th in "Tea for Three" the play which has made such a sensational success in New York, now in its 17th month at the Maxine Elliott Theatre there. In her new comedy written by Roi Cooper Megrue, Miss Ryan has a role eminently suited to her versatile talents. Very different from that of peg in "Peg O My Heart" or the little cockney girl in "Out There." It is a role which brings out saliently Miss Ryan's gifts as a comedienne. As the wife who, though sincerely in love with her somewhat stodgy husband, turns elsewhere for the attention she feels necessary to her happiness. Miss Ryan's performance is admirable in conception and satisfying in every detail. Norman Hackett, popular locally through several appearances lends his polished stage presence and splendid diction to the role of the bachelor friend who help bring about the happy solution of the triangular problem. Hayden Stevenson and other players render capable assistance. The play is in three acts and is handsomely staged by Selwyn and Company. Miss Ryan's costumes are dreams of loveliness and smartness.

RESERVATIONS ALREADY MADE FOR WILLARD-DEMPSEY BATTLE

Seats Worth $75,000 in All Are Taken by Fans—Principals to Begin Training Soon.

Toledo, O., May 17.—Reservations for seats for the proposed heavyweight title fight between Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey here on the afternoon of July 4 have aggregated $75,000, according to A. Q. Thatcher, matchmaker for the Toledo boxing commission, who is assisting Tex Rickard, the promoter, in arranging for the battle.

The tickets which it was expected would not be ready before May 22 will be delivered in Toledo today, according to announcement. This means that sale of seats will be under way much sooner than expected.

Dempsey Is Due Thursday.

Dempsey, who was expected to reach the city Wednesday, will not arrive before Thursday, according to the present schedule.

J. L. McLoughlin, San Francisco architect, who came here with Promoter Tex Rickard, has looked over the sixty acre Bay View Park site for the monster arena and pronounced it ideally adapted to the purpose. The arena, which will be started to accommodate 20,000 spectators and can be enlarged to seat 50.00 if demand for tickets warrants, will be 1,200 feet in diameter and of a height of 34 feet, according to the architect.

Expects Monster Crowd.

Rickard is in an optimistic mood and expects a monster crowd and a successful bout from every standpoint. He and Frank Flournoy of Memphis have opened permanent office and arrangements for the fight will center there.

Rickard arrived here yesterday and a announced that prices for the bout would range as follows: $10, $15, $25, $30, 40, $50 and $60, with 2,500 on sale at the highest named figure.

Rickard estimated, from the demand for reservations, that there will be 4,500 others ranging down to $10 seats, which will be 260 feet from the ring.

The Toledo Athletic club, the commission's official headquarters, has been turned over to Rickard and his assistants as headquarters for newspaper men.

Bids were submitted yesterday for nearly two million feet of lumber for the building of the arena. All material will be purchased in Toledo, Rickard said.

"Bat" Wants to Referee.

Battling Nelson, former lightweight champion, wired Rickard yesterday offering his services as referee for the contest. The telegram said:

"Open for position as referee of Willard-Dempsey bout. Price optional. Would do it for you for nothing. Put it up to Willard and Dempsey."

Rickard has not yet replied to the message.

Sporting Gossip

Washington and New York are having all sorts of trouble finishing games, but they are playing whirlwind ball. These clubs went fifteen innings to a 4 to 4 tie the other day. This makes twenty-seven innings the Yanks and Senators have traveled the last few days without decisive results.

Three times recently at Comiskey park were pitchers hit by hard batted balls. Shellenback was a victim twice. Galia was battered once—by Gandil in the third inning. Shelle seemed to be knocked out by Sloan's drive, which hit him on the shins in the third inning. Manager Gleason came running out to see how badly his pet rookie pitcher was hurt and patted him on the back when Shelle got up and went toward the slab.

A Washington scribe says Griffith intends getting some hitters even if he has to dig deep to acquire them. Griff had Chick Gandil and swapped him to Cleveland. It seems when Griff gets a good batsman he doesn't know what to do with him. If Walter Johnson had the Sox back of him he might not lose a game all season.

Dave Davenport, who finally won a game from the White Sox, has discovered the best way to pitch to Joe Jackson—pass him.

Jimmy Burke's new batting order, with Pep Austin back in the game as lead off man, seemed a winning combination and the two Jimmies departed from Chicago last night feeling pretty chipper.

Walter Gerber, a shortstop of the St. Louis Browns, made the greatest play of the fresh season at Comiskey park. It happened in the sixth inning. With one out Schalk singled to left centre and Kerr flied out. Leibold hit the ball over second for what seemed a sure single. Gerber, while on the run, scooped the ball five yards back of the base, wheeled and while out of position, tossed to Gedeon for a forceout, retiring the side. This play followed other brilliant ones by the shortstop.

Annual reports were presented by the treasurer, secretary convener of Sock Committee, Mrs. A. Wright, convener of one cent a day collections, Mrs. G. L. Hay. The treasurer's report showed that this had to be the league's best year financially.

Mrs. Gemmell, Mrs. Hay and Mrs. Parsons were appointed a committee to see what could be done towards having a proper swimming pool in Ashburnham.

Frank Comment.

Robert was a great admirer of soldiers and, having attended a military wedding, he was loud in praise. Soon after he was taken to see another wedding where all were in civilian clothes. At the wedding dinner he received a dish of ice cream full of fruit, raisins, etc. He especially disliked raisins, so he said in loud tones, "I fink this wedding and this ice cream is wotten—no soldiers or nothin'."

Fast Travel in Air.

By merely modifying wing curvature, airplanes of today could be made to fly at a speed of 250 miles an hour according to a British captain who is considered an aeronautical authority. The obstacle that this would present however, would be a minimum landing speed of about 150 miles an hour. Greater speed in the air is much to be desired, but no pilot is particularly anxious to bring his machine to earth at a rate such as that indicated.

Sweet Odors.

From the very earliest ages man has loved sweet odors. In the Bible we read of the burning of incense on the altars and the very word perfumery (under which head we may include all delicate fumes or smells) comes from the Latin fumus, smoke or vapor. The early Egyptians knew the use of the still, and adapted it to the separation of the odorous principal from fragrant plants, but the most ancient odors were drawn from natural gums, such as camphor, myrrh and cinnamon.

Oily Fruit.

A new fruit containing a large percentage of oil has been discovered in the region of Torreon, Mexico, and is known by the name of "chichopoxtle," says the Engineer. Experiments show that 25 per cent. of its contents consist of oil of great value in industrial pursuits requiring a lubricant of high quality.

Compliment to Immigrants.

Senator Garcia informed the Argentine Senate recently that the foreigner residents in Buenos Aires are 56 per cent. of the population, and added courteously that "if it were 70 per cent. it would be all the better for the country.

Sell Their Daughters.

In Turkestan every wedding engagement begins with the payment of a substantial consideration to the girl's parents. If the girl jilts her lover the engagement gift has to be returned unless the parents have another daughter to give as a substitute.

Ira Flagstead's home run smash at Detroit went over the score board in left centre, the first time the feat has been performed since Navin park was constructed. The blow nearly trimmed the Indians, who defeated the Tigers 8 to 5.

"Rose of the Wood" At Empire Theatre

A new Elsie Ferguson photoplay, released by Artcraft, will be shown at the Empire Theatre Monday and Tuesday entitled "Rose of the World," a dramatization of the well-known book by Agnes and Edgerton Castle.

In this subject Miss Ferguson will be seen in a role similar to those in which she has won her greatest triumphs on the regular stage. The press of the country has been flooded with praise by dramtic critics of Miss Ferguson's emotional work, and she is given wide latitude for the display of her exceptional talents in this direction in "Rose of the World." As Rosamond, the heroine of the story, she encounters incidents of such dramatic intensity that her hair turns white.

The story has a military atmosphere, and the role of Miss Ferguson carries much sympathy as the wife of a dashing young captain who loses his life in a heroic manner. In portraying the events that disturbed the life of Rosamond she rises to sublime heights of artistry. Her work on the stage as the star in "Such a Little Queen," "Shirley Kaye," "Outcast," "Margaret Schiller," and other successful plays, placed her on the top rung of the histrionic ladder, but all her past endeavors are eclipsed in the remarkable interpretation she has made in her latest film play, "Rose of the World."

Maurice Tourneur, the noted French master, produced the picture, which is the last word in direction and artistic stage setting. Many of the scenes are laid in India, and the different types of East Indians are accurately shown.

CALL AT THE DUFFUS GARAGE AND SEE THIS STARTER DEMONSTRATED.

Duffus Garage cor Water and Charlotte streets, Peterborough, has received from the Ford Motor Company one of the new Ford starters installed in a new Ford touring car and we especially invite all those interested to call and have this new addition to the Ford car demonstrated to them.

This starter is manufacured by the Ford Motor Company and built into the Ford car. It turns the motor over at the rate of 440 revolutions and will do this continuously for ten minutes.

The equipment includes combination electric headlamps with dimmers, electric tail and side lamps and instrument board.

One feature of the equipment to be considered is that the engine runs on its own magneto. Therefore the work of the battery consists of driving the starting motor only, which is extremely easy on the battery and enables it to furnish exceptionally bright light.

FIUME SENDS OUT NEW MESSAGE

REASONS GIVEN WHY CITY SHOULD BE CEDED TO ITALY.

The following message has just been received from Prof. Edoardo Susmel, member of the National Council of the city of Fiume.

"The population of Fiume is important not only from the viewpoint of its Italian population and for Italy, but also for those very countries which are deeply concerned in its fate, because they think that only an Italian Fiume can safeguard their ocean traffic interests. And so today it is not only we Italians, of the Gulf of Quarnero, as well as the Italians of the Kingdom, that are asking annexation of Fiume to Italy, but it is Hungary, it is the Republic of Ukraine, it is the very republican party of Croatia that are recognizing to Italy its rights upon the city and territory of Fiume.

"And he delay to come to a conclusion is irritating us very much. That is why two weeks ago the National Council of Fiume faithful interpreter of the unanimous will of the population, sent again to Paris a message of protest through which it refused any solution different than that of giving Fiume to Italy.

"Fiume is not only tired and exhausted of this delay of its passion. Fiume is painfully surpirsed at the uncertainty of the Peace Conference upon its destiny. The Quarner city believes firmly that there cannot and should not be any discussion on the right and will of Fiume. Discussions are useless before the firm will of a people that wants to be Italian, and arguing so becames superfluous before the case truly classic of self-determination of Fiume. It is no longer a matter of discussion. This is rather a matter of pure and simple sanction! Discussion would be necessary if Fiume had not yet decided about her future. Fiume is determined to act according to the principles of President Wilson himself and to the most valiant supporter of our right the true defender of our will should be President Wilson, whom Fiume had invoked since the early days of its liberation. Wilson cannot be ultimately against Fiume. If he were he would be against himself

"The port and district of Fiume are a separate body, connected formerly with the Crown of Hungary. Our right is old as history, because it was originated through the Roman municipal jus, and confirmed by the statute of 1530, by the special law of 1807 as well as by those of 1848 and 1868, and finally by the "statuto fiumano" of 1872. The right of Fiume is two thousand years old, and we cannot understand why our city should be handed over to a newly formed non-Italian nationality."

The Committee for the Defence of Redeemed Italy firmly believe that the will of the city of Fiume should receive first consideration, especially in view of the fact that both Italy and Fiume people are willing to grant the Jugo Slavs every facility for their commercial needs in that port.

BRANDON TO CALL GENERAL STRIKE

PRESIDENT OF TRADES COUNCIL IN THAT CITY MAKES ANNOUNCEMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Winnipeg, via New York, May 19. —President Baker of the Brandon, Trades Council announced at Union headquarters here that a general strike would be declared tomorrow at Brandon. The strike presumably will be in sympathy with the general strike in progress here. The situation here today was practically unchanged.

Ottawa to Take Action

Ottawa, May 19.—Word received by the Minister of Labor from Winnipeg, today is that the city is still quiet. The threatened clash between the authorities and the strikers which was foreshadowed in a message received at the Department last night did not materialise. The Cabinet Council will hold a meeting at noon, when the situation will be discussed. Senator Robertson would not say whether the Government had any proposition for a settlement.

Bolshevik Fleet Is Put To Flight

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Helsingfors, May 19.— The British warships engaged the Russian Bolshevik fleet in a 35 minute fight in the Gulf of Finland Sunday. The [Bolsheviki fled to Kroustadt after one of their vessels had been sunk and another stranded. The Bolsheviks were shelling the coast of Finland when the British attacked them.

MISSING SEAPLANE IS REPORTED SAFE

N. C. 3. LOST SINCE SATURDAY MORNING TURNS UP ALL RIGHT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, May 19. — The lost naval seaplane, N. C.-3, commanded by Commander Towers, lost in the mid-Atlantic since 5:15 Saturday morning, was today reported to the Navy Department proceeding toward Ponta Del Gada under her own power seven miles from land.

Change in Plan.

The N. C.-4 plans to start for Ponta Del Gada as soon as the weather permits. At 2:30 p.m., local time, the weather indicated showers. The plan to go direct to Lisbon from Horte has been given up because of a lack of fuel, making it necessary to put into Ponta del Gada. The aviators also desire to make the flight during daylight hours, which would be impossible if they started from Horta

Four Returned Ment Reach Home Tonigh

WILL ARRIVE AT G. T. R. STATION AT FIVE THIRTY

Mayor Duncan received a telegram this afternoon stating that four Peterborough returning soldiers left Kingston for home at 1.05 today and will reach the Grand Trunk station at about 5.30 this evening. The men are Pte. J. Gallagher, Private T. Bowles, Sergt. P. Boxall and Pte. J. Byers.

The City's Reception Committee will be on hand to extend a civic welcome.

Pennsylvania Federaion of Labor went on record for the sale of beer and light wines.

SOVIET GOVERNMENT NOW IN CONTROL IN WINNIPEG

Three Thousand Strkers Met Satuday Night and Declared For New Civic Regime—Methodist Clergyman at Head of Movement.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, May 19.—Special despatches received here today by roundabout routes from Winnipeg declare three thousand strikers met on Saturday night, and practically declared a "Soviet Government," to administer affairs in that city. This new government says a special correspondent was instituted without formality on Saturday night and is now practically in control. The leading spirit in it seems to be Rev. Wm. Ivens, former Methodist Clergyman and the new editor of the Labor News. It is stated that Editor Ivens is generally recognized as the brain center of the present movement, he declared all cities of Canada would shortly be regulated by a new form of government.

The seat of the so-called Soviet Government is in the Labor Temple just a short distance from the City Hall. It is stated that two city aldermen will be members of the Soviet Government. A Citizens' Committee of one thousand is also working, presumably to offset the agitations of the Soviet.

MYSTERIOUS MR. SMITH SAID TO HAVE WORKED ELSEWHERE

Lindsay Authorities Are Now Convinced That "Smith" Was Alias

The Mr Smith of Lindsay Produce Co firm is now credited by the authorities with engaging in fraudulent operations n other localities. The name Smith is now taken to be an alias to cover her identity.

The Lindsay Post recalls that on his arrival in Lindsay Smith gave h's initials as "S. W.", and in the next breath as "F. W.". In appearance "Smith" did not look like a man who was clever enough to pull off even the crudest "deal." He was entirely devoid of personality or initiative, and was anxious to avoid local publicity in the matter of his business activities.

All Smith's business with customers in the district was carried on through the telephone. His territory included Victoria, Ontario, Simcoe, Durham and Hastings counties, and he has victims in all of them. Eight merchants in Victoria county points shipped him produce and are today very much conerned regarding his whereabouts. The representative of the Barrie Creamery Co. states that his firm is out about $1,400 as a result of Smith's swindling methods.

As far as an be learned only one or two local concerns suffered as a result of their dealings with "Mr. Smith."

Since his departure it has been ascertained that "Mr. Smith" never accepted any produce sent C. O. D., so it can be inferred from this that he went into the illicit transactions deliberately. He kept under cover as much as possible, and always made it a point to evade intercourse with citizens.

During the winter a sharper pulled a somewhat different stunt in different parts of Ontario.

HAWKER'S SEAPLANE IS SEEN 50 MILES FROM IRISH COAST

London Receives First News of Australian Aviator Who Started Sunday on Journey Overseas From Newfoundland.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

St. John's, Nfld., May 19. — No word regarding the progress of the transatlantic flight of Harry G. Hawker, the Australian aviator, and Commander MacKenzie Grieve in their Sopwith plane had been received here up to 7:30 a.m. (6 a.m. New York time) today.

Hawker Is Sighted.

London, May 19.—Harry G. Hawker in his airplane has been sighted off Ireland according to an unofficial report received by the American navy here.

The Sopwith Airplane Co. have received a report that Hawker was 500 miles off the Irish coast at 3 p.m.

The News At Washington.

Washington, May 19.—Although it was said it was possible that London might get the news first, the Navy Department early today had not been informed as to the unofficially reported rescue of the crew of the seaplane N. C.-3, as told in a news despatch from London. No news from the N. C.-3, missing sonce early Saturday morning, when Commander J. H. Towers reported that the plane then was off her course about 300 miles from her destination, had been received at the Navy Department. More than a score of naval vessels which have been sweeping the sea since a short time after the N. C.-3 became lost and kept up their search throughout the night. High seas and foggy weather around the Azores have handicapped patrol work and increased the difficulty for the seaplane to remain afloat.

Rear-Admiral Plunkett on the cruiser Rochester at Lisbon has sent word here suggesting that the seaplane N. C.-4 join in the search this morning for the missing N. C.-3. This suggestion is believed here, however, to be impracticable, because the searching seaplane would be forced back by heavy head winds.

LIBERAL PARTY IN CONFERENCE

LEADERS FROM ALL OVER DOMINION GATHER FOR A CONFAB.

Ottawa, May 19.—No little significance attaches to the conference now in progress between Judge McKenzie, the Liberal leader, and the visiting Liberal statesmen from all over Canada. Two years ago, at the Dominion general election, the Liberal premiers gave no assistance to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and some even leaned towards Union Government. Today they are apparently lining up with the National Liberal party, with the possible exception of Premier Norris of Manitoba. Premier Foster of New Brunswick, who took no active part in the 1917 election, arrived at Ottawa yesterday afternoon and will join in the conference today.

There were two conferences Saturday between the Liberal members of Parliament and the visiting statesmen, and it was announced that the interchange of views had been most satisfactory. It had been arranged for one thing that a convention committee should be appointed, to be named by the various provincial organizations and to co-operate with the parliamentary committee in preparing the program for the coming national convention. This will ensure several of the provinces being well represented in the preliminary work of the convention which are practically unrepresented on the present parliamentary opposition.

Proudfoot Takes Part.

William Proudfoot, K.C., provincial leader of the opposition, who is at the conference, explained that he had a convention of his own on hand next month, and modestly declined to say who would be the permanent leader of the Ontario Liberals. He pledged himself, however, to do all in his power to promote the success of the national convention today for any practical purposes. The board may or may not be in session, and some members of it may be absent from the capital. At any rate supposing the board can be called together at a minute's notice, they are not given many hours to come to a

TORONTO FACES STRIKE LIKE WINNIPEG WALKOUT

Mayor Church Calls Conference of Trades Council and Aldermen in Attempt to Head Off Impending Crisis.

Toronto, May 19.—In order to avert, if possible, a general cessation of industry such as is occurring in Winnipeg, the mayor has called a conference between the District Trades Council and the city fathers for 11 a.m. today, at which steps will be taken by which all parties may come to an amicable and co-operative agreement.

Toronto is drifting toward a general strike.

Events of the week-end indicate that unless there is some radical change in the Labor situation within the next few days Toronto may be plunged into the chaotic state now obtaining in Winnipeg.

Saturday and Sunday witnessed a number of critical developments in the attitude of Labor. Meetings and conferences were held. The wires hummed with messages between Labor executives at different points throughout Canada and the United States. Votes were taken which, in the majority of cases, indicated that the local unions would stand by the striking metal workers to the last ditch, and railway shopmen have been asked to record their decision by tomorrow.

Situation Grows Tense.

The tensity of the situation grows hourly and international Labor officers are hurrying to the city.

Members of the local Federation of Railway Shopmen, which embraces all railroad workers aside from train crews, decided at a meeting in St. James' Hall, West Toronto, to place themselves at the disposal of the Metal Trades Council, financially and economically.

The meeting was called on the instructions of the executive of Division No. 4, who wired from Winnipeg Saturday night that negotiations between the Canadian Railway Board and the management of the Canadian railroads had reached a deadlock.

News Not Encouraging.

The latest news from the world of strikes is not encouraging. It was stated last night that all the Canadian divisions of the railway machinists have decided to walk out on Tuesday unless the Dominion Railway Board granted them an eight-hour day and increased pay. Such an action would not only affect Toronto but the whole of the Dominion, and practically close every railway shop from Halifax to Vancouver. The large C. P. R. and G. T. R. shops at Montreal will be badly hit, to say nothing of the Toronto works, or shops farther west. This determination on the part of the railway machinists has come somewhat as a surprise, and it practically holds a very big automatic revolver at the head of the Railway Board. The resolution passed yesterday could not possibly reach the Ottawa authorities before

STRANGER IN CITY DEFRAUDED MERCHANTS WITH BOGUS CHEQUES

Operated Under Different Aliases—Represented Himself to Furniture Dealer as John O'Grady of Indian River—Warrant Issued For His Arrest on Forgery Charge.

A warrant was issued Saturday by Police Magistrate Dumble for the arrest of a Toronto man who, under two or three aliases, operated in this city last Thursday and defrauded some of the local merchants by purchasing goods for which he paid with forged cheques in excess of the amount receiving cash for the difference. The stranger represented himself to one merchant as John O'Grady, the well-known cattle dealer at Indian River, and to another as J. Dunn, a stock man in Toronto and purported to be in the vicinity for the buying of cattle. The full extent of his local operations are not yet known, returns having been received from only two merchants so far.

The stranger called at a furniture store on Hunter street and told the proprietor that he was Mr. O'Grady of Indian River. He purchased $100 worth of furniture, being especially particular about some bed-room furnishings which he said were intended for his little daughter. In payment, he tendered a cheque on the Dominion Bank tor $125, saying that he had the chequed filled out to pay for cattle that he proposed to purchase. Without hesitation, the dealer handed over $25 n change.

The furniture was delivered next day by team to the home of Mr. O'Grady at Indian River and was, of course, refused. Over the telephone Mr. O'Grady told the dealer that he had no funds in the Dominion Bank but kept his account in the Union Bank.

When Mr. O'Grady heard a description of the stranger he at once recognized him as a man whom he met on the train from Toronto recently and who represented himself as Mr. Dunn, the Toronto cattle buyer. He made an appointment to meet Mr. O'Grady at the Munroe House here last Friday to discuss a business matter.

The same stranger called on a merchant on George street and bought goods worth $25 for which he tendered a cheque on the Dominion Bank, signed by J. Dunn. He received the difference in cash and took the parcel away with him, stating that he was on his way to his home in Toronto.

One of the most peculiar incidents in the whole affair happened while the cheque artist was on his way to Toronto. He accosted a citizen on the street and asked him if there was an express office at the C.P.R. depot and if he could send his parcel from there. That citizen happened to be no other than Detective [illegible] himself who recalled the incident and identified the stranger when the complaints of the merchants reached the police.

When the Ge[illegible] street merchants presented the cheque at the Dominion Bank and found that it was a forgery he used the telegraph wires and had the express company return his parcel which bore the address of a house in Toronto. The police of that city have been asked to arrest the issuer of the bogus cheque.

While he was in this vicinity the alleged cattle dealer made several trips into the country and it is not unlikely that he worked the same game on farmers who had cattle for sale. It is believed, too, that he defrauded more than the two local merchants in question, some business men preferring to take their loss without public complaint rather than admit that they had been victimised.

THIEVES CLEAN UP LOOT ON FARM IN MANVERS.

According to the Lindsay papers a portion of the loot secured by thieves from a farm near Lindsay has been traced to that burg.

It is reported that thieves made quite a clean-up during the past few days on a farm south of Lindsay and in the township of Manvers.

It appears that the raid was carried on during the night, when poultry, harness, clover seed, etc., were taken by parties unknown.

KEEP BRIDGE GIVE BACK MUNICIPALITY

ASHBURNHAM RATEPAYER SUGGEST SOLUTION OF BRIDGE TROUBLE.

The citizens of Ashburnham are much incensed at the City Council in regard to the high level bridge situation

One prominent ratepayer across the water offered a solution of the difficulty this morning by suggesting that so far as Ashburnham is now concerned if the city "gives back to Ashburnham its old village municipality privileges the Alderman can keep the old bridge."

"Ashburnham people are heart-sick and disgusted at Council's vacillating policy," this ratepayer added. "Britain went to war to uphold her honor embodied in a scrap of paper, and Ashburnham fully expects the city to maintain its honor in building a bridge voted for by the ratepayers and to whom it was pledged."

MONDAY, MAY 19, 1919

THE BRIDGE DEADLOCK.

SOME TIME AGO the aldermen emphatcally endorsed the lump sum plan for building the Hunter Street bridge. At their meeting the other night in committee they reverted to the cost-plus idea, and thus occasioned another hitch, a fresh exasperating delay in the proceedings. Still the lump sum men have apparently the majority, and that being the case, the lowest tender, that submitted by the Lowell-Townsend firm, is out of the running.

The Review has not changed its opinion, expressed at the beginning of the negotiations that so far have resulted in nothing, that it was desirable that, all things being equal, the contract should go to a local man or firm, taxpayers in the city. This, we believe, is the popular sentiment. Attention has been called to the fact that if an outside firm does the work, that firm will for the next two years be engaged in the most profitable enterprise in the city, for which privilege it will pay no taxes whatever. There is an anomaly in a law that permits anything of the kind while the man who engages in a temporary commercial venture in which he has no assurance of a handsome profit, but must take his chances, is required to pay a license.

Mr. Ed. Conroy, the one local man in the field, is the lowest tenderer on the lump sum basis, and the aldermen, committed as they seem to be for that plan, would appear to have a course plainly before them. Why not settle this agony of delay once and for all and award the contract to the lowest tenderer, who has the additional advantage of being a local man? Mr. Conroy is a contractor of long standing in the city and he understands the labor situation, something that cannot be said of the outside firm, who are not deceived by the action of the Council in setting the scale and the hour for a work day, this being a step that no practical contractor will be inclined to take seriously.

The men who oppose Mr. Conroy's receiving the tender set up the claim that he is already indebted to the city as a result of a contract which he was given something like ten years ago. That is a moot question which no one is more anxious to have ventilated than Mr Conroy himself. No business man likes to have such a charge held over him. If he owes the city $7000, a some claim, he is not only willing to pay it, but has made provision for re-payment, if the claim is established. He is backed up in his tender by one of the soundest financial institutions in the city, or in Canada for that matter. The security that he is prepared to furnish for the completion of the work according to specifications is gilt-edged. The city cannot possibly lose anything. The bridge will be built; work so badly needed will commence at once. The summer is already almost half gone, and hundreds of men are idle, their one hope for employment being the expectation of the erection of the Hunter Street bridge. Why, then, should the Council delay? Why should any alderman block the proceedings simply by refusing to vote on any motion that may be brought up in committee?

Another reason urged why Mr. Conroy should not get the contract is that the Smith street bridge, the greater portion of which he constructed, is showing signs of eventual disintegration. Mr. Conroy offers a practical assurance of his confidence that that bridge will remain intact for at least fifty years. He built the Smith street bridge, one of the first, if not the very first, concrete structures of its kind ever erected in Ontario, according to the plans, and his work was pronounced satisfactory by experts and accepted by the city. He says that at the time he was engaged on the work he called attention to a defect in the plans, but that in this he was overruled, and the specifications as originally prepared were faithfully followed.

Disintegration is one of the immutable laws that apply to all things mundane. Still, barring war or earthquakes, the Smith street bridge is likely to stand for half a century or longer. Even aldermen may show signs of the natural wear and tear of existence and may be drawing every year nearer to final dissolution, but they still have a chance of being spared for many useful years of private enterprise and public service.

If the aldermen make another flop and decide on the cost-plus plan, they have a tender before them sent in by a perfectly reliable firm which even guarantees the city fathers against personal financial responsibility as threatened in the overhanging injunction proceedings. There are thus two avenues open by either of which the aldermen can escape from their present tangle.

ONE MORE REASON.

AFTER DANTE had written his "Inferno" the populace, who were inclined to literally accept his famous work as a record of actual experience, used to point to him as he passed along the streets of Florence and in awe-stricken whispers say, "There goes the man who has been in hell."

The people of Peterborough can truthfully say the same of every veteran who faced the German guns in France or Flanders. The horrors of the late war are of a piece with Dante's picture of the infernal regions. And having escaped from the "Inferno" of the European battlefield, the veterans of Canada are not likely to be willing to repeat the experience or to consign others to such a horrible existence, even though it may be temporary. In the Bible story, Dives, enduring torturing thirst and the other agonies of Hades, asked that his five brothers still left on earth might be told of his fate and so avoid the punishment he was undergoing, a plea that is the one redeeming feature recorded of the man who had wasted his earthly opportunities.

The actual war is over and the peace treaty is ready for the signatures of the contending parties, but that war has left problems that confront the world today. One of these is the means that must be employed to prevent a recurrence of such a world-wide cataclysm. Another is the preservation of domestic harmony, the safeguarding of the very institutions of civilization for which the soldiers of the Allies made such sacrifices as mortal men were never before called upon to endure.

When all the men are back from overseas, Peterborough will have between two and three thousand devoted advocates of perpetual international and domestic peace. In their eyes strife between nations has lost everything in the way of glamour with which poetry and warped ideas of patriotism have invested it. The folly of it all has been proved to them by actual demonstration. The millions of men who passed through the Gethsemane of four years of war will be found to be the warmest supporters of the League of Nations formed to maintain peace for all time.

Peterborough's graduates of the school of war now ask the citizens for $15,000 in order to maintain an institution in which the lessons that they learned while wearing the King's uniform may be disseminated with profit to those who shuddered at the bare and inadequate records of what these men have endured. The veterans are worthy of support not alone for what they have done but for what they propose to do in the future. While life is left them they will constitute a class apart, men who, unlike Dantes, who only dreamed of the horrors of hell, have actually suffered them. Like Dives, they would save their brethren from the torture brought on humanity not as a result of evil doing but to make sport for paraoniac kings.

Every dollar given to the veterans' cause this week will help to build up a system designed to make the world better and safer as an abiding place.

A CHANCE FOR THE BABIES.

AMONG THE INNUMERABLE good works undertaken by the Local Council of Women for the general welfare of the community, none is entitled to more generous support, moral or practical, than their proposition to establish a baby clinic in this city. At last helpless infancy is to be given a chance for existence.

The horrible toll of death in the recent war is far below the mortality records in private life, when comparison is made on the percentage basis. The deaths of infants under the age of one year is simply appalling. Ten thousand is the record for Ontario. In the most critical stage of their lives, these babies have been denied ordinary care, a negligence due not so much to poverty or the want of parental affection as to a lack of information in the rearing of children. At least half the young girls of today who marry have had a business rather than a domestic training. When the duties of motherhood are added to their other responsibilities, they are unprepared for the highest task that it is possible for womanhood to assume. The children suffer as a result, and the alarming rate of early deaths remains.

There should be a remedy found for these conditions, for humane reasons. No one can fathom the extent of the agony endured by these victims of parental incompetency, and one of the aims of humanity is to prevent suffering among the helpless, especially those who are unable to voice their ailments, than whom there are no more pathetic examples to be found than among ailing children. Even the dumb animals today are protected by law, shielded from neglect and abuse more than are the juvenile members of the human family.

The clinic which it is proposed to establish will concern itself with the physical welfare of infancy. Trained nurses will be employed to visit the homes and to give inexperienced mothers instructions in the care, including the dieting, of their little ones, for it is a lamentable fact that a large percentage of the deaths of infants is due to improper nourishment. The best of medical care will be provide dfor those who may be unable to obtain it otherwise.

The percentage of deaths of infants is too high. No country can hope to increase in anything like a standard ratio its native-born population unless the death list of children is reduced. One child born, reared and educated in Canada is worth more as a national asset than five illiterate aliens admitted to citizenship.

MONTREAL'S HOSPITAL PROBLEM

To meet the present financial crisis that exists with respect to the Montreal city hospitals, some of which are closing down numbers of free beds for lack of funds, two steps are being taken.

There has been placed in all the clubs, hotels, and before all associations in the city, a petition to be signed by the general public. The petition begs the Admistrative Commission to place the whole revenue of the amusement tax at the disposal of the city's charities. It is an understood fact that the commission is in favor of thus granting the whole tax instead of a part of it as at present, but requires the backing of public opinion for the step. The circulation of a petition has been chosen by the hospital authorities as a method of testing public opinion.

A decision to refuse free care to patients residing in municipalities outside Montreal has also been made and a statement is being sent to municipalities in the province to the effect that after this date such municipalities will be obliged to pay for the treatment of their citizens who require free care in the hospitals of this city.

Outsiders Pay.

Unless municipalities outside Montreal agree to pay two dollars a day for each poor patient admitted to a hospital in this city, admission will be refused to their sick poor after May 15. Municipalities will be required to sign an agreement, promising to pay the charge of two dollars a day for hospital treatment of any poor patients, presenting to the authorities of a Montreal hospital a letter signed by the mayor and the secretary-treasurer, certifying poverty and asking for hospital treatment.

The statement which has been sent to the municipalities in the Province of Quebec outside Montreal emphasizes the deficits whch Montreal hospitals have thus far incurred and the necessity for putting such institutions on a sound financial basis.

"In 1918 every Montreal hospital conducted its operations at a heavy loss, the deficits ranging from $20,000 to $159,000," says the statement. "Every student of the situation must see that it is absolutely impossible to continue piling up such losses without facing financial ruin, and the consequent abandonment of the great work of helping the sick poor.

"But as hospitals are a public necessity, let us assure their continued existence by putting them on a sound financial basis. Let those patients who are able to pay for their treatment pay for it generously, and let those who are too poor to cover their own expenses have their hospital charges defrayed by their municipality.

"Such a system as this has been established by law of late years in Ontario, British Columbia, New York State and elsewhere, and has given excellent results. Why should not we in the Province of Quebec follow this good example?

"It is certainly just and equitable that the cost of hospital treatment for those who are poor should be borne by the fellow citizens of the patients rather than by the hospitals which are supported by the generosity of private givers and are beginning to sink under the burdens now imposed on them.

The situation in Montreal is serious in the extreme, for the poor of the city have to be treated in city hospitals and these are finding it difficult to care for these poor citizens and quite impossible to care also, free of charge, for the poor from outside municipalities.

Only Justice.

Consequently, it is necessary to advise these municipalities that in justice they must hereafter be asked to pay for the hospital treatment of their own poor.

"The undersigned hospitals have therefore decided that after May 15, 1919, they cannot accept poor patients coming from outside municipalities unless the municipality shall undertake to pay two dollars a day for each patient sent from it to a city hospital. It must be understood that even with this charge the hospital scannot undertake to admit all for whom application is made.

"Municipalities in this province which will engage in advance to be responsible for the cost of hospital treatment of their sick poor, as is done by many municipalities elsewhere, will be accommodated as far as the hospitals find it possible, but those municipalities that decline to undertake this responsibility are hereby notified that after May 15 their sick poor must be refused edmission to the Montreal hospitals.

"It is, we admit, a very painful alternative to have to refuse poor patients or to face financial disaster. Between the two, however, we cannot hesitate. In the public interest in the interest, particularly of the city's own poor, we have to preserve out hospitals, a share of the expenses incurred in giving their poor citizens hospital treatment.

TO-DAY'S STORY

"What's the matter?" asked the bride's mother, coming into the living room to find her daughter propped up with many pillows on the couch. "Are you sick?"

"Oh, I'm so glad you came over," cried the bride. "I'm all worn out. I've been doing the family washing."

"What!" cried her mother, in horror.

"It's a fact," said her daughter. "I couldn't get a laundress anywhere, so I just told Charlie that I was going to do it, and I did."

"How did you get on?"

"I had an awful time," confessed the bride, shifting a pillow. "I never thought that washing was so complicated. There were too many tubs. I divided the washing up as well as I could, but I couldn't fill the whole six very well."

Her mother opened her eyes, but refrained from comment.

"There was an awful lot of stuff," continued the bride. "I'm sure I never had that much at home. So I just picked out what I was certain we would need right away and left the rest till next time. But even then it was an awful lot. And the dirt wouldn't come out! And I spoiled my hands!"

"You poor duck,' sympathized her mother, "next time I'll show you."

"Why, they look perfectly lovely," cried the bride; "I got along all right by myself, and wait till Charlie sees them! He'll be so crazy about them. Come on out and see 'em," she added, rising with energy and dragging her mother down the hall. "They must be dry by now."

As they descended to the back yard the elder lady looked about searchingly.

"Why, somebody's taken most of [illegible]n for you," she said. The bride looked at her in amazement.

"Why, of course not," she cried. "There they are, over there in the corner on that line."

Her mother looked where she pointed and then considerately turned her back while she laughed. Flaunting gayly from a line strug ten feet in the air, her daughter's washing flapped in the breeze: four pairs of silk stockings, three blouses, two towels and one forlorn pair of men's sox.

The bride eyed the array with pride.

"Do you suppose I can get it all ironed tomorrow morning?" she asked.

Her mother regarded her gently.

"Well, Marjorie," she said gravely, "if you work hard and nothing interferes, I should think perhaps you might."

LESSONS IN RIGHT LIVING

By Dr. W.A. BRADY

Parents are still too prone to assume that sweet innocence lasts forever and a day in their children. Then, too, it is much easier to take refuge in such an assumption than it is to meet the truth unflinchingly and take the responsibility of enlightening children about life at the right time.

About the time of life when Santa Claus ceases to be saint and becomes just a kind of bad joke the stork likewise should become extinct. And now it is up to mother to instruct daughter and father to instruct son in the mystery of re-production. You can't leave children groping in the dark for light on this subject. If you do they are pretty sure to get the wrong light, which leads to disaster.

If parents do not feel competent to give children proper instruction along these lines they are indeed derelect of they shirk the duty altogether. The boy should be instructed by a man physician; the girl by a woman physicien. The subject should not be left to Sunday School teachers or any other amateurs. It is difficult enough for the trained physician.

The government is ready to lend a hand in this instruction. The public health service has issued six helpful pamphlets dealing with sex hygiene for persons of different ages, and one can get one of these pamphlets by addressin a request to the state board of health (if there is a live health department in the state), or, if not, then by addressing the public health service at 228 1st street northwest, Washington, D.C. Send for the pamphlet for which you have a real use:—

A—For young men

B—For officials and the general public.

C—For boys.

D—For parents.

E—For girls and young women.

F—For educators.

The average age at which boys receive their first sex impressions usually through improper sources, is 9½ years. The average age at which boys receive their first wholesome instruction is 15½ years. Parents are responsible if the instruction comes six years late.

Gassed in Closed Garage

"Please give directions now to resuscitate or restore any one overcome by gas fumes in a closed garage.

Mrs. J. E. P."

The fumes of gases given off from the exhaust if a gasoline engine contain considerable carbon monoxide gas which is colorless and odorless, but a deadly poison if inhaled in any considerable quantity or concentration. Artificial respiration by the Schafer method, which every intelligent person understands today, I suppose is the treatment. And Boy Scout knows this method. I'll send details if you care to send stamped addressed envelope.

Summer and the Baby

"My baby is 6 months old, breast fed. She weighted about 5 pounds 14 ounces at birth and now weighs 16 pounds. Other mothers are urging me to wean her before the warm weather comes or give her one bottle a day. Now I do not find baby a care, and I do all my housework and love house work. The baby receives the juice of half an orange and three teaspoonsful of thin gruel every day. Would it be advisable for me to wean her soon She seems perfectly well and strong. Mrs. F.M.E."

Keep on nursing for two or three months or for four or five more months if possible. Cleanliness, clean milk proprely refrigerated and clean utensils in preparing the baby's food serve to prevent summer troubles.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

NEW BLOUSE HAS CALL FOR FAVOR

Peplum Model in the Limelight Among Many Designs Being Shown.

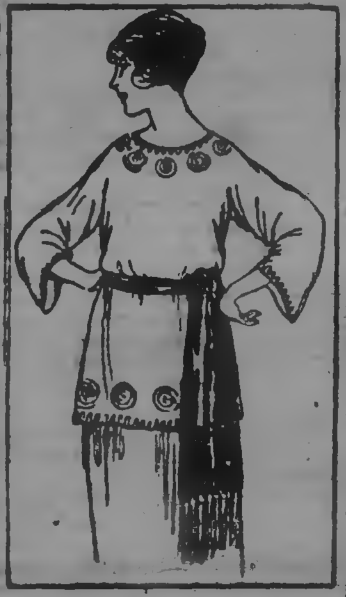
INDIAN TUNIC MADE OF KID

Pottery Ornamentation and Other Colors Add to Features of Garment—Fabrics That Have Never Been Considered.

New York.—The blouse is a sartorial robin. It heralds the approach of spring. It is the kind of accessory to a costume that both pleases and irritates. That it is usually wrong is the verdict of most women. When it is right it is very, very right, and that is the best that can be said for it, observes a prominent fashion writer.

Its possibilities for evil are not limited. Those who recognize that the neckline governs the appearance of the face know full well the chances for good and evil that rest in the collar of a separate waist.

There is no end to the making of blouses, as of books. No one can cavil at the paucity of these garments. Any shop in any town, at any time, is apt to confuse a woman with the multiple offerings hurled at her across the counter the moment she asks to look at blouses.



An American Indian blouse of dull-blue kid embroidered in a pottery design of red and silver. The sash of red satin is knotted in front.

These bits of the costume are the small change of the shopkeeper. They are taken in and out of stock, off and on the counter, throughout the different months of the year. They fill in spaces. They break the monotony of business which arrives between the periods of high pressure. It is not true that what a woman wants she can always get in this department of dress, but it is overwhelmingly true that whatever she says she wants is answered by an avalanche of designs, offered to her as the best and the latest.

Evil Possibilities of Blouses.

Of course, there are new fashions in the blouses this spring. They have been shown to women; they have been purchased for the unusually large exodus to the South, and they will appeal to the majority of women during the next four weeks, when one's thoughts turn to the rehabilitation of the winter wardrobe, or the acquisition of a new one.

There is no more paucity of invention in blouses this year than last. France and America have both done their best—and it is in this vast variety that evil possibilities lie. If women could be trained to regard the blouse as something fatal, unless well chosen, they would go about the business of getting together a half dozen with the precaution and precision necessary when walking on ice. They would not buy georgette because it is fashionable, tomato-red because it was the style, nor would they choose galloon embroidery, shoe-lace braiding or brass buttons because the designers had chosen to exploit these caprices. They would go among all the masses of waists with the precision of a bird flying to its nest. They would take the nearest straight line to what they want. If they did not find it they would go elsewhere; if it was not to be found in the shops they would have it made by a specialist or a seamstress from a well-considered pattern.

The part of a blouse that is very often fatal is the collar. There are few women who can stand more than two types of neckline. A woman should not rebel against this verdict She should accept it and thus eliminate trouble. She should experiment with blouses that do not carry either one of these necklines. She must remember that no blouse is worth its price if it hasn't the kind of collar that offsets the neckline of her coat. She must also take well into consideration the difference between a blouse which is to be worn as a part of a costume topped by a fur or cloth coat, and one that is merely a shirtwaist and part of a tailored suit.

These are not all the requirements for sucess in buying blouses. A woman must have, or must acquire, a true knowledge of the juxtaposition of fabrics. She must know what material in a blouse goes best with the material of her suit or her separate skirt and top coat. For instance, georgette, beaded in a bold design, does not go with a homespun or a cheviot suit. That is merely one example out of a dozen or two others that could easily be enumerated.

The truth about georgette—which is worth repeating because the fabric plays so dominant a role in separate blouses this year—is that it looks far better as part of a costume than as an addition to a coat suit. As a peplum blouse worn with a skirt of its own color, or in harmonious contrast to it, it is very good; not as good as satin or silk jersey, but commendable. It may be ornamental if one can adopt that type of blouse, and even trimmed with beads, which is a debatable form of ornamentation on a separate garment, but not impossible for certain types of women.

Because of the adoption of uniforms through the war there is a strong recrudescence of the tailored linen shirtwaist for women, especially in horizon blue, shrimp pink and dead white edged with color. These have tucked fronts, long plain sleeves, regulation armholes, turnover cuffs with link buttons, and the collar of a French student of the Second Empire.

Women have found that a rolling collar with a slight bit of starch, worn with a cravat, is an attractive neckline. Only the very young woman with a slim, smooth neck can attempt the high turnover collar, either starched or soft. Below a face that shows the marks of time this collar is impossible.

Blouses as Part of Costumes.

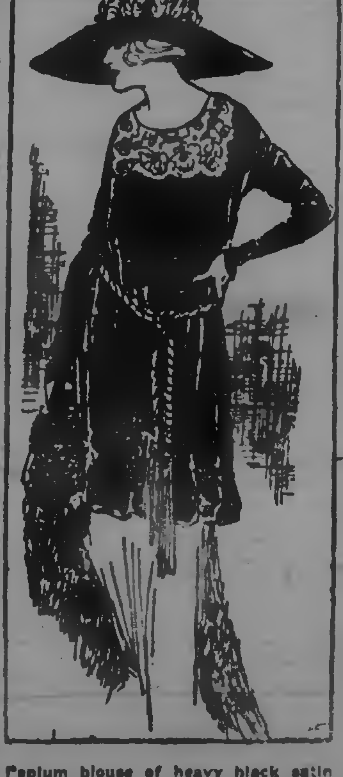
When the French designers made the peplum blouse and then sat back in watchful waiting for its success, which took long to come, they created something that was very worth while. American women see the light today, and they grasp with eagerness the possibilities of this outside tunic blouse.

It is difficult to persuade a certain set of women that there are other types of blouses. Nothing could induce them to return to the kind that tucks in under the skirt belt. They feel they have eliminated this awkward line around the middle of the body, and they choose all their blouses after the tunic pattern, whether for railroad suits or for service with a separate skirt under a fur coat.

It is sometimes permitted to tuck the back of the blouse under the skirt, provided there is a front panel that drops, apron-wise, below the waist, and an ornamental belt which runs from each side of it to the back. This is the most ingenious compromise between the new and the old blouses.

Blouse Inspired by American Indian.

Fabrics are now chosen for these tunic-like garments that have never been considered in the making of short shirtwaists. Kid, for instance. That is a material unheard of among the weavers as part and parcel of women's apparel. Yet the new kid tunic blouses, sent from France and copied in this country, are excessively smart and better liked by certain well-dressed women than the hip blouses of careful cloth worn during the midwinter. These kid tunics make a woman look amazingly like her Indian predecessors in this country. Colored skins are chosen, and on dark surfaces there is an ornamentation such as the Indians put on their pottery. Take a dark-blue kid tunic worn with a black velveteen skirt, have it ornamented in a pottery design in yellow and black and a thread of dull red and you get an exceedingly ingenious costume.



Peplum blouse of heavy black satin with wide flat collar of fine cream lace. The hem is turned under to form a puff. It is tied at the waist with a narrow dull-silver cord.

The milliners are quite willing to match up these kid tunics with turbans and the woman who likes to look like an Indian chooses a turban, not in kid but in taffeta, with upstanding quills painted at the tips.

COUNTING HEADS.

The First Census Was Taken by Moses in the Wilderness.

There is a record of a census in China as far back as the year 2042 B. C. and of one in Japan in the last century before Christ. Under the constitution of Solon the citizens of Athens were divided and registered in four classes, according to the amount of their taxable property or income. The Roman census was burdened with more statistics than any of these, however. It had its origin under Servius Tullius, sixth king of Rome, and was an affair of much solemnity. Every citizen had to appear upon the Campus Martius and declare upon oath his name and dwelling and the value of his property under the penalty of having his goods confiscated.

The most ancient statistical record of a census is found in the Bible. The census was taken by Moses in the wilderness, and, as shown by the first chapter of Numbers, the enumeration must have been very simple. "Take ye," said this account, "the sum of all the congregations of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names, every male by their polls; from twenty years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel; thou and Aaron shall number them by their armies." This census was an affair that must have been soon over, lasting no longer than a day, being merely a counting of the heads of the fighting men. The women and children and cripples and the old men were not included; "neither were the Levites numbered among them." Those who did stand up to be numbered totaled 603,550.

Shrub Perfume.

The perfume of commerce known as "cassie," manufactured for the most part in France, is found in abundance in the Philippine islands in the Acacia farnesiana, a shrub which grows on hundreds of acres of land near Manila and throughout the dry parts of the entire islands. This shrub has small spiny leaves and produces a short black pod. The flower from which the essence is obtained is golden yellow.

Not Up to Expectations.

Jane has often envied her small playmate who has a baby brother and she frequently expressed a wish for a wee brother, too. When her wish came true she was happily excited until she had seen him. Auntie noticed her disappointment and asked Jane if she was proud of the new baby. Wistfully the child answered: "I guess I is, but I think he is a size or so too small."

News in the "Ads."

A well-written advertisement is always also a news item. It tells what, where and for how much. It is the advertiser who speaks and it is the reader who gets the message. It is glad news for both. There is pleasure in knowing that you can part with something to supply another's need, just as it is a pleasure to know where you can get something that is much desired.—Columbus Dispatch.

Removing Old Putty.

A great deal of scraping can be saved, when putty is to be removed, by brushing over it some nitric or hydrochloric acid and leaving it for an hour or two. A brush that is of no further use should be employed, as the acid ruins it. The putty at the end of the time will be found softened to such an extent that little more than a wipe is needed.

ONE BIG UNION IDEA IS REAL CAUSE OF WINNIPEG STRIKE

Tronble Dates Back to Labor Meeting at Calgary After Trades Congress at Quebec

Winnipeg, Man., May 19.—Now that the true character of the local strike situation has developed it is of interest to trace back to its genesis. That was not the tie-up in the Winnipeg metal and building trades, as might superficially appear, but goes back farther, namely, to the convention of Western labor men held at Calgary in the late winter, when the idea of the "One Big Union" was produced and adopted.

The cause of that meeting avowedly was dissatisfaction on part of Western delegates and labor men generally with the results of the Trades and Labor Congress held in Quebec City a few months previously. The Westerners claimed that that organization was too conservative, too much under the influence of the less radical Eastern labor mem- was fossilized in its machinery and outlook, and could no longer be permitted to speak for Western labor.

It was proposed to make a clean sweep of the old system of collective bargaining as between individual trades and their employers and to replace this by the "One Big Union," which, working through a central committee would when deemed advisable, call a general strike in order to enforce employers to concede the demands of a particular trade.

Divergence of Opinion.

During the sessions at Calgary a sharp divergence of opinion developed, the Conservative minority claiming that the "One Big Union" was nothing more nor less than the I. W. W. camouflaged, and, further, that Canadian-born working men were not behind the scheme which owed its strength to foreign-born citizens, many of whom were enemy aliens. They protested especially at breaking down what they claimed was the valuable affiliation of Canadian trades through their internationals with the powerful American unions. For the root idea of the "One Big Union" is to cut loose from international control and set up in Canada for Canada alone a body of labor dictatorial in its scope and intentions and with before it the ideal of a Government in Canada of Soviets of working men to replace the present parliamentary system.

These ideas prevailed at Calgary, where the miners, the lumber men and the Pacific coast longshoremen were the chief bodies of support, while many of the smaller and more Conservative unions, such as the typographical, voted against them. The program finally adopted was so radical in its scope that the nearest analogy is the form of Government existent today in Russia. As active campaign of propaganda was at once embarked in, labor circles being flooded with Bolshevist literature. With some few exceptions the Trades and Labor Councils of Western Canada proceeded by vote to endorse the "One Big Union" idea, but in Eastern Canada it met with a cold reception.

Favorable Vote in Winnipeg.

In Winnipeg the vote was decisively and even overwhelmnigly in favor, the Typographical Union being almost alone in its opposition.

What followed is matter of recent history. A deadlock arose between the metal and building trades and their employers, neither more nor less than has arisen before. It is said that the men refused to arbitrate. Next came trouble between the street railway employes and the Winnipeg Electric Railway. The men asked that the present minimum of thirty-nine cents a hour be increased to seventy cents. The company applied for a board of arbitration but the men refused to appoint a representative or have anything to do with its sittings, now in progress, except when directly subpoenaed. Meanwhile a vote was taken for the general strike, culminating Tuesday night last. The "One Big Union" is now under trial in Winnipeg. It is significant that among classes called out and who obeyed are municipal employes, including firemen, whose claims were but recently settled on a basis that the men themselves declared satisfactory.

MR. AND MRS. RENWICK HOSTS OF GEORGE STREET CHOIR

Occasion Was Farewell and Presentation to Mr. C. C. Parsons Former Member Who Leaves For Whitby.

In the several years that the Renwicks have been in Peterboro they have achieved an enviable reputation for their hospitality. And to say that they lived up to this reputation in their entertainment of the George St. choir last Friday evening is putting it mildly. "The house is yours for the evening," said Mrs. Renwick when the choir arrived. And as will be imagined, such spacious hospitality brought a hearty response from the members. There was nothing formal to be gone through. Everyone could do what they wanted to, so the evening went with a rush. Music and games were rife and all went merry as a marriage bell. Spontaneity perhaps best describes the whole entertainment. All had a whale of a time.

Presentation to C. C. Parsons.

"Joy and woe are woven fine,
A garment for the soul divine."

The gladness of the evening had in it a tinge of sadness—a sort of a smile with a tear in it affair, for it was the choir's official farewell to Charles Parsons, who leaves shortly to take up his new position as manager of the Whitby branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

Charlie has had a close connection with George St. church, both as superintendent of the Sunday School and as one of the most valued members of the choir. He is a worker and has always been prominent in anything that might be undertaken from a corn roast to a concert.

And so in order to make the occasion still more painful for Charles and as a token of their appreciation, the choir took advantage of the opportunity to present him with twin thermos bottles in a leather case—just the thing for a picnic on the beach at Whitby. A more fitting gift could scarcely have been thought of, though we do say it as shouldn't, for Baby Parsons was the only member of the family who was already the possessor of a thermos bottle. The gift should therefore tend to keep peace in the family. An address read by Miss McKay accompanied the gifts.

Despite the unexpectedness of the presentation Mr. Parsons replied very effectively to the address and expressed something of the pleasure he had had in his associations with the church and the choir.

The air of sadness that always accompanies farewells was relieved to some extent by the advent of the deletable refreshments which, served at the lavish hand of Mrs. Renwick, were by no means a small part of the evening's entertainment. And it was with reluctance that we put up our umbrellas and fared forth into the night, for it was raining.

MOUNTED POLICE GO TO WINNIPEG?

RUMOR THEY MAY BE CALLED OUT TO MAINTAIN ORDER.

Winnipeg, May 19.—No announcement was made by leaders of the trainment, but the report persisted at union labor halls that the strike vote would be taken.

Union men linked this report with a rumor, wholly unconfirmed from any official sources, but much discussed in strike circles that a force of mounted police had been ordered to Winnipeg.

Winnipeg was quiet at nine o'clock. Some of the shops in the business district were open. The strike committee permitted partial distribution of bread and milk and a few restaurants were operating.

The leading hotels, crippled by the strike of their waiters and cooks are serving cafeteria meals to their guests.

Telegraph Tied Up.

Approximately two hundred telegraphers, employed by all commercial telegraph companies, brokerage firms and the Canadian Press Limited, will walk out at noon Saturday. The service of the other news gathering association in Winnipeg was discontinued, owing to the shutting off of the power in the telephone office though which the leased wires pass.

Thus the city will be obliged to resort to the courier delivery system if communication is to be had with the outside world, as the postal and telephone service is completely tied up. In all probability, communication between western and eastern Canada will not be seriously affected by strike, as it is expected that a sufficient staff of wire chiefs will remain on the job to cut all wires through local telegraph offices and keep them in working order.

For instance, it is contemplated to cut night and day leased wire circuits through direct from Ottawa to Regina, the service to be relayed thence to all western newspaper subscribers. Similar arrangements undoubtedly will be made by commercial companies for the handling of their business.

Minister Will Act.

Ottawa, May 19.—If there is anything he can possibly do to help solve the general strike in Winnipeg, Senator Gideon Robertson Minister of Labor, will leave for that city to conduct negotiations. Mayor Gray, of Winnipeg, has wired the Minister, asking him to come to Winnipeg. He has asked in reply if he thought he could do any good and if either the men or the employers would be willing to have him as mediator. If there is no likelihood of his services being availed of Senator Robertson is too busy in Ottawa to go to Winnipeg for a week or ten days.

Genius and Insanity.

Many of the men whose names we revere today in science, art, literature and poetry suffered from emotion disturbances, resulting in nerve storm or outbursts of mental violence which can only be described as supernormal mania. The poet Cowper had strong suicidal tendencies, yet he wrote "John Gilpin" when suffering from intense melancholia. Shelley had an insane ancestry, and at Eton he was called "Mad Shelley." Charles Lamb had to be placed in an asylum and his sister Mary stabbed her mother to the heart while insane. Wordsworth and his sister Dorothy are almost a parallel to Charles and Mary Lamb. At the age of thirty Coleridge was broken down and he died a wreck at sixty two. Southey came of an insane stock. The mother of Richard Brinsley Sheridan the dramatist, died demented at forty two. Pope was deformed and rickety and Keats was neuropathic to his finger tips. Byron's mother was unbalanced, and so was his maternal grandfather.—London Globe.

John Galsworthy Tells Why Soldier Needs Quick Demobilization

THE visit of John Galsworthy to this continent will be full of interest, not only to the general reading public, who have followed him as a novelist of the first rank, but to those who see in this writer an earnest student of contemporary social problems. It is hoped that the brilliant Englishman will pay a visit to Canada during his stay in America.

A new book by Mr. Galsworthy has just been published entitled "Another Sheaf." It contains a number of essays on various topics, ranging from war and readjustment problems to a collection of "grotesques," and including a chapter on Anglo-American drama. Among its most vital pages, surely, must be numbered those on which is discussed the return of the soldier to civil occupation. This is a subject of burning interest on both sides of the Atlantic. We face the problem here in Canada, and Mr. Galsworthy's commentary on conditions faced in England affords us a valuable point of comparison.

He considers first how the war must permanently affect those millions of men who were so abruptly thrown into it; discusses the physical, mental and moral aspects of the question. On the whole, he thinks, the scales will balance pretty evenly on the physical side. There will be a debit when it comes time to sum up the mental situation. Morally, there will, despite certain offsets, be a general increase of "character." It is possible here to give only the barest summary. But the pages devoted to analysis of these three aspects are extremely trenchant and lucid.

JOHN GALSWORTHY.

The writer then turns to the problem of the soldier's return. He declares:

"We have now to consider the rather deadly matter of demobilization. One hears the suggestion that not more than 30,000 men shall be disbanded per week; this means two years at least. Conceive millions of men whose sense of sacrifice has been stretched to the full for a definite object which has been gained—conceive them held in a weary, and, as it seems to them, unnecessary state of suspense. Kept back from all they long for, years after the reality of their service has departed! If this does not undermine them, I do not know what will. Demobilization—they say—must be cautious. 'No man should be released till a place in the industrial machine is ready waiting for him!' So, in a counsel of perfection, speak the wise who have not been deprived of home life, civil liberty and what not for a dismal length of two, three and perhaps four years. No! Demobilization should be as swift as possible, and risks be run to make it swift. The soldier workman who goes back to civil life within two or three months after peace is signed goes back with a glow still in his heart. But he who returns with a rankling sense of unmerited, unintelligible delay—most prudently, of course, ordained—goes back with 'cold feet' and a sullen or revolting spirit."

Germany's Dictator.

Although often referred to as a saddler and tanner, Herr Ebert, Germany's dictator, is really a journalist. In his early days he was apprenticed to a harness-maker, but at the age of twenty-one he became the editor of a Socialist newspaper, his articles in which attracted much attention.

A keen debater and clever politician, he has great influence among the organized workers of the Fatherland.

He now says that no true German would have treated the unfortunate Belgians as they have done. But it won't be forgotten that, when Bethmann-Hollweg proclaimed that "necessity knows no law," and that Germany was "hacking her way through Belgium," he was one of the Socialist majority which cheered itself hoarse.

More Merchant Vessels.

The total number of merchant vessels under construction throughout the world, excluding the Central Powers, on December 31, 1918, according to Lloyd's Register shipbuilding returns, was 2,189 ships, of 6,291,989 gross tons, or double the largest corresponding tonnage under construction by the world before the war, which was 3,446,890 gross tons in June, 1913.

U. S. SENATE AND THE PEACE TREATY

RECORD OF THAT BRANCH OF CONRESS IN SUCH MATTERS.

Washington, D. C., May 19.—With the time believed to be near at hand when the great peace treaty—practically global, as the peace conference expresses it, or world-wide in its effect—is to be presented to the Senate for the concurrence, a little review of the practices and customs of the United States Senate with regard to treaties may not prove uninteresting.

Public interest has not followed very closely the procedure of the Senate in such matters, because no treaties in which the general public has had an interest have been presented to the Senate for many years, and the practices of the Senate in regard to them have not aroused attention.

But now that the treaty which it is hoped will end war forever is to come before the Senate for concurrence, much interest is expressed as to the probable length of time it will take for its consideration, as well as whether it will be concurred in as it is, amended or rejected, or whether time will simply drag along without action in any manner.

Probably the question that is uppermost in the minds of the people is concerning the length of time the Senate may devote to the consideration of the treaty.

May Be Long Discussion.

In searching the precedents, it is found that treaties of peace have very generally been speedily concurred in by the Senate, while international agreement involving the relations of more than two nations have sometimes required a good deal of time for consideration. Some treaties have been before the Senate for years, while a few days has sufficed in other instances to complete the Senate's concurrence.

Had the treaty of Versailles come to the Senate merely as an agreement to end the war, it doubtless would have followed the precedents established by other peace treaties and a few days would have sufficed to record the Senate's concurrence. But carrying with it other matters to which it is known in advance there will be opposition in the Senate, it would be difficult even to hazard a guess as to the length of time the Senate will devote to it.

Little Time Lost.

Our first peace treaty, that with Great Britain, following the Revolutionary War, was signed before the present Constitution was adopted and it went to the Continental Congress for approval. It was concluded in Paris, September 3, 1782, and was ratified by the Continents Congress January 14, 1784.

The second peace treaty with Great Britain, following the War of 1812, which was written in Washington, was signed at Ghent, December 24, 1814. Its ratification was advised by the Senate on February 1, 1815, one month and 23 days later.

The treaty with France for the cession of Louisiana, which gave the United States practically all the portion of the country lying between the Rocky Mountains and the Mississippi River, was not a peace treaty, but serves as an illustration of the speed the Senate can make in such matters when it is so minded. The treaty was concluded April 30, 1803, when Congress was not in session. On October 17 Congress convened and on October 20 the Senate advised the ratification of the treaty, only three days being required for the organization of the Senate and the ratification of the Senate and the ratificate of the treaty.

The treaty of Paris, which ended the war with Spain was signed December 10, 1898, and the Senate on February 6, 1899, advised its ratification.

Germans Lost Mighty Fleet

WHAT has become of the mighty merchant marine of Germany, second only to that of Great Britain until July 31, 1914? A melancholy view of the events that befell it in these four years and a half is given by the Kolnische Zeitung. According to it, out of the five and a half millions of the total German tonnage about three and a half millions of tons were, in the moment of the war's outbreak, in foreign waters. Of this, again, two and a half millions were, for the time being, rescued from the enemy by seeking refuge in the nearest neutral port, whence, however, the ships could not emerge without running the risk of being captured.

This tonnage of two and a half millions interned in neutral ports, was divided among the different countries as follows:

Ports.	Tons.
United States	620,000
Portuguese	230,000
Dutch	180,000
Brazilian	239,000
Chilean	320,000
Spanish	207,000
Italian	170,000
Turkish	73,000
Argentine	64,000
Norwegian	50,000
Peruvian	43,000
Uruguayan	43,000
Mexican	38,000
Chinese	21,000
Greek	18,000
Siamese	18,000
Cuban	16,000
Colombian	15,000
Danish colonial	8,000

Of the remaining one million tons in foreign waters 8,000 were safe in Austrian waters, 550,000 were confiscated in enemy ports, 252,000 seized on the high seas and 65,000 captured in German colonial ports conquered by the Allies.

In the course of the war this situation changed rapidly. To the two millions of tons which at the beginning of hostilities were safe in home ports were soon added 125,000 tons seized in the conquered Belgian ports, 75,000 gained in Russia and 24,000 tons of originally German-owned shipping safely convoyed back from Norway. With the entrance of Turkey into the war the 73,000 tons in Turkish ports became safe, even though they could not reach home. In this way 300,000 tons were recovered. However, of this about one-third, 100,000 tons, were later lost.

As to the fate of German shipping in ports originally neutral the following statistics are given:

Totally lost.	Tons.
Seized on the entrance into the war of the United States, Greece, China, Brasil, Siam and Cuba	950,000
Surrendered to Spain and Holland by way of compensations for submarine sinkings	60,000
Lost through the acquisition of the Danish West Indies by the United States	8,000
Total	1,018,000
Conditionally lost.
Seized by Italy and Portugal prior to their belligerency, with German property rights not invalidated	400,000
Impressed into service, but not absolutely confiscated, by Peru, Chile, Argentina and Uruguay	225,000
Total	625,000

According to the German paper, the seizure of German shipping by Italy and Portugal, undertaken before these countries entered the war, was accomplished by a somewhat uncertain provision of international law. Such seizures, it is claimed, either leaves the property rights of the original owner unaffected or else must be compensated for by payment of money.

This would leave, according to the German writer, something like 750,000 tons of German shipping "untouched" in countries which preserved their neutrality to the end and refrained from the practice of impressing.

In safety.	Tons.
Home ports	2,000,000
Neutral ports	750,000
New construction during the war	1,000,000
Total	3,750,000

In foreign possession, with German property rights reserved:

	Tons.
Seized by Italy and Portugal	400,000
Seized in South America	225,000
Surrendered under Turkish treaty	65,000
Total	690,000
Total of shipping still under German proprietorship	4,540,000

Lost.	Tons.
Seized by original allies	834,000
Seized by belligerents of later date	950,000
Surrendered to Spain and Holland	60,000
Total	1,844,000

Of course the status of German shipping seized by Italy and Portugal is not quite so clear as the German writer assumes. The writer in the Kolniche Zeitung is himself aware that difficulties may be expected, as his resigned remark testifies:

"These statistical data demonstrate what does rightfully belong to Germany. What we actually will be permitted to retain the future only can show."

Mexican Indians.

There were roughly three settled national civilizations prior to the conquest (with a minor fourth, the Tarascan on the Middle West Coast, Michoacan). The Aztecs were a nation of bloody sacrifices, who had come down from the north some centuries before, and treated the far higher and more peaceful civilizations of Southern Mexico about as did the Goths in Rome, or the Manchu Tartars in China. Their civilization was about on the level with that of contemporary Europe in organization, and much beyond that in education; though they destroyed and never learned the best of what existed before them. But they were, and still are, says William Gates in World's Work, a warlike and "Tartar" race. Oaxaca, the California of Mexico, was the seat of a great civilization, of the Zapotecs and Mistecs, conquered in battle by the Aztecs but a short time before the Spaniards came. The Mayas of Yucatan are wholly different in race and character; they always have a smile, one never sees a scowl or hears a quarrel; but they are sturdy, laborious and tenacious of their nationality. The Aztecs were in course of conquering them when the Spaniards came. And the racial antagonism of Mayas for all Mexicans is extreme; they do not want them. Mexicans call treasonable the "separatism" of Yucatan; but Yucatecans are not Mexicans, and never have been.

Rodin's Mastery.

"After the war of 1870," writes a correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, "Rodin was a competitor among the sculptors who desired to create the monument celebrating France's defence. Naturally his proposed design was rejected. To-day, however, the dead Rodin is recognised as the greatest master of the century, and the old design has been discovered. It is suggested that it might well be called 'Verdun.' The trouble is that his model is not three feet in height, and although by the Colas process one can faithfully enlarge a small piece of statuary, the idea of doing so without Rodin to direct the operation and to add the necessary retouches before the work is finally cast does not commend itself to the majority of artists. Who will make these necessary corrections? It is a grave responsibility to meddle with the unfinished creations of a man like Rodin. Some natural feeling has been aroused, and although it is a pity to neglect a design which so perfectly expresses the spirit of the heroic defence, there would seem to be grave artistic and sentimental objections to the course proposed."

CHANCE GIVEN VETERANS TO SETTLE ON THE LAND

Returned Soldiers Will Receive Government Assistance For 25 Years After They Take Farms.

Considered from its special purpose, which is to settle the returned soldiers on land, the Soldier Settlement scheme is by far the best method that has yet been proposed for permanently settling the Prairie Provinces. Indeed, there is nothing that can, in any way, be compared with it.

Fifteen or twenty years ago the Sifton immigration policy was thought by some to be a veritable wonder worker, but all it did was to attract settlers to the country, the magnet being 160 acres of free land, which could be acquired through the performance of homestead duties that could not be considered onerous. But the Sifton policy practically abandoned the settler, after he had reached his destinaion. After that point was reached there was no helping hand.

The Soldier Settlement Scheme will render the returned man assistance for as long as 25 years after he goes on the land. This is one of its principal merits. Not only does it give him a start, but it sustains him, not hrough chaifty, but through a well thought out system of credits by means of which everything needed to the settler may be purchased and paid for over a long terms of years.

Take the case of a returned man who has been fortunate enough to secure a homestead. He may borrow from the Board $3,000 for the purchase of additional land, for buildings or livestock and equipment. This loan he may repay in equal annual instalments extending over 25 years. Nor eed anything be paid for the first two years.

If a returned man cannot secure a suitable homestead he may buy from the board land up to 320 acres, the maximum amount owing not to exceed $4,500. He may also borrow from the Board another $2,000 for the purchase of livestock, implements and building materials, and he may also get another $1,000 for permanent improvements. This he may repay in 25 equal instalments.

Provision has also been made whereby the settler may yet the best quality of livestock at cost; also harness, implements and lumber at greatly reduced prices. If he does not even know how to farm, but is a likely looking fellow, the Board will arrange to give him training In order that nothing really necessary may be lacking, three types of standard houses suitable for life on the prairies have been designed and ma be built at the minimum of cost.

These arrangements supply the necessary quality of permancy which has hitherto been absent from our land settlement policies. That the west is no more settled than it is, is not due to the fact that people have no gone into the Western provinces, but that too man have not stayed there. They have simply gone through it like a sieve. Large numbers have gone out of the country because they had nothing to sustain them over a few bad years. The returned man taking up land under the Soldier Settlement Scheme will be sustained in a way so that he may come throuhg lean years.

LICENSES ENDANGERED

Reduction Might Follow Referendum VOTE

Hotelkeepers who have been "carrying on" in the hope that the referendum vote will bring back the sale of light wines and beer to the Province now learn that in all probability such an event would be accompanied by a very considerable reduction of the number of licenses issued as under the old Ontario Liquor License Act. While it was urged at the time the Ontario Temperance Act went into force that the hotelkeepers who continued to keep "standard hotels" be considered should the license system return, no such assurance was given by the Board of Commissioners. It is thought that in some of the smaller towns, for example one license would meet the same demand which three or four met under the old License Law.

FIRST MAN WAS APE-LIKE BRUTE

PROFESSOR STARR SAYS ADAM WAS NOT THE ADONIS PICTURED.

Prof. Frederick Starr of the University of Chicago, addressing an audience the other day, asserted the first man was not the handsome specimen that Adam is represented, but an ape-like brute, distinctly human, but with a thick skull and a powerful jaw. He called the first man the "Java man" and said he lived 425,000 years ago.

The first human inhabitants of the earth were undoubtedly religious, despite theological theories, and a part of their religion was to cut off their fingers as sacrifices, he said. The cross probably is as ancient a symbol as the first art, which, he said, dates far back into the glacial epochs.

Prof. Starr stated the first human beings in Europe, probably living in Germany, were ape-like negroes, five feet two inches tall, with "disharmonic faces possessing terrible brutal characteristics. They drooped when they walked, dragging their feet behind them, were of sluggish mentality, but were human beyond doubt. He called them the "neandrical type."

He described the Pittdown man also a prehistoric inhabitant of Germany, as a creature also of the "disharmonic type," when seen from the front, which appeared to have five sides. He also told of the "Heidelberg type," identified by a peculiar jaw bone unlike any human of today which was found years ago. Reverting to the first man, the "Java man." Prof Starr said he was of the type expressed in a skull and parts of a skeleton which were unearthed in Java in 1907.

HAMILTON FACED WITH BIG STRIKE

LABOR LEADERS SAY EIGHT-HOUR DAY WILL BE ENFORCED.

Hamilton, May 19.—That Hamilton is threatened with a general strike, similar to the Winnipeg tie-up, to force the eight-hour day issue, was the assertion of prominent labor leaders. A canvass of union labor leaders will be completed this week. The machinists and blacksmiths will probably be out by Monday and that the pattern makers are prepared to quit.

The outside city employes, who enforced their 7 hour demand by a two day strike have returned to work.

The children entitled to benefit will be those of Saskatchewan soldiers who at the time of their enlistment were residents of this Province. They will be children who have reached sixteen years of age of deceased or totally disabled soldiers. The asistance will continue not longer than three years from the date of the acceptance of the applicant by the commision, and will in no case exceed the sum of $240 for the scholastic year dating from September 1 of June 30.

HOW CANADA IS OVER-GOVERNED

(Bowmanville Statesman.)

Canada is over-governed, over-represented, over-taxed and over-officered from the Governor-General's Department to the village municipality. Often, two or three persons are employed where one could do the work or perform the duties. The Governor General has his secretary The secretary has his deputy. The Controller of the Household has his staff of assistants. Aides-de-Camp include a small army of military dignitaries. The cost of keeping up this branch is enormous, but Canada pays the bill and smiles. Then comes the Cabinet. The Prime Minister, salary $12,000, and some 17 other ministers at $7,000 each and they have a retinue of deputies and other officers at big salaries, besides stenographers, etc., etc. Next comes the Senate, sessional indemnity, $2,500 each and there are 90 odd members and over 20 permanent officers at salaries ranging from $5,000 down to $1,300 for a messenger. Why is it necessary to have 96 members and a big retinue of officials in the Senate, we have never been able to understand. Canada would get along just as well without a Senate. Anyway, seven to fifteen clever men would be sufficient for all requirements, so far as we understand them. House of Commons, 230 members, sessional allowance $2,500 each, with an army of officers from Clerk of House at $5,000 down to Housekeeper Aubrey at $1,000. The army of civil servants, needful and others there through having a pull, is an immense throng. What actual need can there befor 230 members? The Dominion would be amply represented by 100 able members. Now they are agitating for increased indemnity, making it $3,500. What an audacious piece for highway robbery If $2,500 and free railway travel all the year round and various perquisities and allowances are not sufficient, the members should resign their seats as an indignant protest against the abject of penury, of which they are the victims. When you figure out the cost to Canada of the Commons, take up the Departments where another army of officials and civil servants are employed ranging from $10,000 down and the question will force itself upon such armies of high-salaried representatives and officials?

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

TRY GRANDMOTHER'S OLD FAVORITE RECIPE OF SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago tha only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the additions of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

definite decision, as the men are apparently determined to stand by their resolution to cease work on Tuesday.

If the board should fail to satisfy the men's demands, forty thousand machinists will strike and over four thousand men will be added to Toronto's band of strikers. The decision of the board will be awaited with some anxiety.

The much advertised trade unionist procession and meeting Saturday could hardly be called a big success. It was said by those interested in its organization that at least ten thousand would participate in the meeting. Whether it was the baseball at the Island, the opening of Scarboro Beach, or the want of unanimity amongst the unions, it would be difficult to say, in accounting for the smallness of the attendance. There were not more than two thousand in the procession and five thousand would amply account for those in the park. In the procession was a large proportion of foreigners—they may be Canadians by residential qualifications but they were of foreign origin just the same. This fact may account for the comparative smallness of the attendance, as many of the trade unionists belonging to the older and substantial unions are daily raising a voice against the methods and open violent language some of these men are advocating. The foreign element in the trade unionist council for some time past have been gaining steadily in influence by the simple process of making much noise and gaining in strength by the non-attendance at the council meetings of the more conservative "regular method" men.

HAWKER STARTED SUNDAY ON AIR TRIP TO EUROPE

Commander Grieve Accompanies Him as Navigator—Carry Supply of Food For Three Days.

St. John's, Nfld., May 19.—Sopwith machine with Harry Hawker pilot and Commander MacKenzie Grieve of Royal Navy as navigator, started on its transatlantic trip Sunday afternoon. The official time of the take-off was seventeen forty-five Greenwick, or three fifteen local time. The weather was perfect at Mount Pearl Airfield, with the wind northwest and the sky cloudless.

Some flyers, present, considered the conditions perfect, and after getting the desired altitude, the machine headed cityward, the airdrome being five miles west of St. John's, and passed directly over the town and past the Quidi Vidi airfield, where the Martinsyde machine was awaiting a change of wind to start, and where thousands of people were awaiting the Martinsyde ascent, because nearer city, and where they enjoyed an unequalled view of the speeding flyer. The machine then crossed the hills and disappeared. The signal station held her in view for ten minutes and they they lost her also. She carried practically only the outfit with which she was provided.

Important Changes.

The Sopwith machine made several important changes during the past week. The four-bladed propeller, originally affixed, was removed, and a two-bladed instrument substituted, partly because Pilot Hawker believed the strain of the four-bladed propeller was too great for the engine, and partly to lessen the chances of trouble when landing in the British Isles. Hawker proposes to drop her wheels off the coast and, therefore, when landing, must risk crashing to the ground. Small steel rails or skids have been provided to help to less the danger in such case, through the agency of which, if favorable conditions are met, the machine may glide along the ground and thus come to a stop. But with a four-bladed propeller revolving, the difficulty of the machine reaching a standstill without the propellers causing damage would be very great. The substituting of the two-bladed propeller lessens this materially.

The Martinsyde machine carries only a two-bladed propeller, and will also bring her wheels across the Atlantic, consequently her two-bladed propeller was not fixed with the same object, but from the outset Pilot Raynham considered this propeller preferable to the other, because of the lesser strain in a long-continued flight.

No Sending Wireless.

Neither machine carries sending wireless, both relying on the sight of ships and on getting their position from them to correct their reckoning. Both airplane crews garbed themselves warmly with jerseys and mufflers before leaving the hotel, and carried full supplies of food for three days.

As Hawker and Grieve entered their machine they received many hearty handshakes and farewells, and as the plane started upward the onlookers cheered vigorously. The machine made a rather long run along the ground before rising, then rose to about 2,000 feet, and then struck due east for Ireland. Hawker's plans were to follow Raynham if the latter got the foremost position and keep him in sight the whole way across, if possible, but Hawker having now secured what seems a good lead will probably disregard plan of diverting to the steamship track 400 miles east of St. John's, for the purpose of keeping in touch with passing vessels. Raynham plans to fly in a direct line for Ireland, disregarding all else.

ELSA RYAN IN "TEA FOR THREE" AT THE GRAND MONDAY, MAY 26

"BILLETED," COMEDY WITH SPICY WAR FLAVOR ADDED

Margaret Anglin Will Present Brilliant English Play at Grand, Tuesday Next Week.

No attraction this season has enlisted the widespread attention which is just now being accorded to the forthcoming engagement of Margaret Anglin in her brilliant English comedy "Billeted," which is announced for Tuesday, May 27, at the Grand Opera House.

"Billeted" is the work of F. Tennyson Jesse and H. N. Harwood. It ran for upwards of a year in London, and Miss Anglin played a three months engagement with it in New York where it might have remained for a long period had it not been for Miss Anglin's previously contracted bookings in Chicago and Boston.

It is only in the broadest sense of the term that "Billeted" is to be regarded as a war play, for the shadow of the great struggle falls lightly upon it. It is essentially light entertainment and deals with some aspects of the war from a farcical standpoint rather than a dramatic. It is a brilliant comedy with a war flavor added by way of spice. The billet in question is at the home of a woman whose husband had deserted her several years before the rise of the curtain. The action of the story passes in a small English village and the circumstances set the village tongues a wagging. The wandering husband turns up as one of the officers to be billeted, and then the complications pile upon each other in rapid succession until the fall of the final curtain when the husband and wife find themselves again in each others arms, and there is a second romance in the household to make the billeting a thorough success.

In the central character Miss Anglin has a part which calls on her highest powers as a comedienne, and just now—as perhaps always—a laugh is more useful than tears.

In his review of the performance James Metcalf, the well known critic wrote in N. Y. Life: "Miss Anglin in "Billeted" has a role in which she certainly makes us forget the meatless, wheatless, coalless, drinkless, days and the dread possibilities of the new tax laws."

The comedy is staged in a most unusual and artistic manner and acted by a praise-worthy company including Alice Cobern, Sally Williams, Harry Barfoot, Phyllis Birkett, Langdon Bruce, Fred Eric, Myra Burrington and Ralph Kemmet.

CYRIL MAUDE NO STRANGER HERE

IN CANADA IN EARLY LIFE IN SEARCH OF HEALTH.

Mr Cyril Maude, the distinguished English actor, at the Grand, Thursday evening, who is this season making a tour of the United States in Haddom Chambers' new comedy "The Saving Grace," is by no means a stranger to this country. The fact is that although Mr. Maude has spent most of his career in London he actually began his life as an actor in America. Ill health compelled him to leave England when a boy in his teens and his travels in search of health took him first to Australia, then to Canada, then finally to Colorado.

"My first experience in America," says the actor, "was with a barnstorming organization in the early 80's. The star of the company was Daniel Bandmann, and we toured what at that time was called the terrible west. I made my first appearance with the company a Denver playing a small part in "East Lynne" We played Shakespeare in Leadville, Butte, Missoula and Walla Walla, all the way to Portland and Tacoma. I often appeared in four parts in 'Hamlet' I none night. I used to make quick changes from Marcellus to Bernardo, Rosecrantz and the second gravedigger in rapid succession. We finally arrived in San Francisco and played at a theatre popularly described as the Missionstreet Morgue and there we appropriately died. I went back to New York in an emigrant train. The trip took nine days, and I divided the time between talking to the Chinese passengers and watching a man with a horribly fascinating hook instead of a hand. I soon sailed for home filled with a determination to henceforth confine my endeavors in the histronic art ot the stafe of my own country, and bearing a not overpleasant impression of the manner in which the Americans conducted their theatrical business. But it was not long before I learned, to my surprise and sorrow that there were wabbly managements in England, and then I made up my mind that I was quite wrong in having judged the whole by one. The delightful experiences of my recent visit to America have atoned a thousand times for my first unhappy adventure on their stage.

NOTABLE SCENES IN FAMOUS PLAY

Among the notable scenes of Wm. H. Kibble's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which is to be at the Grand, Friday, with a special children's matinee at 3 o'clock, is the St. Claire home, showing the tropical garden with its fragrant magnolia and orange trees among which nestles the typical Southern plantation residence; the home of Little Eva; Legree's cotton plantation on the Red River with the cotton in full bloom; the wild rock pass in Southern Ohio, and the ice choking the Ohio River by moonlight. The transformation entitled "The Celectrial City" is said to be the most magnificent tableau ever conceived. In offering his revival to our city, Wm. H. Kibble not only claims that the scenic effects are superior to any ever attempted but honestly assures the prospective patrons that the Company is composed of the most capable talent obtainable.

CYRIL MAUDE and LAURA HOPE CREWS, in "THE SAVING GRACE", at the Grand Thursday evening.

From Church Choir To The Footlights

Behind the naturalness and sincerity which characterizes the portrayal of Joe Bascom, the erring son, in "Turn to the Right," which comes to the Grand, special holiday attraction, for Saturday, May 24th, may be found a page from the boyhood of Joseph Striker, the young actor to whom Winchell Smith and John L. Golden have entrusted the leading role of their dramatic comedy-drama this season.

Mr. Striker made his first public appearance as a choir boy in Christ Church, Brooklyn, during the pastorate of Mr. Darlington, some years back, and for a time he planned to enter the ministry. The gentle religious spirit which the authors have woven into "Turn to the Right" with an honest-hearted but wayward boy as one of the central figures, is quite in keeping with the sympathies of the young actor, which is a factor in his earnest and lovable handling of the role.

When he abandoned his pulpit ambition, Mr. Striker seied upon law as a sort of compromise and enrolled in the Washington School of Law. Though he completed the course and was graduated, Blackstone was cast aside when the stage beckened and for several years appeared with distinction with the Washington Square Players, New Work, and with B. Iden Payne in his English repertoire company at the Fine Arts Theatre, Chicago. He was prominent in the New York productions of "Nearly Married" and "Seven Keys to Baldpate" and for three seasons starred in his own sketches in vaudeville.
